Author and Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel once said, "Today, a new generation will assume responsibility for its history. And yet, there is this: The past lives on in the present, impossible to forget." As we have begun this school year, we have also begun the journey into a new century of Olivet history with the celebration of our Centennial.

It would serve us well to take a deeper look into the meaning of Mr. Wiesel's two favorite words: "and yet." As we continue through the Centennial year at Olivet in the months to come, behind us lie 100 years of legacy, rich history, strong tradition, and a firm foundation in an "Education With a Christian Purpose."

In reflecting upon the 100 years that lie behind us, we also must look ahead. The 100 years to come will lead us on a journey of faith with God into territory we cannot yet see. We do not know the plans that our Father holds for any of our futures, whether as individuals, as a university, or as a community of believers. We do not know these plans, and those who began the Olivet community in 1907 did not know those plans.

But our Creator knows them all. Proverbs 19:21 (NIV) says, "Many are the plans in a man's heart but it is the Lord's purpose that prevails."

*E*ach day that our feet carry us between Chapman and Williams, Parrott and Nesbitt, Burke and Ludwig, Reed and Weber, we carry plans in our hearts of where we would like to go and what we would like to accomplish, much like the men and women whose names now grace our buildings and are carved in the bricks of the Quad beneath our feet. However, it is God Who orders our steps along this journey.

We can be continually amazed at the path that He leads us down, the path where His purpose prevails. We often hear Jeremiah 29:11 quoted in chapels, Sunday services and daily devotions, and are reminded that the plans that God has for us will prosper us and provide us with a hope and a future!

As we have journeyed through the beginnings of this Centennial year, behind us lie 100 years of legacy, 100 years of Christian purpose, 100 years of progress and, yet, before us lie 100 years of hope, 100 years of opportunity, and 100 years of blessing in the Lord.

and yet, there is this ...

float on ...

Homecoming weekend has always been a huge part of Olivet's history. The weekend is not only filled with school spirit involving the current student population, but is also filled with events for alumni. Today, the jam-packed Homecoming weekend involves the Homecoming football game and the first games of the season for the men's and women's basketball teams, along with many different events for alumni, including class reunions.

But, historically, Olivet's Homecoming weekend did not include a football game, because there was no team until 1976. The weekend revolved primarily around the basketball team. There was no need to schedule time for a football game during the day — creating time for a parade.

Olivet's first Homecoming parade took place in 1953. The parade began in downtown Kankakee and wound its way back to campus. Students spent the week before the parade working non-stop on the floats. Each class was responsible for a float, as were different clubs and organizations on campus. The most impressive floats were almost always the float carrying the Homecoming Queen and her Court, and the one carrying the basketball team.

There was a competition between the classes to see which class could build the best float. There was also a competition between the clubs. "The International Club always won a lot of honors," remembers Gordon Wickersham ('47). The parades were extremely successful at getting the entire campus hyped up about the Homecoming game, and everyone was full of school spirit.

In 1982, during the 75th anniversary of Olivet, the last Homecoming parade took place, but it wasn't the last parade by design. The following year, in 1983, floats were made as usual in preparation for the parade, but severe weather made it impossible for the parade to go on. This happened for three consecutive years.

By the time a year came around with acceptable weather, Olivet was full of students who had never participated in a Homecoming parade, and the interest and excitement for the parade had faded.

"I enjoyed the parades immensely," said Wickersham, who added that he would like to see Olivet reestablish the tradition. He even suggested that it might be a good idea for the different dorms, clubs and classes to make sturdy, immobile floats, that could withstand weather, all around campus, and compete once again.

Some students would even like to participate in the fun that the alumni remember so fondly.

"[The floats] sound like they would be a cool way for our classes to compete and, at the same time, get together and work as a team with our peers," said junior Kady Oring. "It could be a good thing during this time of year — something to relieve the stress of the new semester."

Senior Erin Hall also contemplated the possibility of having a parade.

"I loved the homecoming parade in high school," she said. "I think it would be a lot of fun to have one at Olivet, [but] should we bring it back? I don't know. ... Homecoming is [still] an awful lot of fun without it, so I don't know if it matters that much."

Dedication

It is with great excitement and pleasure that the 2006–2007 Aurora staff dedicates the Centennial Aurora to Dr. Jay Martinson. He was chosen for his ongoing dedication not only to his students, but to the entire Olivet Nazarene University campus as well.

“Dr. Jay,” as his students and friends call him, came to Olivet in 1993 as a professor of communication. Having completed a Bachelor of Arts degree in English at Olivet in 1986 and a master’s degree in communication at the University of Illinois, he also earned a Ph.D. in communication from Illinois during his first year of teaching at Olivet, and became the chair of the department within that year. As chair of the Department of Communication, he has many responsibilities, including advising students, teaching courses and hiring new employees. In addition to these responsibilities, he is also the faculty sponsor for the Associated Student Council and serves on several other committees.

