NOTES

Phantasie, Op. 49

The Phantasie in F Minor, Op. 49 was composed and published in Paris in 1841. It represents a mature Chopin with its unity of structure and economy of thematic material. The piece was composed on a large canvas with strong passion, melodies of unsurpassed nobility, and a formal beauty that is dramatic and grand. Themes are developed and unified from seemingly unrelated material, demonstrating Chopin's talent and inventiveness. The Phantasie, although neglected for many years, has become a staple of the pianist's repertoire.

Sonata II, Op. 35

Chopin was not comfortable working within the confines of sonata form. His ideas did not bend easily to the restrictions of exposition, development, and recapitulation. He wrote three sonatas, the first of which was an awkward student attempt. Although it is magnificent music, Sonata II does not adhere strictly to sonata form, but rather resembles a collection of dramatic tone poems. The passionate first movement is constructed of two contrasting themes. Although the development section expands both of these themes, only the lyrical second theme reappears in the recapitulation. The Scherzo is fiery and technically dramatic with a contrasting lyrical Trio. The third movement is unusual in that it is a funeral march constructed on a few simple chords. It is distinctly unrelated to the first two movements. The fourth movement, or Finale, is the most unusual of all, consisting of unison triplet passagework that moves chromatically and through various chord progressions. Special effects are created with the use of pedal and pianissimo dynamic markings giving the piece an eerie sensation of sinister wind blowing across the newly marked grave.

Sposalizio

Années de Pèlerinage, Deuxième Année, published in 1858, is a collection of pieces written by Liszt during a stay in Italy in 1838. The pieces are inspired by various works of art such as painting, sculpture, poetry and song. Sposalizio, or Betrothal, is the first piece of the set. It was inspired by a painting by Raphael depicting the betrothal of Mary to Joseph. The piece is poignantly expressive, speaking eloquently of sacred love that is both reverent and passionate.

Transcendental Etude, No. 10

The Transcendental Etudes are demanding pieces that test the pianist's technique and endurance. They were written in 1827, rewritten and expanded in 1839, and rewritten again in 1852. The etude being performed tonight is from the 1852 revision. It is one of the two of the etudes that do not have programmatic titles. It is characterized by driving rhythms and powerful textures.

Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 10

The Hungarian Rhapsodies were published between the years 1851 and 1854. Contrary to their title, they are not representative of Hungarian nationalism, but rather are a mixture of gypsy music and Italian clichés. They are both transcription and fantasy. Rhapsodie, No. 10 with its majestic opening theme, is representative of Liszt’s talent for thematic transformation and technical bravura.

Grand Galop Chromatique

The Grand Galop Chromatique, composed in 1838, was written purely for performance rather than for profound posterity. Often thought of by music critics as vulgar music lacking true substance, the piece represents Liszt’s fascination with technical brilliance and fantasy. It was used often as a closing number to his many concerts, and was aimed towards pleasing the audience. Demanding stamina and endurance from the performer, the Galop possesses a humorous quality in the nature of a caricature. It even boasts a respite of one measure near the end to help the performer gear up for the exuberant finish. Hang on and enjoy the ride.

George Frederick Handel (1685-1759) composed the opera Atalanta in 1836 specifically to entertain Frederick, the Prince of Wales, on the occasion of his marriage to Princess Augusta of Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha. Care selle remains the only familiar aria from the larger work.

TRANSLATION:
Beloved woods, blessed shadows, I come in search of my love!

Written in 1727 during the composer’s “Academy Period,” Admeto presented Handel with the extra challenge of balancing starring roles between rival sopranos Cuzzoni and Faustina. The strongly-diatonic harmonies and strong rhythms of Cangio d’aspetto remind the listener of Handel’s gift for connection of emotion to music.

TRANSLATION:
Cruel destiny has changed its aspect, and in my breast complete happiness is reborn.

The setting for Don Carlo, by Giuseppe Verdi (1813-1901), is 16th-Century Spain during the Inquisition. In Per me giunto Rodrigo assures the Prince Don Carlo—who has been imprisoned—that he will help him escape, though it will cost him his own life.

TRANSLATION:
It is I, dear Carlos. You are about to leave this ghastly tomb. I am glad to embrace you, now that I have saved your life! I have come to say goodbye to you, my Carlos! My last sun has risen today. We will not meet again here on earth. When all the faithful reach Heaven, God will join us again. There are tears in your eyes. Why do you cry? No, take heart; dying is not hard for the one who dies for you.
Largo al factotum della citta is the most recognized aria from Giaochinno Rossini’s (1792-1868) opera Il Barbiere di Siviglia (The Barber of Seville). In this classic example of the comic opera “patter” song—where the sounds of the Italian language and the rapid musical notes seem inseperable—Figaro humorously recounts his many exploits as the town factotum, or Jack-of-all-trades.

TRANSLATION:
Make room for the factotum! It’s a new day and I must get busy. Ah, it’s a great life, being a barber and used to the best. No one can compare to the brilliant Figaro! Fortune smiles upon him, it’s true. Early or late, everyone needs me; nothing can tire me, I’m always ready! Of all the professions, being a barber is the best. With scissors and combs ready I wait on everyone. Here and there I’m a diplomat; with a sighing damsel or a spirited young man. Everyone wants me! “Do you have my wig?” “Quick, shave me! “I have a headache!” “Deliver this letter!” “Figaro! Figaro! FIGARO!” I’m there. Here, there, high, low, coming, going—I’m indispensable, the rescuer of the whole town!

In 1840 Robert Schumann (1810-1856) composed musical settings for 16 poems selected from Heinrich Heine’s Lyrichs Intermezzo. This cycle of songs was published a few years later with the title Dichterliebe (Poet’s Love).

TRANSLATION:
1. In the wonderfully beautiful month of May when all the buds are bursting open, there, from my own heart, bursts forth my own love. In the wonderfully beautiful month of May when all the birds are singing, so have I confessed to her my yearning and my longing.
2. From my tears sprout forth many blooming flowers, and my sighing becomes joined with the chorus of the nightingales. And if you love me, dear child, I will send you so many flowers; and before your window should sound the song of the nightingale.

3. The rose, the lily, the dove, the sun, I loved them all once in love's bliss. I love them no more, I love only the Small, the Fine, the Pure, the One; I love only them. She herself—the source of all love—is rose, lily, dove, sun.

4. When I gaze into your eyes all my pain and woe vanishes; yet when I kiss your lips I am made wholly and entirely healthy. When I lay against your breast it comes over me like longing for heaven; yet when you say, "I love you!" I must cry so bitterly.

5. I want to delve my soul into the cup of the lily; the lily should give resoundingly a song belonging to my beloved. The song should shudder and tremble like the kiss from her lips that she once gave me in a wonderfully sweet hour.

11. A young man loved a girl who had chosen another man; this other man loved yet another girl and wed that one. The first girl married out of spite the first, best man that happened into her path; that young man is not well off. It is an old story, yet it remains ever new; and to whom it has just happened, it will break his heart in two.

7. I bear no grudge, even when my heart is breaking! Love lost forever! I bear no grudge. Although you shine in diamond splendor, no beam falls into the night of your heart. I will know that for a long time. I truly saw you in my dreams, and saw the night in the room of your heart, and saw the snake that bites your heart; I saw, my dear, how truly miserable you are. I bear no grudge.
Aaron Copland (1900-1990) compiled and arranged two sets of traditional American songs in 1951 (First Set) and 1952 (Second Set). Both were premiered by William Warfield (voice teacher of Dr. Bell at the University of Illinois).

The Little Horses is a children’s lullaby originating in the Southern states. Copland’s adaptation is based in part on John and Alan Lomax’s version in Folk Song U.S.A.

Zion’s Walls is a revivalist song whose original melody and words are credited to John McCurry, published in Down East Spirituals.

The words and melody of At the River are by Rev. Robert Lowry (1865).

Ching-a-ring Chaw is a Minstrel song from the 19th Century.

Originally Maurice Ravel was commissioned in 1932 to compose music for a film about the literary character Don Quixote to star the World-renowned Russian bass Feodor Chaliapin. But before production began, Ravel was told that his services were no longer needed. (His songs were already completed, but the star felt they were not quite right.) Into the breach stepped Jacques Ibert (1890-1962) who provided Chaliapin with songs that richly evoke the imagery of Spain and suit well in the bass voice. Ironically, it is Ravel’s songs that have become better known than these heard in the film.

TRANSLATION:

Song of Don Quixote’s Departure
This new castle, which Love has built, is a rampart, a fortress against vice. It is a castle made so that no one can approach its gate if he has not saved his people from great kings.

Song to Dulcinea
Each day lasts a year for me if I do not see my Dulcinea. But Love has depicted her face in the spring and in the cloud, in every dawn and every flower.

Song of the Duke
I wish to sing here, Lady of my dreams, who exalts me above this sordid age. For I have attempted high adventures. I have conquered the Magician. Confounded the traitors, and made the world bow down in homage to her.

Song of Don Quixote’s Death
Do not weep, Sancho; your master is not dead, he is not far from you. He lives on a happy island where all is pure and free from deceit. I am a shadow in life and real in death—such is the strange fate of Don Quixote.

In 1956 Frank Loesser (1910-1969) wrote the libretto, music, and lyrics for The Most Happy Fella, adapted from Sidney Howard's play, They Knew What They Wanted. The impressive score contains over 30 musical numbers and makes extensive use of operatic techniques and forms, including recitative, arias, duets, trios and choral numbers, and the original cast included classically-trained Jo Sullivan and opera star Robert Weede. Set in the Napa Valley in the late 1920s, an older man falls in love with a woman he has seen but not met, and becomes fearful that she'll never love him. Choices on both sides tear them apart, but forgiveness brings them together.

Tableaux d’une Exposition

Tableaux d’une Exposition (Pictures at an Exhibition) is drawn from Modest Moussorgsky’s viewing of an exhibit of the art works of a recently deceased artist friend, Victor Hartmann. Moussorgsky’s original work was a series of 10 sketches for piano, taken from the 400 artworks present at the exhibit. These 10 impressions are linked together by a series of four Promenades, with variations inserted into successive movements, recalling the movement of the composer from one work to the next. Pictures was published posthumously, and did not enjoy the acclaim it has today until the orchestration by Maurice Ravel in 1922. The existing pictures will be displayed as the movements are played.
Gnomus (The Gnome)
Based on Hartmann’s design for a Christmas tree nutcracker, the music depicts a grotesque little imp creeping through a murky background, pausing, lunging suddenly from the shadows, performing a mad, spastic dance. The image typically associated with this movement was a costume design for the opera Russlan and Ludmilla.