According to his wife, Jeanette, Dr. Jay is perfectly content with his job and loves teaching. Although some would contend that he would do well in the administrative arena, Jeanette said that he loves contact with his students and would miss the classroom too much to pursue that career path.

Jay Russell Martinson was born on February 1, 1964, in Green Bay, Wis. He married Jeanette Westenberger, a 1987 Olivet graduate, in December 1986. They have four children: Rachel, an Olivet freshman, born in 1988; T.J., born in 1991; Lucy, born in 2003 and adopted from China in 2004; and Tad, born in

Despite his busy work schedule and many duties at Olivet, "his No. 1 concern is always his family.
He's not caught up in all the prestige [of his position]," Jeanette said. When it comes to his wife and children, Dr. Jay reflects the idea of Joshua 24:15: "Choose for yourselves this day whom you will serve ... but as for me and my household, we will serve the Lord." His constant self-sacrificing attitude and love for God have made him a favorite of Olivet students and faculty.

"I have a lot of respect for him," said senior Communication Studies student McCartha McKenzie.
"He has a lot of integrity and he shows it in his family. He is a role model in and out of the classroom."

Olivet Nazarene University was founded in the fall of 1907 in the little town of Georgetown, Ill., about 90 miles south of our present campus. The following year, the school was relocated a few miles away to a new community called Olivet, Ill. The University remained in that location until a fire nearly destroyed the campus in November of 1939. Rather than rebuild on that site, Olivet relocated to Bourbonnais, to a campus which was formerly occupied by St. Viator College, and here, the school has prospered.

This year, 2007, ONU is commemorating its Centennial. Throughout this special year, there will be many opportunities for looking back in celebration of the history and development of this university. Olivet has stood the test of time and is a vibrant, growing and healthy school as it turns 100 years old.

And yet ... even as we look back, the focus for Olivet is always on tomorrow.

Our mission is to provide an "Education With a Christian Purpose" for each new generation. We prepare individuals for a world that does not yet exist. So as we pause from time to time this year to glance over our shoulders, be assured that the center of our attention is on how to make Olivet an even better school as we move forward into our second century.

There are certain primary commitments that will guide our journey. We are dedicated to the integration of faith and learning. We seek wisdom as well as knowledge. We work to develop character along with understanding. Olivet must remain mission-centered if our tomorrows are to be as productive as our past.

"We are 100 years old and counting ... counting our blessings."

As president of the University, I am encouraged by both our history and our future. The Scripture says, "... He who began good work in you will carry it on to completion until the day of Christ Jesus." I am thankful for the faithfulness of God to Olivet. I rejoice in the fine faculty and staff who pour their lives and talents into a wonderful student body. What good things await us as individuals and as a university? We are 100 years old and counting ... counting our blessings.

The Olivet Centennial reminds us all that we are linked with eternity and are part of an international and intergenerational family of Olivetians who daily make a difference in this world. I am standing on tiptoes; my face is pressed to the windows of tomorrow to see what good things God will surely bring to pass. You see, the past has been great ... and yet, the best is yet to be!

Everyone has a story, a reason for being, transcending even to the steps of Olivet Nazarene University. Each student that walks the grounds is a living testimony of God's interactive presence, even if that presence is not directly recognized. Coupled with a record number of incoming freshman students, this produces the thriving environment of colorful individuals that Olivet is today. Despite the dreary rain that encompassed the campus, Olivet's 100th freshman class moved in with a beaming excitement about the coming school year and returning students showed excitement as they were reunited with friends and roommates.

first week

The first week of school is always jam-packed with events for students to socialize with and get to know one another before schedules start to pile up with homework. One popular event is A Night at Hidden Cove. Students can roller-skate, play video games, slide down a giant slide, and practice their swings at the batting cages and driving range. There are also several opportunities for the freshmen to start getting involved in Olivet life — including the annual freshman picnic in the Bowlings' backyard.

At Olivet, each year marks the start of something old and something new: the introduction of new blood with age-old traditions. One way that the two come together at the beginning of each year is through the many events that make up Ollies Follies.

This year's events included the traditional crazy games, athletic competitions, and the skit and talent competition, as well as the football game, spirit contest and picnic lunch in the Warming House. The crazy games included five events: speed eating; the dizzy water game; musical hula hoops; the inner-tube game; and a classic favorite, the fish and egg game.

The week's events featured fierce competition between the classes, with the seniors coming out victorious.

Broadway Revue

This year's Broadway Revue certainly offered an array of talents and styles, as well as a wide range of age groups. Broadway Revue takes a large amount of work in a short amount of time.