Il vecchio castello (The Old Castle)
While studying architecture in Italy, Hartmann painted a watercolor of an unidentified medieval tower. A minstrel with a lute was sketched in before the gates, perhaps to indicate the scale. The theme here has an introspective, melancholy beauty.

Tuileries: Dispute a’enfants après jeux (Tuileries Garden: Children Quarreling at Play)
The music depicts a walk in the Tuileries Gardens of Paris, where nurses bring the children in their charge to play.

Bydlo (Cattle)
Hartmann’s sketch depicted a Polish dray, drawn by a team of oxen. The music is eloquent of the steady, powerful pull of the beasts.

Ballet des poussins dans leurs coques (Ballet of the Unhatched Chicks)
This is a costume design for the ballet Trilby, choreographed by Marius Petipa, with music by Julius Gerber. The ballet contains a scene in which children dance as chicks in their shells.

Samuel Goldenberg and Schmuyle
Hartmann’s sketches depict a pair of Jews from Sandomir, in Poland; one richly dressed, the other in rags. Mussorgsky sets up a musical colloquy between the two. The rich man’s theme is overbearing and pompous, with dire overtones, heedless of the poor man’s wheedling entreaties. Gradually both themes merge, the rich man’s theme drowning out the poor man’s.

Limoges – Le Marché (The Market)
The music recreates the bustle depicted by Hartmann’s drawing of French women haggling and gossiping in a market.

Catacombae: Sepulcrum Romanum (Catacombs)
A slow succession of deep, mournful chords depicts this self-portrait of Hartmann and two accomplices exploring the old Roman catacombs in Paris. The music modulates into a dolorous variation of the Promenade, over which the composer inscribed in the original manuscript Con mortuis in lingua mortua (With the dead in a dead language).

La Cabane sur des pattes de poule (The Hut on Hen’s Legs)
The witch Baba Yaga is a familiar figure in Russian folklore. She lives in the woods in a little hut that turns round and round on chicken legs, and flies about in a magical mortar, within which she grinds human bones. Victor Hartmann designed an ornate clock in the shape of Baba Yaga’s hut. However, Mussorgsky’s music begins with the wild flight of the witch’s mortar, the witch herself peering over the rim. She disappears into the forest, whereupon the music alters momentarily to a slow, eerie passage: the witch's hut stalking through the dim woods on fowl's legs. Suddenly the witch flies forth again, careening through the air and into the final sketch.

La grande porte de Kiev (The Great Gate of Kiev)

This sketch was Hartmann's entry in a competition to design a great gate to commemorate Tsar Alexander II's miraculous escape from an assassination attempt. The project was never carried through for lack of funds. Hartmann had designed a gate in the shape of a great Slavonic helmet, with a chapel over the main arch, and a bell tower to the side. The music, a variation on the Promenade, follows a grand and stately procession through the gate.

The Performers

Martha Dalton, a coloratura soprano, was born and raised in Nashville, Tennessee where she received her B.S. in Music from Trevecca Nazarene University in 1976. She received a Master of Music (Vocal Performance) from Miami University, Oxford, Ohio in 1994 and a Master of Music (Vocal Pedagogy) from The Chicago College of Performing Arts at Roosevelt University (2004). Performance opportunities at Miami University included the lead role in Puccini’s Suor Angelica, and the role of Olympia in Offenbach’s Tales of Hoffmann with Miami University Opera Theater. At both institutions, hour-long recitals of art songs and arias were presented. Professor Dalton has been a member of the faculty at Olivet Nazarene University since 1996. She is married to Dr. Ron Dalton, Professor of Practical Theology at ONU. They have three sons, John (age 24), James (21), and Stephen (20). The Daltons reside in Bourbonnais, Illinois where she sings for church services, weddings, and civic organizations.

Brenda Martin holds a Bachelor of Music Education from Trevecca Nazarene University, a Master of Music Education from Austin Peay State University, and a Master of Music in Solo Performance from Arizona State University. In addition, she has done extensive coursework toward a Doctor of Musical Arts in Solo Performance from Arizona State University. Professor Martin has taught piano at the college level for 23 years and is in her eighth year of teaching at Point Loma Nazarene University. She previously held teaching positions at Northwest Nazarene University and at Trevecca Nazarene University. Professor Martin is active as both a solo player and a chamber player.

In consideration of the performers and audience members, thank you for turning off cellular phones and for not using flash photography
My dear Marquis, it seems to me you should employ more tact!
If I may advise, better use your eyes, and think before you act!
This hand is too fine and too sweet, this ankle too slim and petite,
The fashions I am wearing, the language and the bearing,
such polish and finesse no chambermaids possess!
You must admit it, come what may, that was an awful thing to say.

Just look at me and you will see that nature did her best.
If you think my face is my only grace, then please observe the rest!
Just take one more look and observe, the exquisite line and the curve,
My charming conversation displays imagination.
No chambermaid would be as great a hit as me,
I proved my point sufficiently, you owe me an apology.

Franz Joseph Haydn began his career under the patronage system of Europe and by the end of his career was operating as a free artist under the burgeoning 19th century Romanticism. He spent a large part of his creative years as court composer for the family of Prince Esterhazy.
Considered the first of the three Viennese composers (Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven), he is said to have excelled in all areas of composition.

Sonata, Hob. XIV-49 was composed in 1789-90. It was an intimate sonata composed for Maria Anna von Genzinger, who was the wife of the physician to Prince Esterhazy. One of the last sonatas he wrote, it falls into the third group of Haydn’s sonatas (Nos. 40-52), written from 1780 to 1794. In these sonatas, Haydn moves away from the intensely passionate and extreme expression of the previous group and moves more towards a more moderate style in which there is a balance between the various affections and the different styles, forms, and characters of the individual movements.

The brilliant first movement is in typical Sonata-Allegro form. The first theme begins with a set of broken double thirds and is playful in character. Instead of typically changing to a different mood for the second theme, Haydn maintains in it the same playful character as the first. In fact, he derives the second theme from the first, beginning with the same set of broken double thirds, this time in the dominant, then further developing the idea. The expected contrasting material appears in sections other than the second theme; for example, Haydn moves to a more lyrical style in the transition (the passage just before the second theme). He begins the development section with material he has just used in the close a few bars earlier. Following this, he develops the second theme from the exposition, building in intensity to an abrupt halt, and starting the retransition with similar material to that of the close of the exposition. He then leads into the recapitulation with a series of broken thirds on a dominant seventh chord, followed by a cadenza. The recapitulation then ensues, followed by an unusually long coda.

The second movement, one of Haydn’s greatest slow movements, is highly ornamented and richly expressive. According to some scholars, Haydn was one of the first composers to introduce variation form in the slow movement. This particular movement is in A–B–A form. Haydn varies the thematic material at each repetition, making it more ornamented and expressive.

The third movement is in a Rondo (ABACA) form played in the style of a minuet. According to Grove’s Dictionary of Music and Musicians, many of Haydn’s works in the 1780s and 90s ended modestly with a Tempo de Menuet, a set of variations, or a simple rondo.

Ich wandelte unter den Bäumen

Translation:
I went walking under the trees, alone with my grief.
The old dreaming came and slipped into my heart.
“Who taught you this little song, you birds in the airy heights?
Be still! When my heart hears it, it hurts all over again.”
“A young girl came walking; she sang it over and over.
That’s where we birds learned the sweet, golden song.”
“You should not tell me that, you wondrously sly birds.
You want to steal away my sorrow, but I trust no one.”

Von Dir, mein Lieb
Hensel’s song is based on a German translation of Robert Burns’s poem. The song uses only one of the two original verses.
Translation:
From thee, Eliza, I must go and from my native shore:
The cruel fates between us throw a boundless ocean’s roar;
But boundless oceans, roaring wide between my Love and me,
They never, never can divide my heart and soul from thee.

Nachtwanderer

Translation:
I walk outdoors in the quiet night; the moon slips out so quietly from behind its cover of dark clouds. And here and there in the valley a nightingale wakes up, then everything returns again to grayness and silence. O marvelous night song from far away in the land where streams flow, quiet shiver in the dark trees, you confuse my thoughts; my aimless singing here is merely a crying out in the midst of dreams.

Stimme der Glocken

Translation:
No breath of wind disturbs the smooth lake.
The high peaks, the firs, crags, inlets, glaciers that no one visits but the clouds, they all are mirrored in the water unbroken. The withered leaf audibly trembles on the tree, and one can hear the tiniest stone that the chamois sends into the ravine when she senses a hunter. Listen! Bells, sounding from the far distance, awakening my grief and reconciling at the same time: New life can bloom out of death. The ringing reminds me quietly of the peace that went out of the earth forever, already on a morning in Eden.

Dmitri Shostakovich, a Russian composer whose creativity was sometimes affected by the Stalinist regime, composed works full of satire and unexpected harmonies and rhythms. His 24 Preludes, Opus 34 were patterned after the 24 Preludes, Opus 28 of Chopin. They follow the cycle of ascending fifths. Each prelude displays its own mood and character. Shostakovich employs in them a style of writing in which the notes sound “wrong.” This creates great playfulness and humor.

Prelude No. 6 is a delightfully humorous polka. It contains dissonance, bitonality, wide leaps, unexpected shifts of key, and halting accompaniments. Prelude No. 9 is an exciting perpetual-motion tarantella in 6/8 meter. Written in a two-voice style, it contains biting dissonances and uses the extreme registers of the keyboard.

Les oiseaux dans la charmille (from Les Contes d’Hoffmann)

Translation:
The birds in the arbor, the sun in the sky
All speaks to the young girl of love!
Here is the gentle song, the song of Olympia!

All that which sings and resounds and sighs, one by one,
Moves her heart that trembles with love!
Here is the darling song, the song of Olympia!

Charles Griffes, an American composer who spent many years as music director at the Hackley School in Tarreytown, New York (from 1907 – 1920), was a shy and modest man with a sense of humor. His early works exhibited German influences, but by 1911 – 1917 he shifted his focus towards impressionism. His pieces of this era were full of color and free of form. Griffes also used Japanese and Native American themes combined with polyrhythms and polytonality. His piano pieces are pictorial in nature and often contain poetic or descriptive texts.

These influences and characteristics are all evident in his Four Roman Sketches, composed in 1917. Each of the four pieces is preceded by a poem by William Sharp (see below), who wrote under the pseudonym of Fiona Macleod. In fact, the poems were the inspiration for the pieces (a number of other Griffes works were also inspired by the poetry of William Sharp).

THE WHITE PEACOCK
Here where the sunlight floodeth the garden,
Where the pomegranate reareth its glory
Of gorgeous blossom; where the oleanders
Dream through the noontides; where the heat lies Pale blue in the hollows, here where the dream-flowers,
The cream-white poppies, silently waver,
Here as the breath, as the soul of this beauty
Moveth in silence, and dreamlike, and slowly,
White as a snowdrift in mountain valleys
When softly upon it the gold light lingers:

Moves the white peacock, as tho’ through the noontide
A dream of the moonlight were real for a moment.
Dim on the beautiful fan that he spreadeth;
Dim on the cream-white are blue adumbrations,
Pale, pale as the breath of blue smoke in far woodlands,
Here, as the breath, as the soul of this beauty,
Moves the White Peacock.

NIGHTFALL (Al far della notte)
The long day is over. Dusk, and silence now:
And night, that is as dew on the flower of the World.

THE FOUNTAIN OF THE ACQUA PAOLA
Shimmering lights, as though the Aurora’s wild polar fires
Flashed in thy happy bubbles, died in thy foam.

CLOUDS
Mountainous glories, they move superbly;
Crumbling so slowly, that none perceives when
The golden domes are sunk in the valleys of fathomless snows.

The four Spirituals were arranged by pianist and composer Victor Labenske, a member of the music faculty of Point Loma Nazarene University.

Il bacio (The Kiss), by Luigi Arditi, Italian conductor and composer, is a concert aria composed late in his life. Although he composed in many genres, this aria is by far his most remembered work. A vocal waltz, the text and melody are quite playful.

When George Frideric Handel was invited to Dublin in 1741 to present a series of benefit concerts, it was expected of this "Gentleman universally known by his compositions in all kinds of music, and particularly for his Te Deum, Jubilate and Anthems, and of the compositions in Church Musick" that he compose new oratorio. The new work, entitled "The Messiah," was composed between August 22 and September 12, a feat of concentrated composition that, while not untypical of Handel, has given rise to numerous apocryphal legends. The fact that it was composed so quickly is explained by Handel's skillful adaptation of music originally conceived for other performance media. However, the resulting music fits the texts of "Messiah" so well that one is easily convinced that the music was written with those words in mind. The choice of Charles Jennen's libretto and the eventual shape of the oratorio (the relative prominence of the chorus and the other small orchestration) are explained by the amateur nature of the Musical Academy of Dublin, which premiered the work on April 13, 1742.

Since the work was intended for Dublin, Handel apparently felt he could use a libretto derived wholly from Scripture—in 1738 London had soundly rejected "Israel in Egypt," a work similarly based on scripture. His choice of a purely Biblical libretto makes "Messiah" unique among Handel's other oratorios because, unlike them, it is non-dramatic. The oratorio has neither identifiable characters—the soloists are designated only by voice part, and in the Dublin premiere nine different soloists were used—nor plot. Lacking the dramatic confrontation and direct narration common to Handel's operas and dramatic oratorios, this work succeeds on the strength of its use of the chorus as the central protagonist. In his use of the chorus, Handel responds not only to the uniqueness of the libretto, but also to the grand, ceremonial anthems that were the foundations of sacred music.

The continuing success of "Messiah" has led to a number of different versions of the work, many of them created by Handel himself to fit the instrumentalists and singers available for a given performance. It is difficult (if not impossible) to come to a definitive decision as to who should sing what, how a given rhythm ought to be performed, what the optimal forces are, what ornamentation should be used, and all the other questions that fall under the category of historical authenticity." In reality, the work must be reshaped and redefined for the unique requirements of each performance. The sheer length of the oratorio mandates some cuts, in order to rehearse and perform within the time constraints of a modern concert venue, still hopefully maintaining the structural integrity and musical vision of the composer's original conception.

Though Handel never again returned to this non-dramatic, contemplative sort of work, "Messiah" is almost solely responsible for posterity's adulation of the composer. No other work of Handel's can claim such universal familiarity and acceptance, or boast such an unparalleled history of public performance and reverence. As far removed from Handel's ideal of dramatic oratorio as Messiah it remains the work by which every oratorio since has been measured. Therein lies the magnificence of this composition, and the reason it continues to deserve our performances and admiration.
Welcome and Invocation

Part One

Overture

Recitative

Comfort ye, My people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortingly to Jerusalem and cry to her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness. Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God. (Isaiah 40:1-3)

Aria

Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill made low; the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain. (Isaiah 40:4)

Chorus

And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. (Isaiah 40:5)

Recitative

Thus saith the Lord, the Lord of Hosts: Yet once a little while, and I will shal the heavens and the earth, the sea and the dry land; and the desire of all nations shall come. The Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in; behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of Hosts. (Haggai 2:6,7; Malachi 3:1)

Aria

But who may abide the day of His coming? And who shall stand when He appeareth? For He is like a refiner's fire. (Malachi 3:2)

Chorus

And He shall purify the sons of Levi, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. (Malachi 3:3)

Recitative

Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Emmanuel: God with us. (Isaiah 7:14; Matthew 2:23)

Aria with chorus

O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion, get thee up into the high mountain! thou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem, lift up thy voice with strength! Lift up, be not afraid! Say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God! O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion, arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee! (Isaiah 40:9) or, behold, darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and His glory shall be seen upon thee, and the gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.
(Isaiah 60:2,3)

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon His shoulder, and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The

There were shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And lo! The angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and they were sore afraid. (Luke 2:8-9)

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior which is Christ the Lord. (Luke 2:10-11)

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying: (Luke 2:13)

Glory to God in the highest, and peace on earth, good will toward men.
(Luke 2:14)

Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy king cometh unto thee. He is the righteous Saviour, and He shall speak peace unto the heathen. (Zechariah 9:9-10)

Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened, and the ears of the deaf unstopped.
Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing.
(Isaiah 35:5-6)
He shall feed His flock like a shepherd, and He shall gather the lambs with His arm, and carry them in His bosom, and gently lead those that are with young. Come unto Him all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and He will give you rest. Take His yoke upon you, and learn of Him, for He is meek and lowly of heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls. (Isaiah 40:11; Matthew 11:28-29)

Part Two

Chorus
Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. (John 1:29)

Aria Miss Smith ♦ Miss Sass
He was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. (Isaiah 53:3)

Chorus
Surely He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him. (Isaiah 53:4-5)

Chorus
And with His stripes we are healed. (Isaiah 53:5)

Chorus
All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all. (Isaiah 55:6)

Recitative Dr. Woodruff ♦ Mr. Grigg
All they that see Him, laugh Him to scorn; they shoot out their lips, and shake their heads, saying: (Psalm 22:7)

Chorus
He trusted in God that He would deliver Him; let Him deliver Him, if He delight in Him. (Psalm 22:8)

Recitative Dr. Woodruff ♦ Mr. Grigg
Thy rebuke hath broken His heart; He is full of heaviness; He looked for someone to have pity on Him, but there was no man, neither found He any to comfort Him. (Psalm 69:20)

Aria Dr. Woodruff ♦ Mr. Grigg
Behold and see if there be any sorrow like unto His sorrow. (Lamentations 1:12)
Recitative

He was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of Thy people
He stricken. (Isaiah 53:8)

Aria

But Thou didst not leave His soul in hell; nor didst Thou suffer Thy Holy One to see corruption. (Psalm 16:10)

Chorus

Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in. Who is the King of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle. The Lord of Hosts, he is the King of glory.
(Psalm 24:7-10)

Aria

How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things. (Romans 10:15)

Chorus

Their sound is gone out into all lands, and their words unto the ends of the earth. (Romans 10:18)

Chorus

Hallelujah! For the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ; and He shall reign for ever and ever, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, Hallelujah! (Revelation 19:6; 1:15; 19:16)

Part Three

Aria

I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.
For now is Christ risen from the dead, the first fruits of them that sleep.
(Job 19:25-26)

Chorus

Since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. (1 Corinthians 5:21-22)

Recitative

Behold, I tell you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. (1 Corinthians 15:51-52)
Aria

The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. (I Corinthians 15:52-53)

Recitative

Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written: Death is swallowed up in victory! (I Corinthians 15:54)

Duet

O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. (I Corinthians 15:55, 56)

Chorus

Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, and hath redeemed us to God by His blood, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing. Blessing and honour, glory and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever. Amen. (Revelation 5:12-13)

ORCHESTRA CLINIC CONCERT

DAVID ANDERSON,
GUEST CONDUCTOR

OLIVET NAZARENE UNIVERSITY
LARSEN FINE ARTS CENTER
KRESGE AUDITORIUM

January 10, 2006, 7 p.m.
David Anderson began his musical studies at age six. After winning several state piano competitions, he attended Baylor University, studying with Krassimira Jordan and earning two degrees in piano performance (BM, 2002, summa cum laude; MM, 2004, with distinction). During his six years at Baylor, David earned numerous awards including: Finalist, Eastern Connecticut Young Artists’ Competition (2003); Semifinalist, Hellam (MO) Young Artists’ Competition (2003); First place, Baylor Concerto Competition (2001); and two performances as soloist with the Baylor Symphony Orchestra (2002, 2004). He received additional study at summer festivals with Martin Canin at the Bowdoin Summer Music Festival (2003), and Wolfgang Watzinger at the Bösendorfer Piano Academy in Vienna (2000, 2002).

David is currently a graduate student in orchestral conducting at the University of Illinois. After beginning conducting studies at Baylor with Stephen Heyde and Kevin Sedatole, he currently studies with Donald Schleicher. He has worked with the Quad City Symphony, the University of Illinois Symphony Orchestra, Philharmonia, Illini Strings, New Music Ensemble, Baylor Symphony, and various ad hoc ensembles. David has received additional instruction from Gustav Meier, Kenneth Kiesler, Giancarlo Guerrero and Peter Bay.
Glinka: Overture to Russian and Ludmilla

Mikhail Glinka (1804-1857) is known today for two main things: he was the first Russian composer to gain recognition outside his home country, and he is considered to be the father of Russian Nationalism. His most famous works are the operas A Life for the Tsar (1836) and Russian and Ludmilla (1842). To create an authentic Russian sound in his music, he used folk melodies as well as melodies from the church. From today's standpoint, this is nothing extraordinary -- many nineteenth-century composers who wrote in nationalistic styles used folk and church melodies to do so. However, it was Glinka who was one of he very first to do this.