In the spring semester, Green Room votes for the director, and behind-the-scenes work begins immediately. The first order of business: picking the songs. Once the songs are picked, the team of directors makes sure there is instrumental music for each song, changes the lyrics as needed and submits the songs for final approval.

After the songs are picked, it is time to raid the prop room for costumes, sets and other various materials.

"I spent half my summer sewing pantaloons for 'Creation of Man,'" said director Cirena Sifferd, laughing.

After a summer full of hard work, school begins with only two weeks until rehearsals start and and casts are assigned. After two weeks of rehearsal, Broadway Revue opens for the week-end of spectacle.

"Cirena and the heads of her technical crew were so well-prepared for this production that even with only two weeks to rehearse the show still came together smoothly and efficiently," said Hahnah Jackson, Green Room president. "Costumes had already been made songs choreographed and set designs drawn all that remained was casting. Between the cast and the crew, we put together a great show, part of the wonder being the incredibly low-stress atmosphere which the directors maintained."

dorm life

Each year, as students move in to their dorm rooms and apartments, there are not only tests, papers and projects awaiting them, but also many crazy times within the walls of those very rooms. From movie nights, video games and outrageous costumes to late-night pizzas, floor parties and open-dorm mayhem, there are always hundreds of memories and friends to be made throughout the year.

Weekends

Most Olivet students have experienced the grueling agenda of classes and extracurricular activities that consume our four years here. However, some students have found that the weekend is the perfect opportunity to relax. Whether hanging out at Kankakee River State Park or taking the train to Chicago, Olivet students have discovered several great ways to have fun amidst their busy schedules.

Every year at the end of October, Social Committee sponsors the affair of the season. Students from all classes use their creativity to design costumes that will impress their friends and win them prizes. For the past several years, the Candy and Costume Party has taken place at Hidden Cove, which hosts several different activities for the students. Pumpkin-carving contests and hayrides have always been a big hit, but the most anticipated event will always be the competition for best costume.

Homecoming 2006 officially began the Olivet Nazarene University Centennial celebration. Hundreds of alumni returned to their alma mater to join in the festivities.

After the crowning of the 2006 Homecoming queen on Thursday night, a weekend packed to the brim with activities was to follow. Friday morning's annual Homecoming chapel was followed by a special Centennial flair. All who had attended chapel gathered in Red Square for a balloon launch to mark the start of the Centennial celebration. Friday afternoon was filled with fierce competition, as the ladies of each class competed for the title of 2006 Powderpuff champion. The Class of 2007 finished the tournament victorious for the second year in a row.

Both the men's and women's basketball teams put up hard fights as they each competed against Point Loma on Friday night in front of soldout crowds. A packed house appeared again on Saturday for the football team's game against St. Ambrose.

7. A spirited group of students gathered for Friday night's basketball games against Point Loma clad in face paint, wigs and outlandish clothes to show their support.

8. Offensive lineman Josh Lindstrom congratulates defensive back Chris Bjorkland after a play during Saturday's game against St. Ambrose.

9. The senior Powderpuff team lifts teammate Debbie Zwirkoski in the air after her championship-game-winning touchdown, the only touchdown of the game.

Chalfant Hall was decorated with elegant lights and tapestries on Nov. 9 for Olivet's Homecoming Coronation. Court members Lindsey Bailey, Erin Hall, Sarah McDevitt, Dana Scheller and Katie Zurcher were each honored for their Christlike character, compassion and leadership. They were escorted by Christian Sanchez, Gary Bishir, Chris Sanders, Jason Athialy and McCartha McKenzie, respectively.

There were few dry eyes in the room when recorded messages filled with encouraging and proud words from the families of the court members were played as each was presented to the crowd.

Following the presentation of each of the girls, musical performances by fellow students and the endearing messages of their parents, weeks of voting and anticipation came to an end as 2005 queen and current resident director of Williams Hall Molly Taylor crowned Women's Residential Life President Erin Hall as the 2006 Homecoming Queen.

fall play

Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" — a rendering of one of America's most tragic moments — came to life on Olivet's stage Nov. 16–18 under the direction of professor Jerry Cohagan.

Drawing on the generalized life and happenings of the late 17th century, the author captured this period of witchhunts in America within a short, four-act play. It opens in the home of Reverend Samuel Parris (played by Kennedy Delaney), who is wracked with grief over his daughter and her coma-like illness. It ends with this same man, accompanied by Reverend John Hale, Elizabeth Proctor and John Proctor (played by Matthew McMahan, Jessica Hulse and Michael McIntire, respectively) — all brought to their knees by the representative blindness of the Church in society to the truth. One audience member commented that she attended two nights straight, and the drama of the play brought tears to her eyes.

Music and tradition that reaches beyond Olivet's conception: that is the magic of Handel's Messiah. This year marked the 71st annual presentation of the honored work at Olivet.

For many, the production is what brings home the message of the holiday season: the awesome retelling of Christ's birth, death and healing resurrection. And yet, it is so much more: to those who attend, it is the message of joy and hope — the very essence of humanity. For this single concert of the year, all areas of the Department of Music join for two nights to sing about Christ.

christmas banquet

A night of sophistication and warmth amid the cold and hurriedness of the winter season is what awaited those who attended the annual Christmas Banquet in December.

On Dec. 16, students across campus suited up in their finest to celebrate the end of the semester and to join in the festive Christmas spirit. Some gathered an hour before dinner in Birchard Gymnasium to get snapshots of memories in a winter wonderland specially decorated for the event. Those finished with photos mingled and chatted with other students — perhaps sampling the hors d'oeuvres along the way — before being ushered to their seats by Social Committee members in charge of the evening's events.

As students made their way into Chalfant Hall, the scene was cozy: lights dimmed low as the Don Reddick Jazz Trio issued forth smooth, but jazzed-up, Christmas tunes. While the trio played, students enjoyed a catered dinner, followed by entertainment from comedian Taylor Mason and his lively puppets. The evening ended with the honoring of Dr. Larry Ferren, who has “made a significant difference on this campus,” said Barb Hart, vice president of social affairs. It was a night full of memories and warmth in commemoration of the coming holiday season and another year gone by.

a common tune

Every Wednesday night of the 2006–2007 school year, something new could be heard coming from Ludwig Center. A new popular event was taking place on Olivet campus: the Common Grounds student concert series.

“The concert series started out of a desire ... to have a spot for students to share their musical and artistic talents,” said junior Joe Mullikin, organizer of the weekly series.

The concert series was initiated a year ago by Kris Nokes, a 2006 graduate, and has continued to grow. Students have been packing the coffee shop ever since, with attendance averaging between 75–100 per show.

Many of the performers are excited to show off their musical gifts.

“My whole purpose in playing at Common Grounds was to have a good, relaxing night of music with some awesome friends,” said senior Jordan Bumgarner.

Senior Blake Gardner, part of the duo Pushmode, thrives on the live energy the coffee shop shows bring.

“Performing live shows is my favorite thing to do, he said,” as long as I throw down in those shows and give it my full energy.”

Performers have many favorite moments.

“I was playing ‘The Luckiest’ by Ben Folds,” recalled senior Aaron Palmer, “and I accidentally glanced at Rory Fry, who was staring deep into my eyes, and I busted out laughing in the middle of the song.”

Bumgarner looks beyond his performance.

“I guess, for me, the best part of it all was to see my friends and anyone else at the show to support me and enjoy the music,” he said. “I’ve been through this whole college thing, so I know how busy life can get around here, but to see faces that I have built great friendships with over the years take time out of their busy schedule to see a goofy kid play some chords on his guitar [means] the world to me. These shows were the best way for me to show my thankfulness — which is through music.”

Many are quick to give credit to Mullikin.

“Joe has a lot of patience and commitment,” Sophomore Zachary Taylor said. “He definitely deserves a thumbs-up!”

Concertgoers and performers hope that the student concert series will continue to prosper for years to come.

“The concert series offers a great opportunity for students to share their gifts in a relaxed environment with their peers,” Bumgarner said. “It gives busy musicians a change of pace by offering a more laid-back experience, and it also gives underdogs a great opportunity to spread their wings if they have never performed before.”

Spiritual Life

a christian purpose

"Lord ... give me a passion ... give me Your heart." Spiritual Life. A prayer and two simple words that have challenged and changed Olivet from the inside out. Spiritual Life began in the early 1970s in response to students who felt the heartbeat of God: they had a passion to reach both those in the inner campus and those outside of it.

As long as Olivet has existed, there have always been passion-filled people who felt the call to minister — students who were concerned with the spiritual well-being of themselves, their fellow students and their surrounding neighbors. Many alumni recall the years when Prayer Band would lift praises to the Lord every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday on the second floor of Burke Administration Building. And yet, the foundational years found Olivet's ministries with no unifying body; each ministry team was on its own, often straining to meet financial and other burdens. Thus, the organization known today as Spiritual Life was born.

Spiritual Life first appeared in 1967. It was built by the students and for the students. Originally established as a four-phase program (encompassing four ministry areas), the organization was under the jurisdiction of the Student Council and referred to as the "Spiritual Outreach Program." The fervor of the students to serve within the program grew so much in that first year that more than one-third of the student body was reported as being actively involved in serving and ministry. The formation of this group took raw energy, and it resulted in not only the spreading of God's Word into the community, but also the necessary spiritual growth of the student body.

Within a short time, what began as an outreach program within the control of the Student Council became a full-fledged organization of its own, expanding into 20 different ministry groups. Olivet is not merely a place where men and women receive education and plan their future career prospects; rather, Olivet is a place for students to grow and spread their wings.