The opera Russian and Ludmilla is based on a Pushkin fairy tale involving the character Russian going through many adventures to win the hand of Ludmilla, daughter of the prince of Kiev. The opera is not performed a great deal today, but its overture has become quite popular. As is typical the overture presents the themes that will be used throughout the opera. This short piece contains brilliant string writing, colorful woodwind solos, and even a whole tone scale near the end depicting an evil dwarf.

Prokofiev: Symphony No. 1, Op. 25 “Classical”

While Russia was headed toward revolution in the mid 1910s, Sergei Prokofiev (1891-1953) was living in relative isolation. His first symphony, “Classical,” (1916-17) was composed in the countryside outside Petrograd, and does not contain extramusical associations of the times. It is, instead, a charming caricature of a late 18th century genre. Today, caricatures have become quite popular, including pictures exaggerating the features of the originals, or in skits on television shows such as Saturday Night Live poking fun of a celebrity or political figure. In the same way, this is Prokofiev’s musical parody of the 18th century symphonic genre.

Neoclassicism was one of the many compositional trends of the time, but Prokofiev’s use of it in this symphony was vastly different from others. Stravinsky, for example, took a few aspects of an older time (form, instrumentation, etc) and applied them to his own compositions. Prokofiev composed his Classical Symphony as if Haydn were still alive today -- filling it with much of the fun and spontaneity that is so characteristic of both composers.

Prokofiev: Suite from Lieutenant Kijé, Op.60

Because of the October Revolution, Prokofiev left Russia for the United States shortly after the completion of the Classical Symphony. Here, he had some success as a pianist and composer, but he always seemed to be in the shadow of Rachmaninoff. He moved to Europe in 1922 and from here, stayed in close contact with the Soviet Union, even visiting several times. He was continually torn between nostalgia for his homeland and the uncertain political future he would face if he decided to go back. He finally decided to permanently live in the Soviet Union, and his Op. 60 Suite from Lieutenant Kijé (1934) was his first composition upon returning.

The suite is extracted from the film Lieutenant Kijé that tells of a mistake in the high levels of government during the reign of Tsar Paul I. A fictitious soldier, Lieutenant Kijé, was accidentally created through a misunderstanding. At first, the officials responsible did not want to admit their mistake, but it later turned out that this character became extremely convenient to have around. When someone in the government would mess up, somehow the blame found its way to Lieutenant Kijé. The officials were successful in making sure that something came up every time the Tsar was supposed to meet him. However, this could not keep happening, so the soldier eventually had to die.

This project marked the first time that Prokofiev composed music for the cinema. The suite extracted from the film is in five movements: The Birth of Kijé, Romance, Kijé’s Wedding, Tróika, and the Burial of Kijé. As expected, the music in the suite is comical and witty at times—almost always with a hint of irony. Russian Nationalism can be seen often, and especially in the fourth movement. In the fast section of the Tróika (which actually depicts a sleigh ride), the orchestra portrays the plucked Russian string instrument known as the balalaika.

Tchaikovsky: Marche Slave, Op.31

In 1876, there was a conflict between Christians and Muslims in the countries of Eastern Europe. The Serbs among other Slavonic groups came to the rescue of the Bulgarians who had just been attacked by the Turks. Although Russia did not get officially involved in this war, many soldiers came to the aid of their fellow Christians. A certain Slavonic Charity Committee commissioned Tchaikovsky (1840-1893) to compose a piece to be performed at a benefit to raise money to help out the Russian soldiers. He took only five days to compose the result, Marche Slave.

This piece is full of Serbian folk tunes as well as quotations of “God Save the Tsar,” a piece that has been known as one of Russia’s “unofficial” National Anthems. It was extremely popular, and received an instant encore, helping to achieve the ends of the benefit concert. The piece in its original form could not be played in the Soviet Union because of its references to the Tsar. As a result, the sections containing the quote were altered or omitted. The version most often heard today is Tchaikovsky’s original version, and this is the version played this evening.

NOTES

Variations of Ein’ Feste Burg
As one of the most time-honored of all Protestant hymns, Martin Luther’s A Mighty Fortress is Our God has already been arranged and orchestrated a number of times. Most famous among these is an entire cantata by J.S. Bach. Tonight’s piece seeks to distance itself from previous settings of the hymn tune, while still attempting to capture the spirit and power of Ein’ Feste Burg that has allowed the hymn to endure for nearly half a millennium.

Autumn Leaves
This piece was influenced by the works of early 20th-Century British composers Ralph Vaughan Williams and Percy Grainger. Both created simple yet poignant melodies in a time of frenetic experimentation, surrounding them in an expanded, yet functional tonality at a time when tonality itself was thought to be a thing of the past. Their works are eminently pleasing to the ear, maintaining a certain simplicity and earnestness that this Autumn Leaves seeks to emulate. The slightly Celtic feel of the melodies, the sweeping, shifting currents of rhythm, and the placid harmonies are all intended to capture the peacefulness in the Fall air and the gentle fluttering descent of autumn leaves.

A Scottish Token
Although developing for nearly four years, A Scottish Token had not taken shape until recently. As I have been discovering and learning about my own Scottish heritage, the piece has written itself. Imagine two young children who have found a precious and captivating token, reveling in their discovery and running around with excitement, though never losing their sense of wonder.

Intermezzo
This is a lyric piece inspired by feelings of long and hope. The expressive opening theme is contrasted by a robust and exuberant middle section.

On My Knees
On My Knees is a musical testimony depicting the conversion experience and God’s grace. The piece begins with a dissonant and chromatic theme, then works its way into the resolution of harmonies and key, depicting the lost soul’s redemption into God’s mercy.
A Peck of Gold
A Peck of Gold is based on the poem by Robert Frost. In the accompaniment, the rise and fall of a pick-ax is heard, with a driving rhythm that reflects the image of a miner hard at work.

Songs of the Children
Songs of the Children is a song cycle based on the poetry of children afflicted with cancer. Their poetry was published in the book I Will Sing Life, by Larry Berger and Dahlia Lithwick. Two of the 6 pieces are being performed this evening, I Wish by Jason Orcutt, and Nature is Wild by Elizabeth Ball, the daughter of the composer. These poems are infused with the irresistible energy and vivaciousness of youth, yet tinged with very adult emotions of anger, fear and foreboding. Cancer is a ferocious beast that hides and spreads without warning. The incredible children who have struggled and died have given insight into the meaning of life and death, at times without being aware they are doing so. They are God’s special gifts.

I Wish
By Jason Orcutt

I wish there was a bird from God
And got me well
From his wings on me
And got me well

Nature is Wild
Written by Elizabeth Ball at the age of 7

Nature is wild and very quiet
The wind passes by it
As you look in the middle

Nature has ferocious beasts
That you hear softly through the breeze,
In the hot, hot summer.

Landscapes, Waters
Landscapes is a set of tone poems for solo piano based on the musings and writings of the composer. A short poem appears under the title of each piece, and is used as a point of reference for the music. The second piece of the set, Waters, was inspired by the awesomeness of the destructive force of the tsunami of 2005. The life-giving waters of innocent springs and rivers turn deadly and uncontrollable when unleashed with formidable power on the earth.

Sonata in D major
Giuseppe Torelli (1658-1709) is considered to be one of the innovators of the solo concerto. Though he started his musical career as a violinist in Bologna, he ultimately ended up in Vienna as both a composer and performer.

Torelli’s work on this program is one of roughly 25 works for solo trumpet. In the outer movements, one can hear the intense struggle between the soloist and keyboardist, yet a sense of balance is provided in the second movement where the keyboard is free to explore a variety of tempi and intricate harmonies. Originally composed for the valveless natural trumpet, Mr. White performs the piece on the modern piccolo trumpet in A.

Vocalise-Etude pour Voix Moyennes
Little is known of Carlos Pedrell (1878-1941). He was a Uruguayan of Spanish descent. He studied in Spain and France followed by a stint of teaching in South America after which he returned to Paris. He composed in a French style while taking advantage of Spanish influences.

The vocalise is a study of 19th century origins that is meant to be a wordless, vocal exercise with the intent of training both vocalists and instrumentalist alike in the great lyrical style the human voice can produce. For many years, the vocalise was thought to be unworthy of concert performance, yet composers of the 20th century wrote many a vocalise with the intent of having them performed. Pedrell’s Vocalise-Etude pour Voix Moyennes is not meant to be a flashy, technically demanding piece but demands much lyrical expression from the performer.

Villanelle
A gifted but highly self-critical composer, Dukas allowed only a small number of his works to be published; indeed, several of his works were destroyed by his own hand upon completion due to his personal judgmental nature. Works in extant include an opera, Ariane et Barbe-Bleue, a symphony, songs, chamber music and piano pieces. He devoted much of his energies to teaching, serving as instructor to many of the most significant members of the succeeding generation of French composers, including Olivier Messiaen and Maurice Duruflé. His music combines classical, romantic and impressionist elements into a rich and sturdy style.

He composed the Villanelle in 1906 as a test-piece for the Paris Conservatoire. The name derives from the Italian word villanella, a light-hearted, unaccompanied rustic part-song popular during the 16th and early 17th centuries. Dukas' piece has something of that same open-air atmosphere, both contented and zestful. The solo horn part is extremely demanding. Dukas' original scoring was for horn and orchestra; this piano setting was created upon the loss of the original orchestral accompaniment. (Villanelle notes by Kevin Mitchell)

Concerto in E-flat major, Hob.: VII e, 1

Franz Josef Haydn (1732-1809) is often described as the master of the classical era. He composed in most every genre, and is hailed by many of his time and beyond as an unmatched musical genius. Haydn was also well known for his sense of humor. From being dismissed from his church choir as a teenager to his late symphonies, Haydn was a prankster. Haydn's humor is revealed in his works. He would parody the classical style of music as well as use his music to poke fun at his working conditions and other issues of the time.