Former associate chaplain and alumnus Bill Bahr stated that Spiritual Life has had "leaps forward and steps backward," but that it was always about the "call to save the lost." The campus' first chaplain, Dr. Bill Bray, helped guide the fervor of this ministry, initiating student-led worship in chapel and allowing the overall growth and activity of Spiritual Life, ranging from small-group ministries to city-wide outreaches.

The Spiritual Life organization, then stands as a challenge to students to do something, to find out what they truly believe, and to step out in faith in God. As the motto goes "in-reach, outreach, and up-reach." When we give ourselves over to God in faith — a call that we must answer as the body of Christ — Bahr asserts that we "can either do a tremendous amount of help, or do nothing."

fall revival

"Lord, if You can use anything, You can use me. ... Take my hands ... my feet; touch my heart. ... If You can use anything, today ... You can use me. Amen."

Which road do you choose when you come to a crossroad? Pastor Bud Reedy of Stillmeadow Church of the Nazarene in York, Pa., posed this very question — in a more direct manner — during Fall Revival 2006. For three days, Sept. 18–20, Reedy took the campus to the cross; he taught the Olivet community about lifting up the cross in the midst of life. He challenged everyone to embrace the cross, and on the final day, he encouraged everyone to take up and carry the cross.

The "Crosswalk" was what Reedy called it. There are two movements within Christianity — two roads — to choose from: cast away the cross as a "symbol of oppression" or embrace it in the very midst of life.

"God is taking the cross," Reedy said, "... and He's jamming it right into the middle of the Church. And [He's] asking ... 'What are you going to do with the cross upon which My Son, Jesus, died?'"

The cross, he said, goes against everything that the world says is right and proportionate. It is an "obstruction" that we can never ignore or forget, he said. It was not meant to be "comfortable." In fact, "comfortable Christianity" is what he deemed the greatest enemy of the Church: Reedy stressed that we cannot be mere followers after all that Christ has done. We must be willing to enter into God's redemption plan for humanity.

Pastor Reedy's revival message struck "like a stake in the center of our hearts," Ashley DeArmond said. His was the call of the cross: commitment and sacrifice.

party with jesus

Monday night. Students. Party. Jesus.

This is what Party With Jesus is all about and all it takes for the Holy Spirit to be present among the student body. A time of worship since 2000, the ministry has a vision to “[meet] together to celebrate what Christ has done and is doing on our campus and in our lives, through worship and testimony,” said this year’s leader, Scott McConnell.

A typical night opens with a student-led time of adoration and music, followed by open testimonies, all from the heart. There is no time pressure. There is no obligation to be there, or anywhere else.

“What was so impacting for me was ... seeing our classmates testify how the Lord is testing and changing them ... the atmosphere of students leading students,” sophomore Lauren Green said.

Party With Jesus is a moment separate from chapel and other Christian conventions when students can simply be and worship, apart from the hassles that life often affords.

Everyone, at one point or another, experiences the desert. Moments that leave one feeling empty and dry are inevitable. The Spirit-filled life is no different. The exception for the Christian, however, is the presence of hope, even in the desert. Moments of such hope and honest yearning allow the Christian to transcend the desert places — life's low points — to a place of mountainous strength and renewal. When the heart cries out, it is met in a place of makom — "the place where God is."

Now in its fifth year, the annual Makom festival brought together hundreds of anticipating Olivetians under one roof (Chalfant Hall) on the evenings of Jan. 12 and 13. Organized by the Spiritual Life Council and entirely student-led, Makom festival invited worship band XTREMITY to help lead in the service's opening and closing praise and worship, with Olivet alumnus Erik Willits delivering the message.

Willits closed the Friday night service with these encouraging words: "When one's identity is rooted in Christ, everything will follow from that place."

On Saturday night, Willits returned to speak on applying a Christ-centered identity to daily living. Rather than live confined to endless to-do lists, he said, a follower of Christ should embrace the beauty of life He has given His children. Using the metaphors of music, poetry and art, Willits challenged listeners to become activists and "poets of the Word." Addressing the audience, he said, "Best art happens because it's on your heart. In everything that you do, do it because you are filled with the attitude of Christ. Make a work of art!"

engineering in missions

While most Olivetians traveled to their homes or to warmer climates for spring break, a small team from Olivet's Department of Engineering made its annual mission trip to the regional headquarters of the Church of the Nazarene in Pilar, Argentina, in partnership with Missions In Action. During this first week of March 2007, students and members of the faculty and staff focused their trip on the installation of a new water purification system that will produce enough clean water for an entire village.

As the project proposal states, clean water is taken for granted in America: "If we want water, all we have to do is go to any faucet, turn it on and the water is clean. But that is not the case in all areas of the world."