Haydn composed his one and only concerto for trumpet in 1796. The concerto was composed for Anton Weidinger and his new keyed trumpet, a trumpet with keys similar to that of woodwind instruments rather than valves. Once the piece was finally premiered in 1800, it was dormant for over one hundred years. It was revived through the 20th century once the manuscript and a piano-orchestral reduction were published in the 1920's. After numerous recordings, the trumpet concerto is hailed as one of Haydn's most popular pieces. The first movement is powerful, requiring command of range and dexterity ending with a cadenza. The second movement is a light beautiful movement that gently carries the listener into the third movement. The finale is light and quick and even has a hint of Haydn's humor when a single note is played by the soloist seemingly out of place. This evening, Mr. White will perform the concerto on the modern E-flat trumpet.

Intrada

Otto Ketting (b. 1935) was a trumpeter and composer at The Hague Conservatory. After years as a trumpeter, he abandoned his trumpet position and studies to pursue composition. Ketting has held posts as a composition professor and a 20th century music conductor. He has won numerous awards for his compositions and written for numerous publications.

Intrada for unaccompanied trumpet was written in 1958 for Ketting’s own exam at the The Hague Conservatory. Unable to rely on other musicians, the soloist is required to generate all drama and musicality without any exterior source from which to draw.

Sonata for Trumpet and Piano
Halsey Stevens (1908-1989) was born and raised in New York. He was a composition student under Ernest Bloch, and he served on numerous college faculties. As a composer, Stevens has composed for numerous instrumental and vocal combinations.

Sonata for Trumpet and Piano is different from most instrumental solo works in that it is written specifically for trumpet and piano. The piano part is not an accompaniment part but an equal collaborator with the trumpet. The first movement is an energetic piece placing great musical demands on the performers. A great sense of timing and musicianship is required for the movement to be executed correctly.

Meditation on Thaïs
Jules Massenet (1842 - 1912) was a popular composer of French lyric opera. Like Gounod and Bizet, his music is known for its charm and beautiful melodies. He was the leader of the musical society, and honor winning student at the Paris Conservatory where he later became a professor of music. His opera Thaïs is set in Egypt during the early Christian days. The opera is a lyric comedy in three acts and seven scenes. It was first produced at the Opéra on March 16, 1894. This piece, “Meditation,” is taken from his opera, Thaïs. Thaïs is the central character in the opera, a seductive courtesan that repulses a monk, Athanaël, with her worldly attitudes. She learns to resent her shallow existence, and after being confronted by Athanaël and spending a night in meditation, agrees to retire from the secular world and become a nun. Athanaël, ironically, has been smitten by Thaïs’s allure and decides that he is in love with her. He arrives at the convent where Thaïs now resides and finds her on her deathbed. Athanaël proclaims his love and renounces his vows of faith, while Thaïs steadfastly holds to her newfound spirituality and dies, leaving Athanaël with neither faith nor love.

In the Opera, Meditation is played after the fall of the curtain in the second Act as Thaïs contemplates her dilemma, i.e., whether to repent of her worldly ways or not. The original version is for solo violin with harp accompaniment.

The Bride of the Waves Herbert L. Clarke (1867–1945) was one of history’s finest cornet players. He was a phenomenal soloist in John Philip Sousa’s band and went on to conduct his own bands as well as compose many pieces. He is documented as the composer of hundreds of pieces. Composed for cornet, The Bride of the Waves was composed in 1900. It is a light, entertaining dance piece subtitled “Polka Brillante.” The piece has a lyrical introduction which leads into a variety of light sections. A cadenza and quick coda bring the piece to conclusion. The cornet is a mellow, lyrical instrument capable of both great expression and lightning fast technique. The challenge for the trumpeter is to play the less mellow trumpet with the light, deft qualities possessed by the cornet. This evening the piece will be performed on the B-flat trumpet.

Rondo for Lifey
Leonard Bernstein (1918-1990) was one of American’s finest musicians. He was one who wanted to share music with all people. He abhorred the term “classical music” and felt that a much wider umbrella of a term should apply to “serious music.” Bernstein composed for many genres, although it is likely his most memorable compositions will be his musicals. Bernstein also appeared on podiums all over the world with his longest engagement with the New York Philharmonic. Bernstein not only held the title of composer-conductor, but he was also a fine pianist, often leading many orchestras from behind the keyboard. Rondo for Lifey is from a set of canine pieces Bernstein composed around 1950.
Lifey was screen comedienne Judy Holliday’s Skye terrier. It is a light piece written in a simple ABA form. Other works in the set include the brass quartet for trumpet, horn, trombone, and tuba entitled "Fanfare for Bima." Bima was conductor Serge Koussevitzky’s black cocker spaniel, and this fanfare is constructed upon a theme that was whistled in the Koussevitzky household to call the pet. Along with the pieces for Lifey and Bima, Bernstein composed three brief solos in memory of Mippy, a dog belonging to his brother, Burtie. They are entitled "Elegy for Mippy I," for horn; "Elegy for Mippy II," for trombone; and "Waltz for Mippy" for tuba.

Orpheus Choir

Orpheus Choir, now in its eighth decade of annual performances, represents Olivet in concerts on the university’s educational region (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin), and has sung at many general assemblies of the Church of the Nazarene.

The choir was founded by Prof. Walter B. Larsen in 1932. Prof. Naomi Larsen, led the choir after her husband’s passing in 1957, conducting until 1972. Dr. D. George Dunbar served as conductor of Orpheus from 1972 until retiring in 1999. Appointed conductor of Orpheus Choir in 1999, Dr. Jeff Bell serves as Professor of Music at Olivet, where he earned an undergraduate degree in Music Education in 1981. He also earned the M.Mus. degree from the University of Illinois in 1983, and the Doctor of Arts degree from Ball State University in 1996.

Orpheus Choir has appeared in concerts across the nation, as well as Canada, Mexico, and Israel. It has performed twice at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C., and three times at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado. Orpheus Choir was selected to sing at two national Music Educators National Conference conventions in California, and has sung at the Illinois Music Education Association convention. The choir has also represented Olivet at the annual Praise Gathering in Indianapolis each year since 1978.

The repertoire of this select group of singers includes anthems, hymns, spirituals, and contemporary compositions, representing different styles and periods of choral music.

Dr. Jeff Bell

Dr. Jeff Bell is the fourth conductor of Olivet Nazarene University’s Orpheus Choir, and has served as Professor of Music at Olivet Nazarene University since 1997. He came to this position after 13 years on the music faculty of Indiana Wesleyan University. Bell earned the B.S. in Music Education from Olivet Nazarene University, the M.Mus. in Voice Performance and Literature from the University of Illinois, and the Doctor of Arts in Voice Performance from Ball State University.

Dr. Bell is a past conductor of the ONU Orchestra, and is the current conductor of the Kankakee Valley Symphony Orchestra Chorus. He serves as organist for College Church of the Nazarene in Bourbonnais. Dr. Bell has performed in recitals, opera, and oratorio, and is a published composer and arranger. He and his wife Carole, and daughters Christin and Katie Jo reside in Bradley, IL.

THE DAILY JOURNAL
History of The Fantasticks

Who would have known a show that began as the large-scale, Rodgers and Hammerstein-inspired Joy Comes to Dead Horse, opened as a low-budget one act musical, and never saw the gleaming lights of Broadway would alter the record books of musical theatre history forever?

No other show in American theatre history has had the longevity of The Fantasticks. From May 3, 1960 until January 13, 2002, The Fantasticks played an astonishing 17,122 performances at the Sullivan Street Playhouse in New York’s Greenwich Village. The record-breaking run, which originally opened to neutral or negative reviews, eventually earned an Obie Award for best off-Broadway musical, a special Tony Award in 1992 and earned its creators, author Tom Jones and lyricist and composer Harvey Schmidt, the Richard Rodgers Award in 1993.

In addition to its success at the Sullivan Street Playhouse, the show has been a sensation throughout the world. With more than 700 performances from Australia to Zimbabwe, The Fantasticks has proven itself a universal, timeless story, sure to captivate every audience.

Sarah Henning (The Mute)
Sarah is a freshman from Glenview, Illinois. She is a communication studies major with a passion for theatre. She was extremely involved in her high school theatre department, and last fall made her Olivet debut in Cotton Patch Gospel. Sarah feels extremely blessed to be in this production.

Michael McIntire (El Gallo)
The Fantasticks marks Michael's second performance at Olivet. He was also involved in last fall's Cotton Patch Gospel. Michael is in his first year at Olivet and is majoring in communications with emphases in film studies, and television and video production. Before coming to Olivet, Michael was involved in church productions and his high school drama program. He is excited about continuing to perform at Olivet.

Megan Reed (Louisa)
This is Megan's second production at Olivet, her first being last fall's Cotton Patch Gospel. Megan is a freshman from Huntington, Indiana, where she participated in both community and high school theatre as an actress and a student director.

Andrew Biggs (Matt)
This performance marks Andrew's first mainstage production at Olivet. A freshman, Andrew is majoring in piano performance and English. He would like to thank all the wonderful people who helped in this "fantastick" production.
Heather Eaton (Bellomy)
Heather, a senior piano performance major, is making her debut on the Olivet stage. Primarily an instrumentalist, Heather usually spends her time playing in the orchestra during Olivet's musical productions; but she is very excited for this opportunity to be on stage! Heather thanks God for her musical talents, and her parents for encouraging her in her pursuit of music.

Erin Mages (Hucklebee)
Erin is a senior psychology major who will begin to work on a master's degree in social work in the fall. In her time at Olivet, she has been in All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten, The Curious Savage, You Can't Take it With You, and An Ideal Husband.

Scott Maier (Henry)
Scott is a senior music education major from Mokena, Illinois. He has appeared in Olivet musical productions of Fiddler on the Roof, Pirates of Penzance, and Into the Woods.

Joel Floyd (Mortimer)
Joel has performed in several high school productions including Little Shop of Horrors as Seymour and Hillbilly Weddin’ as Chiz. Although he has helped on several productions backstage at Olivet, Joel is making his debut performance in The Fantasticks.

Jerry Cohagan (Director)
Jerry is in his fourth year as director of the theatre program at Olivet Nazarene University, and he is thrilled to have such a talented ensemble of actors for this production. Before joining the faculty, he and his longtime comedy partner, Stephen Hicks, spent 25 years performing original comedy and drama with a Christian perspective throughout the United States. He has authored more than 20 books of sketches and one-act plays and has directed and appeared in more than 30 productions and musicals. Some of his favorites are Cotton Patch Gospel, All I Really Need To Know I Learned in Kindergarten, The Fantasticks, and God's Favorite. In 2003, he received an honorary Dove Award from the Gospel Music Association for his years of contribution to the arts.

Neal Woodruff (Musical Director)
Neal teaches in the department of music, with responsibility for the University Orchestra, Testament Men's Choir, Concert Singers, and Applied Voice. He serves on the board of the Kankakee Valley Symphony Orchestra, and leads music at College Church. Dr. Woodruff lives in Kankakee with his wife, Shannon, and children Ryan and Kayelyn.

NOTES

Piano Sonata Opus 81a (Beethoven)
This piano sonata is unique among Beethoven’s 32 compositions in that genre because it includes programmatic—or extra musical—ideas. It is dedicated to the Archduke Rudolph of Austria, who was Beethoven’s friend and student. In 1809 the Archduke was forced to leave Vienna with the rest of the court when French armies attacked the city, inspiring Beethoven to write this, the “Farewell,” sonata. Its three movements are titled Das Lebewohl (Farewell), Abwesenheit (Absence), and Das Wiedersehen (Return). The respective movements aptly evoke the images suggested by their titles, using various techniques such as the horn calls heard in the adagio introduction to the first movement and the joyous nature of the third or return movement. Another interesting aspect of this sonata is the elision of the second and third movements; the second movement could almost be mistaken for a slow introduction to the third movement, but upon examination they are clearly separate.

Opus 119 (Brahms)

This opus, completed in 1893, proved to be Brahms’ last work for the piano before his death in 1897. It is a set of short “character pieces,” each depicting its own mood and idea. The first three are titled intermezzo, which gives the idea of a relatively simple, unimportant work composed between larger works. The fourth is a Rhapsodie in a rather free form.

No. 1 is a very short, delicate piece, yet there is much harmonic activity and interest; it serves as a perfect example of Brahms’ ability to write dense harmonies and intellectual, deep pieces.

No. 2 is in an ABA form; it opens with an incessant rhythmic section, followed by a lovely, graceful andantino and ending with a return to the first idea. It is a work of varied emotion, including both drive and grace.

No. 3 is a short, nearly euphoric piece with constantly changing harmonies which make it hard to even detect the tonal center of C major. The melody of this piece is in an inner voice, adding interest and again showing the depth and intellectuality of many of Brahms’ compositions.

No. 4 is a bravura rhapsodie in the heroic key of E-flat major. However, the strong opening section is soon contrasted by a moody second theme and a lyrical middle section, before returning to the beginning idea for a flourishing finale.

Totentanz (Liszt)

This work was written in the 1840s, revised in 1853 and 1859, and finally debuted in 1865. It is based on the Dies Irae, a section of chant used in the requiem, or funeral, mass. Liszt probably got his inspiration for incorporating this theme from Hector Berlioz, who had previously used it in his “Symphonie Fantastique.” The title Totentanz is German for Dance of the Dead, and also serves as the title of a Goethe poem which no doubt led Liszt to title his piano variations in the same way. The piece itself is a set of 6 variations on the basic theme of the Dies Irae. It concludes with a long cadenza segment followed by a dramatic restatement of the main theme and an ending rush of cascading octaves shared by orchestra and soloist.

Battle Cry of Freedom (Gottschalk)

Gottschalk was an American composer born in New Orleans, although he received much of his training in Paris. After several years of touring in Europe he returned to the United States and traveled thousands of miles while giving concerts during the Civil War.

Although Gottschalk was born in the South, he was against slavery and ultimately swore allegiance to the union. This piece was one of his patriotic, virtuoso compositions in the tradition of L’Union. It is based on a song of the same title by his friend George F. Root, which was used as a rallying cry for Union troops. Gottschalk admired this work so much he even thought it should become the national anthem; thus it was only natural for him to compose such a virtuosic, brilliant piece based on the theme.

NOTES

En Foret is, simply, a showpiece for the French horn. Eugene Bozza wrote it to be a “final exam” for graduate horn students at the Paris Conservatory. French composers, beginning with Hector Berlioz in the late 19th century, were the first to explore the unique timbres of modern wind instruments. One can hear the technical requirements of bounding intervals, rapid-fire lip trills, sonorous glissandos, intricate hand-stopping, and other heart-stopping maneuvers.

Franz Schubert’s Auf dem Strom, written in 1828, is based on a text by Ludwig Rellstab, and was composed for a concert of his own music on March 26, 1828—the first anniversary of Ludwig von Beethoven’s death. Amazingly, this was the first public concert to feature solely the music of Schubert, and sadly, this was to be the year of Schubert’s own death. The landmark concert proved to be both a musical and financial success. Much of Schubert’s fame rests upon his treatment of the German Lied, bringing it to the status of an ‘art’ song and thereby making it one of the primary vehicles of German Romantic composers. Schubert’s poignant textures and synthesis of text and music set the stage for European song composers for the rest of the 19th century. Auf dem Strom was originally written for tenor voice, horn and piano, although it is commonly sung by soprano.

Translation:
Take the last parting kiss, and the wavy greeting that I’m still sending ashore before you turn your feet and leave!
Already the waves of the stream are pulling briskly at my boat, yet my tear-dimmed gaze keeps being tugged back by longing!

And so the waves bear me forward with unsympathetic speed.
Ah, the fields have already disappeared where I once discovered her! Blissful days, you are eternally past!
Hopelessly my lament echoes around my fair homeland, where I found her love.
See how the shore dashes past; yet how drawn I am to cross:
I'm pulled by unnamable bonds to land there by that little hut and to linger there beneath the foliage; but the waves of the river hurry me onward without rest, leading me out to the sea!

Ah, before that dark wasteland far from every smiling coast, where no island can be seen—oh how I'm gripped with trembling horror! Gently bringing tears of grief, songs from the shore can no longer reach me; only a storm, blowing coldly from there, can cross the grey, heaving sea!

If my longing eyes, surveying the shore, can no longer glimpse it, then I will gaze upward to the stars into that sacred distance!
Ah, beneath their placid light I once called her mine; there perhaps, O comforting future! There perhaps I shall meet her gaze.

David Gillingham has earned an international reputation as a composer of quality wind and percussion music, and this reputation has precipitated many commissions. Gillingham's compositions have been performed throughout the United States, Europe and Japan. He is the recipient of numerous awards and honors, including First Prize in the International Barlow Composition Contest in 1990 for Heroes, Lost and Fallen, and he has been Composer-in-Residence at several Midwest universities.
Dr. Gillingham is currently Professor of Music Composition at Central Michigan University. In addition to his expertise as a composer and teacher, he is an accomplished pianist, organist, and euphonium player.

Gillingham uses fresh tonal colors and textures in Vintage, to craft a work that never gets in the soloist's way. Vintage is a very expressive piece, with much emphasis on triplets, especially quarter notes on the same pitch. A good low register is required, as one must play melodically below F. Most of the piece has a quarter note pulse, with a short 6/8 section. A wonderful 46-measure cadenza before the end allows the performer a chance to show off in all registers. Stephen Mead, a master performer and advocate of the euphonium and its repertoire, calls the piece “...a modern classic...filled with romantic musical pictures...fanfares, dramatic percussion features, and difficult rhythmic figures.”
Vintage was commissioned by the Big Rapids, Michigan, High School Symphonic Band and it was premiered on January 18, 1991 at the Midwestern Conference on School Vocal and Instrumental Music in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

No solo performer profited more from Mozart's talent and generosity than the virtuoso horn player Joseph Leutgeb. When Leutgeb first joined the Salzburg orchestra in 1763, across town Leopold Mozart was beginning to manage the career of his seven-year-old son, already an unusually accomplished pianist and a budding composer. Wolfgang and Joseph eventually became both friends and colleagues, and the horn virtuoso even went on tour throughout Italy with the Mozarts in 1773. "He will certainly make his mark here," Wolfgang told his sister at the time, and when they arrived in Milan, Leopold wrote home to Salzburg, "He will make quite a fortune here, for he is extraordinarily popular."

Apparently Leutgeb never did make a fortune, and in 1777 when he relocated to Vienna (where he ran a cheese shop to supplement his income), he borrowed money from Leopold to make the trip. Wolfgang and Leutgeb remained unusually close, and after the composer himself moved to Vienna in 1781, they saw each other frequently. Several of Mozart's last letters make passing reference to his good friend: "I am going to give Leutgeb a surprise by going out to breakfast with him," the composer wrote to his wife Constanze, who was taking the cures at Baden; on another occasion, after he had spent the night at Leutgeb's home, he complained of the wretched job Joseph's wife had done laundering his nightcap and necktie. His next-to-last surviving letter, dating from early October of 1791, talks of taking Joseph to see The Magic Flute not once, but twice. "Joseph begged me to take him a second time..."

Although Leutgeb apparently asked Mozart for a concerto as early as 1777, the year the horn player moved to Vienna, the composer didn't get around to writing anything for another four years, when he turned out a lovely rondo for horn and orchestra. The celebrated series of four horn concertos, all of them written for Leutgeb, began in 1783. The standard numbering of these concertos is messy—they were actually written in the order 2, 4, 3, and 1 (which was left unfinished)—reflecting the order of publication, not composition.

The so-called First Horn Concerto (renumbered 386b) was in fact the last to be composed and was left incomplete, missing the middle movement. For several years musicologists dated it 1782 and thought that the Finale was revised seven years later. Only recently has it become clear that Mozart composed the concerto in 1791, the year he died.

Parable for Solo Horn (Parable VIII) is a musically stimulating and dramatically varied work of art. Its immediate effect is simple here-and-now reality; the second, and more vital, message suggested is of a lasting inner quality. Persichetti wrote a series of 24 parables in the later part of his life. These works are typically in one movement, and are written in an improvisatory manner, employing various unusual special effects possible with the given instrumentation. Most of the parables are for solo instruments, such as the ones for flute, oboe, bassoon, carillon, organ, harp, horn, alto saxophone, piccolo, clarinet, trumpet, English horn, viola, double bass, trombone, piano, guitar, tuba, and harpsichord. It seems as if Persichetti were attempting to accomplish what Paul Hindemith did. Hindemith wrote a sonata for every major instrument, but most of his sonatas included piano. Persichetti also wrote parables for brass quintet, band, string quartet, piano trio, and opera.