It was not the case in Pilar. In March 2006, professor Mike Morgan discovered that the village's water supply was infected with E-coli and other contaminants that frequently make members of the community sick. If the water system is not properly maintained, the water becomes poisonous.

Seniors Ryan Holcomb, Daniel Kennell, Andy Kizzee and Josh Niemi eagerly took on the responsibility of this project. As engineers and disciples of Christ, they hope to eliminate the water contamination problem of the village of Nainek, Argentina, with the installation of this new water system.

"God has given me a passion to help better the lives of those affected by disasters," Kizzee said. "I can use my engineering training to accomplish that."

The team that traveled to Argentina for spring break had been working on this project since June 2006. The project was assembled and ready for testing by December 2006, allowing two months for tests and corrections before it was shipped to Argentina for permanent assembly. The group built a pump house during spring break and will return in May to install the system.

Once the team became aware of the situation in Nainek, it was an obvious call for their talents as engineers.

Phillip Howell, a senior at Olivet, has spent the past three years of his college career playing basketball. However, this year, he made the decision to leave the court and pursue a full-time youth pastor position.

"This summer, I took a job as a student ministries pastor at Calvary Bible Church," Howell said. "When I took that job, I felt God was leading me to full-time Christian service for the rest of my life."

Looking back, Howell admits the difficulties of his decision.

"Honestly, it would have been harder for me to play basketball and say 'no' to youth ministry," Howell said. "Leaving my teammates was the hard part. I try to stay connected with the team and stop by for practices and games. I also lead a small-group Bible study with the team once a week. As for leaving basketball, it was a decision I knew I had to make. I want to be a doer of God's Word. I want my life and my speech to reflect Christ."

Howell desires to follow after the footsteps of his father, a pastor who has also been a significant supporter of his son's goals.

"To this day," Howell noted, "one of my favorite things to do is talk with my dad about what God is teaching me. I love his passion and the way he depends upon God daily."

As Howell continues to trust in the Lord's provision, he and his wife, Christine (Mazzella), a 2005 Olivet graduate, delight in the news of an addition to the family.

According to Howell, these new life changes have brought him closer to the Lord. He looks forward to what the Lord has in store for his family as well as possible ministry opportunities.

"Many people have told me that my life will never be the same again," Howell said. "That is great news for me. I always want to be changing, growing and learning. ... I believe that we all must surrender our lives to Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, and follow Him wherever He takes us. It is a matter of trust, and I wholeheartedly believe God will give me a full and abundant life when I choose Him."

mission possible

Priscilla Ramos, a junior from Portage, Ind., shares about her ministry to the local prison, a ministry called "Mission Possible."

Mission Possible is a ministry of a small group of students with a passion and heart for inmates that have no other way to hear the Word of God. By visiting the men and women of a prison, we build friendships through playing games and conversation. Because they typically know right away that we are students and Christians from Olivet, we usually let them initiate conversations about God or the Bible. Soon, they begin to ask for Bibles and prayer, and ask us questions about our beliefs.

I became interested in prison ministries for two reasons. First, my mom was involved with a prison ministry when I was a young girl.

Growing up, I would watch as she came home praising God and telling us of the testimonies of each night. It always touched my heart to hear how many people were receiving salvation, and I always wanted to experience a ministry like that.

The other reason I became involved in prison ministry is that one of my brothers is in a Missouri prison, and has been there since I was about 10. At the prison he is in, church groups are not allowed to go inside as a ministry because of security reasons. My heart continually breaks knowing that there isn't any way my brother can speak to other Christians or learn about the Bible. Because of his situation, I never want to see or hear of prisoners having no access to the Word of God. I want to be someone that can pray for those people and help teach them the Bible.

Before I came to college, this ministry had a rough start and eventually crumbled. When I met then-student Montague Williams at freshman orientation, I expressed an interest. I was connected with Stephen Moulton and, together, we led a group in ministry to these individuals. Although I was young — the first freshman on the Spiritual Life Council — I was excited about spreading the Word of the Lord to these inmates.

Through Mission Possible, I have seen prisoners experience complete attitude changes. Two years ago, there was an 18-year-old girl who would often curse, throw fits and tantrums, and was hateful toward others. She was not accepting of our ministry, but during the course of that year, her heart grew soft as she listened to us teach the other ladies about the Bible. By the end of the year, her attitude had changed toward our group and the other inmates. She became a pod leader, making sure the other women were taken care of and fulfilling their own responsibilities.

Once we have reached a point of openness with the inmates, we provide paperback Bibles to place on tables and to personally give to those who ask for one. We hold Bible studies or simply give the inmates Bible verses for specific issues that they may be facing. Sometimes, when requested, one or two of the girls and I will accompany a woman to a small counseling room, where we pray with her or discuss issues and struggles, offering Christian guidance that she otherwise might not hear.