Written in 1866, Romance, Op. 67 is an appealingly melodious, slow, dreamy, subdued piece, featuring long high melodies and graceful arpeggios. The 1860s were perhaps the most contented years of Camille Saint-Saëns life. His home environment was comfortable, and in public he enjoyed a formidable reputation as a composer and virtuoso pianist. Although his material success and his sarcastic tongue made him many enemies, Gounod described him as “the French Beethoven.” This period also included the only professional teaching appointment Saint-Saëns held. From 1861 to 1865 he taught at the Ecole Niedermeyer, an institution founded to improve musical standards in French churches. Although strict about purely technical matters, Saint-Saëns was an inspiring teacher, and his students remembered the intellectual excitement he stimulated with his revelation of modern music and the arts in general.

Herbert L. Clarke was one of history's finest cornet players. He was a phenomenal soloist in John Philip Sousa's band and went on to conduct his own bands and to compose hundreds of pieces.

Intended for cornet, The Bride of the Waves was composed in 1900. Herbert Clarke entitled many of his pieces after the names of various ships. The Bride of the Waves is a light, entertaining dance piece subtitled "Polka Brillante." The piece has a lyrical introduction which leads into a variety of light sections. A cadenza and quick coda bring the piece to conclusion. The cornet is a mellow, lyrical instrument capable of both great expression and lightning fast technique. The cornet solo genre was geared toward showing off the soloist, which can mean extreme tempi, range, and even dramatizing by the performer. The challenge for the trumpeter is to play the less mellow trumpet with the light, deft qualities possessed by the cornet.

Early one morning in the summer of 1865, Johannes Brahms went for a walk in the woods of the Black Forest and conceived the opening theme of his Horn Trio in E-flat Major. He later showed his friend Albert Dietrich the spot "...on the wooded heights among the fir-trees..." where the theme first came to him. As he told Dietrich, "I was walking along one morning and as I came to this spot the sun shone out and the subject immediately suggested itself."

Although Brahms was very happy with his lodgings in the summer of 1865, something had occurred earlier in the year that gave him great sadness. In early February 1865, he experienced for the first time a death in his immediate family with the passing of his mother, Christiane. A telegram from his brother Fritz brought him the news that she had suffered a stroke, informing him, "If you want to see our mother once again, come home immediately.” By the time Brahms arrived in Hamburg, Christiane was dead.

Brahms was deeply affected by his mother's death. For the most part he retained his composure, taking care of the funeral arrangements and other business. His pain did show through on occasion, however. For example, a cellist named Josef Gänßbacher dropped by on Brahms unexpectedly and found a weeping Brahms practicing Bach on the piano. Continuing to play, Brahms told him about his mother’s death.

In the year after his mother’s death, the only other piece Brahms worked on besides the German Requiem (Clara Schumann told Florence May, “We all think he wrote it in her memory, though he has never expressly said so. . .”) was the Horn Trio. His mother's presence can be found in several places in the trio, from the slow movement marked mesto (sorrowful) to the possibility that a theme that appears in the last two movements is based on a folk tune that Christiane taught Brahms as a child. It is possible that the loss of his mother, and Brahms's subsequent thoughts about his childhood, even helped determine the unusual instrumentation of the piece: horn, violin and piano are all instruments Brahms studied as a boy.

La Basque, by Marin Marais, is the famous one minute encore piece used by horn virtuoso Dennis Brain, who called it “. . .a little French dance, which also happens to be the shortest piece I know.”

The Prelude and Fugue in D Minor is the sixth set in the first collection of The Well-Tempered Clavier, a two-volume collection of preludes and fugues arranged chromatically in the twelve major and minor keys. Bach composed the collection shortly after the discovery of well-tempered tuning, in which the interval of a third was used as the tuning measurement rather than the 5th as in the older system. The tuning by thirds, allowing for slight discrepancies of a few cents between certain pitches, assured that the entire keyboard could be tuned rather than just certain keys. In the older system, referred to as just intonation, the keyboard was tuned in fifths. Acoustically, it is not possible to tune all the fifths of the keyboard equally. As a result, certain keys were avoided as being untunable. Today, keyboard instruments are tuned by half steps or equal temperament.

John Cage wrote “My favorite music is the music I haven’t yet heard. I don’t hear the music I write, I write in order to hear the music I haven’t yet heard.” The desire to discover new sounds and abandon tradition were hallmarks of John Cage’s career. The Perilous Night is a piece written for prepared piano, in which various objects are inserted between the strings of the piano, thus completely transforming the timbral characteristics of the instrument. The Perilous Night is one of Cage’s more complex preparations and calls for materials such as bolts, screws, nuts, rubber, weather stripping and bamboo slivers. The piece is based on an Irish myth recounted by mythographer and long time friend of Cage, Joseph Campbell. In this story a hero must spend the night on a ‘perilous bed’ which rests on a floor of slick, polished jasper. As the hero approaches the bed, it ricochets off the walls and across the floor. Once able to take his place on the bed, the hero is pelted with arrows and attacked by a lion. This legend is said to tell of the dangers of erotic life; and the music, written during a sad stage of Cage’s life recounts the feelings of misery from separation and the loneliness and terror one feels when love becomes unhappy.

The works of Beethoven are categorized into three developmental periods. The Sonata, Op. 31, No. 3 was composed during Beethoven’s second compositional period. It is the only four movement sonata composed in this period. Typical sonatas in the classical period were made up of three or four movements. These movements usually come in the form of fast-slow-fast, or fast-fast-slow-fast, but in this sonata the typical slow movement is missing. Beethoven’s intention to give vaster dimensions to his sonatas is evident in the expansive work-out demanded in each individual movement.

Chopin’s Grand Valse Brillianté was his first published waltz (though not earliest composed). Written in 1831 and published in the summer of 1834 in dedication to his pupil Laura Horsford, this waltz stands as unique among his previous waltzes. It alone is denoted as “Grand”. The waltzes composed earlier then the Opus 18 are shorter, simpler, and much less like ballroom music, whereas Opus 18 is a true ballroom picture, a spirited work with infectious rhythms unfolding one attractive melody after another.

The Concerto in F Minor is the first of two concertos written by Chopin. At the time of its writing, Chopin, was in love with a woman by the name of Constantia Gladowska. The Larghetto is Constantia musically idealized. Chopin never did declare his love to Constantia. His only love-song was heard in this concerto as a tonal monument to consecrated passion.

The three sonatas of Opus 10, written in the years 1796-1797 are dedicated to the Countess von Browne. By this time it is clear that Beethoven had a very good notion of his own worth. If he believed Opus 9 to be his best work up until that point, he had no reason to regard Opus 10 as better still. He indeed had good reason to be proud of it. The passionate first sonata of the set in C minor displays the impulsiveness of youth and is a considerable advance in personal expressiveness. The first movement is characterized by its far-flung opening gesture, its melodic suspensions suggesting suppressed agitation, and its dramatic, breathless pauses. This same passion is seen in the quick, nearly violent arpeggio figures in the second and slower movement, and by the abruptness and short temperedness of the finale.

The Piano Trio in G Minor is the only chamber work by Clara Schumann. Her main output was that of solo piano music. It is also the only four-movement work in sonata form that she allowed to be published. Tonight’s program contains three of these movements. The Trio is one of the most successful works of this composer. Being a woman composer in the 19th Century was very intimidating. Clara wrote of this work: “There are several attractive passages in the trio, and I think it is also quite successful formally. Of course it remains a woman’s work, always lacking in strength and now and then in invention.” Although she was not sure what to think of her own work, it is among the most attractive pieces of Romantic literature for piano trio.

NOTES

INTRADA: Adoration and Praise is based on the hymn “Praise To The Lord, The Almighty.” The composer of the hymn-tune is not known, but the basic melody first appeared in the Stralsund Gesangbuch in 1665. This magnificent hymn of praise to God is given several melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic variations.

Candide, the comic operetta based on Voltaire’s work, had an unfortunate musical life on Broadway in 1956. However, the Overture to Candide had its premiere by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of the composer in 1957, and has become a favorite in the concert repertoire of both orchestras and bands. The work is very rhythmic, combining the classical and popular style into a clever and modern composition. (WGM)

The spiritual, Amazing Grace, was written by John Newton (1725-1807), a slaveship captain who, after years of transporting slaves across the Atlantic Ocean to the New World, suddenly saw through divine grace the evil of his acts. First published in 1835 by William Walker in The Southern Harmony, Amazing Grace has become one of the most beloved of all American songs.

Do Not Go Gentle Into That Good Night was inspired by a Dylan Thomas poem of the same name. While not a programmatic depiction of the poem, the work attempts to recreate the essence of the poem in sound. The opening motive, representative of the life force, permeates much of the work. An Ivesian use of sound layers—in the form of polytonal hymns—calls to mind the struggles and persistence of the human spirit and its refusal to “go gentle.” The piece closes with a strong sense of affirmation and continuance.

Do not go gentle into that good night,
Old age should burn and rave at close of day;
Rage, rage against the dying of the light.
Though wise men at their end know dark is right,
Because their words had forked no lightning they
Do not go gentle into that good night.

Good men, the last we by, crying how bright
Their frail deeds might have danced in the green bay,
Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

Wild men who caught and sang the sun in flight,
And learn, too late, they grieved it on its way,
Do not go gentle into that good night.