By trying to provide encouragement with Scripture, we hope the inmates remain positive, and we continue to believe that the Lord loves them.

People

T.W. Willingham (1925–1938)

T.W. Willingham was known for his easy humor and his penchant for unconventional thoughts. It was this man — Olivet's first president — who, with the backing of a few other prominent Nazarenes, bought the then-drowning college out of bankruptcy. That same day, he was elected to preside over the college. He was the sort that would give all the glory back over to God, not taking it for himself. Neither was he one to mince words, and, if he saw a problem, he cut right to it. With the spirit of a warrior of God — seasoned with a love of laughter — he was well-known for his odd, yet poignant half-statements that challenged the very hearts of Christians:

"If this seems to be but a half-statement of truth, I answer that it is the statement of the neglected half, and if ignored, could lead one to worship the means instead of the end — even to becoming a "prayer-olater," which is a form of idolatry. Prayer is an act of man, and one's faith cannot stand on his own act, but in One who alone can respond to the act of man."

past presidents

A.L. Parrott (1938–1949)

A.L. Parrott was born in Walker Hallow, at the foot of Mount Parrott in East Tennessee. After attending Trevecca College, A.L. Parrott pastored in Bethany, Okla., where his church became the largest congregation within the denomination. Later, he received a master's degree at Southwestern Presbyterian University and became known statewide as a strong preacher and businessman.

The Parrott family made its debut at Olivet in 1938. Though it took the upperclassmen a while to accept the new change, the campus soon warmed up to its new president. Parrott made an important contribution in the summer of 1939, when he convinced the Central Educational Zone to establish an education budget as an endowment that would help close the gap between the college's operating expenses and what the college received in tuition and fees.

Olivet went through its most devastating institutional experience during Parrott's presidency in November 1939. The main campus building, the administration office, was destroyed in a fire. This disaster convinced Parrott to consider locating Olivet to a new campus. Olivet bought the St. Viator College property in Kankakee County and moved to the Bourbonnais campus in the summer of 1940.

Harold W. Reed (1949–1975)

The longest-serving president of Olivet survived a quarter of a century at the helm. During his tenure, Dr. Harold W. Reed wrote three books, pastored three separate churches and paved the way for Olivet to make the transition from a college to a university. Also, under his leadership, 20 major buildings were constructed. Many of the buildings on campus today are from the Reed era of Olivet history.

When he came to Olivet, Reed desired to build a science building, but was met with resistance. However, due to his perseverance, Strickler Planetarium and Reed Hall of Science were built. Throughout his tenure, Reed continued to solidify Olivet's science program.

Times were not always pleasant for Reed. In 1963, a tornado hit the campus and caused approximately $1 million in damage. In the wake of this disaster, seven years later, there was a massive fire in the Power House. Neither of these situations deterred Reed. In every situation, Reed showed great leadership and determination. His motto during his presidency and throughout his life was displayed, not only in his office, but also in his heart: "God Is Able."

Leslie Parrott (1975–1991)

During his 16 years as president of Olivet, Dr. Leslie Parrott was instrumental in the campus beautification program, which included the entrance signs, Kelley Prayer Chapel, Ward Field and Snowbarger Athletic Park. Parrott believed that Olivet "should look as much like a park as possible ... [and] that quality maintenance of the campus must always be a high priority." Parrott was also instrumental in establishing intercollegiate football at Olivet in September 1976.

These were not the only milestones accomplished during his presidency, however. Other important events included the transition from a college to university status and the building of Larsen Fine Arts Center.

In 1988, Parrott wrote "The Olivet Difference" for the annual President's Dinner, and it became a well-known publication distributed throughout the years to prospective students. "The Olivet Difference" described the positive ways that Olivet differs from other college campuses across the nation. Dr. Parrott said, "I love the Olivet difference. It keeps us committed. It's our reason for being."

Who's Who

Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities recognizes students annually for their academic achievement, extracurricular involvement and future potential for leadership. The chosen students are then honored in a published directory. This year, 38 Olivet seniors were chosen in early December based upon these criteria as well as their Christian witness. The 2007 Olivet recipients were

Lindsey Bailey	Briana Kassebaum	Matt Scheibel
Angie Beauvais	Andy Kizzee	Dana Scheller
Emily Benson	Christina Lopez	Bekah Smidt
Gary Bishir	Pete Lustig	Ben Smidt
Julia Bridges	Sarah McDevitt	Luke Smith
Jordan Bumgarner	Wesley McKain	Matt Soulia

Academics

In the late 1960s, Max Reams walked onto Olivet's campus as one of the college's newest faculty members. Since those early days, he has been highly influential to the educational programs and ministry of Olivet. Today, at 40 years of service, he has the longest tenure of any current full-time faculty member.