Grave men, near death, who see with blinding sight
Blind eyes could blaze like meteors and be gay,
Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

And you, my father, there on the sad height,
Curse, bless, me now with your fierce tears, I pray.
Do not go gentle into that good night.
Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

Written in 1909, First Suite in E\textsuperscript{b} for Military Band is generally regarded as a cornerstone work for concert band and is one of the few band originals that has been transcribed for symphony orchestra. The opening theme of the Chaconne is repeated by various instruments as others weave varied filigrees about the ground theme. In the middle of the first movement, the principal theme is inverted for several repetitions. The Intermezzo is based on a variation of the Chaconne theme, presented first in an agitated style, then in a cantabile mood, the two styles alternating throughout the movement with remarkable and deceivingly simple-sounding counterpoint that is as charming as it is masterful. The March is introduced by a British band quick-march pulse from the brass and followed by Holst's Land of Hope and Glory version of the Chaconne theme in the great sostenuto tradition of the singing chorus. Eventually, the two themes are combined in a thrilling counterpoint leading to the coda with a dynamic marking of $\text{ffff}$.
The creation of When the Morning Stars Sang was inspired by the biblical story of Job. His story is one that many people can relate to today. During his life he went through much turmoil, trial and tribulation, but never gave up. His spirit was unquenchable and infectious and his positive approach to life can be an important lesson for today’s youth because of its “never give up” philosophy. When the Morning Stars Sang incorporates the old spiritual, Balm in Gilead, the text of which is a plea for healing (a balm), courage, and strength to get through tough times and to have the determination to go on even when the going becomes overwhelming. The music is a text painting of this old spiritual; sometimes intimate and reflective, sometimes boisterous and unrelenting, yet it never loses its positive, courageous, and tenacious attitude. It strives to inspire all performers and listeners to search for an inner and higher power in their being, which will give them strength and endurance to be courageous during difficult times.

Chorale Prelude: Rejoice Ye Pure In Heart has as its theme Psalm 20:5, “We will rejoice in Thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners.” The words were written in 1865 by Edward Plumptre as a processional hymn for a choir festival, and originally had 11 stanzas, to accommodate the length of time it would take a large choir to traverse the center aisle of a great cathedral. The tune MARION was composed by Arthur Messiter, and was named for his mother. It undergoes an unusual number of key changes for a short hymn: F major, D minor, C major, B♭ major, D major, and back to F major!

Dr. Neal Woodruff
Dr. Neal Woodruff ('91) joined the Olivet faculty in the Fall semester of 2000. After receiving his B.A. in Music Education from Olivet, Woodruff went on to complete an M.M. in Vocal Pedagogy/Performance and Choral Conducting at Stephen F. Austin State University ('95), and a D.M.A. in Conducting at the University of Oklahoma ('02). His primary teachers have been Dennis Shrock (conducting), Terry Eder (conducting), and Deborah Dalton (voice).

A former member of the Chicago Symphony Chorus, Woodruff was twice selected as an understudy soloist, performing under the baton of such noted conductors as Sir Georg Solti, Zubin Mehta, James Levine, and Margaret Hillis. Other performance credits include the title role in Offenbach’s The Tales of Hoffmann, and Ferrando in Cosi fan Tutte by Mozart; oratorio work includes Handel’s Messiah, Beethoven’s Missa Solemnis and Mass in C, and Haydn’s Creation.

Dr. Woodruff’s teaching assignments at the university include: Testament Men’s Choir, University Orchestra, Concert Singers, Handbell Choir, Music in Worship, Music History, Vocal Pedagogy, and Music Drama. In addition, Dr. Woodruff maintains a private voice studio.

Married for 10 years to Shannon (Dunn), the Woodruff’s have two children: Ryan Isaiah (8) and Kayelyn Hope (2). The Woodruff’s reside in Kankakee.

Orpheus Choir
Orpheus Choir, now in its eighth decade of annual performances, represents Olivet in concerts on the university’s educational region (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin), and has sung at many general assemblies of the Church of the Nazarene.

The choir was founded by Prof. Walter B. Larsen in 1932. Prof. Naomi Larsen, led the choir after her husband’s passing in 1957, conducting until 1972. Dr. D. George Dunbar served as conductor of Orpheus from 1972 until retiring in 1999. Appointed conductor of Orpheus Choir in 1999, Dr. Jeff Bell serves as Professor of Music at Olivet, where he earned an undergraduate degree in Music Education in 1981. He also earned the M.Mus. degree from the University of Illinois in 1983, and the Doctor of Arts degree from Ball State University in 1996.

Orpheus Choir has appeared in concerts across the nation, as well as Canada, Mexico, and Israel. It has performed twice at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C., and three times at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado. Orpheus Choir was selected to sing at two national Music Educators National Conference conventions in California, and has sung at the Illinois Music Education Association convention. The choir has also represented Olivet at the annual Praise Gathering in Indianapolis each year since 1978.

The repertoire of this select group of singers includes anthems, hymns, spirituals, and contemporary compositions, representing different styles and periods of choral music.

Dr. Jeff Bell
Dr. Jeff Bell is the fourth conductor of Olivet Nazarene University’s Orpheus Choir, and has served as Professor of Music at Olivet Nazarene University since 1997. He came to this position after 13 years on the music faculty of Indiana Wesleyan University. Bell earned the B.S. in Music Education from Olivet Nazarene University, the M.Mus. in Voice Performance and Literature from the University of Illinois, and the Doctor of Arts in Voice Performance from Ball State University.

Dr. Bell is a past conductor of the ONU Orchestra, and is the current conductor of the Kankakee Valley Symphony Orchestra Chorus. He serves as organist for College Church of the Nazarene in Bourbonnais. Dr. Bell has performed in recitals, opera, and oratorio, and is a published composer and arranger. He and his wife Carole, and daughters Christin and Katie Jo reside in Bradley, IL.

THE HALE-WILDER VOICE SCHOLARSHIP

The scholarship is available to music majors with Voice as their applied area. Selection is made through a competitive audition in which participants sing four songs, one each in English, Italian, French, and German.

THE BENEFAC'TORS

Robert Hale, formerly with the New York City Opera Company now sings actively throughout Europe, appearing in all the major venues, and on occasion at the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York City. The late Dean Wilder was Director of Vocal Instruction at William Jewell College, Independence, Missouri, and led the Dean Wilder Singers. Both men teamed up to sing over 2500 concerts, with several taking place on Olivet's campus.

Gloria in excelsis Deo.
Et in terra pax
Hominibus bonae voluntatis.
Laudamus te. Benedicimus te.

Adoramus te. Glorificamus te.

Gratias agimus tibi
Propter magnam gloriam tuam.

Domine Deus, Rex coelestis, Deus Pater omnipotens.
Domine Fili unigenite, Jesu Christe.

Lord God, Lamb of God,
Filius Patris.
Qui tollis peccata mundi,

Miserere nobis.
Qui tollis peccata mundi,

Suscipe deprecationem nostrum.
Qui sedes ad dexteram Patris,

Miserere nobis.
Quoniam tu solus sanctus.
Tu solus Dominus.
Tu solus Altissimus, Jesu Christe

Cum Sancto Spiritu
In Gloria De Patris. Amen.

Glory to God in the highest.
And on earth peace
To men of good will.
We praise Thee. We bless
Thee.

We adore Thee. We glorify
Thee.

We give thanks to Thee.
According to Thy great glory.

Lord God, Heavenly king,
God the Father almighty.

Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son.

Domine Deus, Agnus Dei,
Son of the Father.

Thou who takest away the
sins of the world,
Have mercy upon us.

Thou who takest away the
sins of the world,
Receive our prayer.

Thou who sittest at the right hand of the Father,
Have mercy upon us.

For Thou alone art holy.
Thou alone art the Lord.
Thou alone art on high,

Jesus Christ
With the Holy Spirit
In the glory of God the Father. Amen.

Chrysalis Women’s Choir is a group of 36 soprano and alto voices under the direction of Prof. Martha Dalton. This is a well-rounded group of women whose majors and concentrations vary. During the school year, these young women bring their music ministry to various churches throughout the ONU educational region. Concerts and other appearances round out the choir’s busy schedule.

Martha Dalton, a coloratura soprano, was born and raised in Nashville, Tennessee where she received her B.S. in Music from Trevecca Nazarene University in 1976. She received a Master of Music (Vocal Performance) from Miami University, Oxford, Ohio in 1994 and a Master of Music (Vocal Pedagogy) from The Chicago College of Performing Arts at Roosevelt University (2004). Professor Dalton has been a member of the faculty at Olivet Nazarene University since 1996. She is married to Dr. Ron Dalton, Professor of Practical Theology at ONU. They have three sons, John (age 24), James (21), and Stephen (20). The Daltons reside in Bourbonnais, Illinois where she sings for church services, weddings, and civic organizations.

NOTES

TEMPERED STEEL – As we grow stronger and more resilient through hardship, we become “tempered.” Tempered Steel is a celebration of our triumph over unavoidable hardships and obstacles that we regularly face. It rejoices in the tenacious and unrelenting resolve that is part of us all.

As the title implies, the metallic sonorities of the wind band are continually explored and developed throughout the work, while the “tempest” is a symmetric hexachord that is exposed and developed through a variety of juxtaposed gestures and themes. Tempered Steel was “forged” in 1997 as the first work to be commissioned by the Big 12 Band Directors Association. -CY

OCTOBER – October is my favorite month. Something about the crisp autumn air and the subtle change in light always make me a little sentimental, and as I started to sketch I felt that same quiet beauty in the writing. The simple, pastoral melodies and subsequent harmonies are inspired by the great English Romantics (Vaughn Williams, Elgar) as I felt that this style was also perfectly suited to capture the natural and pastoral soul of the season. I’m quite happy with the end result, especially because I feel there just isn’t enough lush, beautiful music written for winds. October was premiered on May 14th, 2000, and is dedicated to Brian Anderson, the man who brought it all together. -EW

INVENTIONS from THE SACRED HARP – This repertoire was first published in shape-note collections, which used a special shape for each note of the scale in three-part (sometimes four-part) unaccompanied choral settings. The most popular shape-note books were Southern Harmony and The Sacred Harp, both published and widely used in the Appalachian regions. People would gather by the thousands in various locations in the south to sing these great songs.

Inventions from the Sacred Harp presents a set of variations on the tune Resignation (text based on the Twenty-Third Psalm), which was first published in this collection in 1835. When Resignation is introduced (first slow section), the harmonic setting is very similar to the way it would have sounded (archaic, raw, linear harmony) when it was first published in the early 1800s. The title, Sacred Harp, refers to the human sacred harp—the voice. -JC

STAR WARS MEDLEY – The brilliant musical score of Star Wars, by John Williams, is full of high adventure and soaring spirits in keeping with the character of the film itself. Themes for each of the characters, written in the manner of leitmotifs, appear in a variety of permutations determined by the dramatic action as it unfolds on the screen.

For the Star Wars Medley, arranger James H. Burden has chosen representative portions of both the main and end titles, using their major themes to fashion what might be more suitably titled an overture. This faithful transcription to the medium of the concert band retains all the fire and excitement, tension, and exuberance of the original score. -JB