Pursuing a fascination of the science of the Earth, and also of fossils, Dr. Reams received an undergraduate education in zoology and geology at the University of Kansas, where he also earned a master's degree in geology. He then studied at Washington University in St. Louis, where he received his Ph.D. in geology.

As a professor, Reams appreciates most what happens outside the realm of academia.

"Being a university professor has opened many doors of service," said Reams, a professor of geology and chair of the Department of Physical Sciences.

Primarily, he is able to reach the scientific community as an influence on his students. But beyond the classroom, Reams serves the Church through several ministries with his wife, Carol, and also works with various community organizations, businesses and government agencies.

Reams says he is regularly challenged "to integrate faith and science in a non-trivial way" as a professor. In doing so, he is able to minister to his students by incorporating prayer, devotionals and assignments geared toward combining faith and science into his classroom.

"My faith is not something I display in the classroom only; it is a privilege to live who I am and teach out of the abundance and overflow that God gives," he explained.

This passion for geology and for science shines as Reams enthusiastically prepares dedicated students for life beyond Olivet. He is forever amazed to see students take his geology course and mold their minds to the possibilities and the power that science holds.

"God has been very good to me," Reams said. "To be part of the professional maturing process of graduates in geology is humbling; it's great to share my enthusiasm with students who go from Olivet to impact the world for God's kingdom."

A main part of Dr. Reams' life is his ministry outside the classroom. He earned a master's degree in pastoral counseling from Olivet in 2000. With this degree, he is able to minister through marriage retreats, premarital counseling and other acts of service. However, he does not do this alone. Carol, who also received her master's degree in pastoral counseling from Olivet, remains a constant ministerial partner.

As one who followed a call to Christian education and to influence his field as a Christian professor, Reams is thankful for the opportunity to serve through the classroom, the laboratory and in the Church.

"Studying in Washington, D.C., was an amazing experience. I met many wonderful people and formed friendships that are still important to me today. I learned many things about myself, my country, and my faith. I grew spiritually, relationally and academically. This experience pushed me out of my comfort zone and stretched me in many ways. I learned to integrate my faith into my work and relationships on Capitol Hill. This experience changed me forever and anyone who is able to take advantage of a semester like this will benefit in many ways." —Michelle Linn

the "O" club

The best of the best: that was what was required. It is a typical characteristic of the armed forces — but it also defined a group on Olivet's campus that had its beginnings in the 1930s: The "O" Club, comprised of Olivet's finest.

The "O" Club honored students for their athletic accomplishments. Each person was chosen by a committee of select "O" Club students and faculty. The criteria? A student had to earn a letter in a sport. Or — in the case of track and field — a student had to either set a record or earn eight points (a first- or second-place rating) in a single meet.

Both men and women were eligible for the "O" Club. The sports were divided into major and minor divisions, but a letter in any sport would qualify one for committee consideration. The two major sports for women were softball and basketball. The men competed in basketball, football and baseball. The minor sports included swimming, tennis and Ping-Pong. And, of course, both men and women could join in track and field. Only the best, however, earned the right to wear the prominent "O" of the "O" Club.

The "O." Yes, that 6–10-inch purple letter, trimmed in gold, upon a gold pull-over or sweater. It was standard identification: every member of the "O" Club received the honorary letter. And, every year in the club, up to three years, was signified by a golden chevron. There were strict rules regarding these letters, such as women not being able to wear their boy-friends' sports sweaters, but the honor of representing one's achievements and the pride that that letter carried was worth even the strictest of regulations.

But members of this club did not just sit upon the pinnacle of their accomplishments. Rather, they proudly upheld their alma mater with respectful enthusiasm. Two of their better-remembered activities were initiation and the end-of-year banquet.

Imagine being yanked out of bed at 2 a.m. and ordered to chant loudly, "O' Club is the best club!" over and over again, until you are either sick of the words or dying of embarrassment from it all. Then imagine having a paddle thrust into your hand. Your mission is to get a signature from every current "O" Club member. With each signature comes 10 whacks — not all of them gentle. You might even find yourself waking up after being kidnapped and dumped, left to find your own way back to campus. Anything went (within good taste) when initiation week rolled around for those select upperclassmen.

But the "O" Club also knew how to throw a party, and, after all the bruises to pride, a bash was just what was in order.

The "O" Club was also famous for another fiesta: its own end-of-year banquet. Wendy Parsons, club president in 1956, recalled fondly that it was a "big time for a date" and a special time to spend with close friends and acquaintances. Commemorated with a keynote speaker, it was an evening to remember the year's accomplishments.

The "O" Club: a tradition in the hearts of many Olivetians and yet another legacy at Olivet.

making a difference

with IJM and SSJ

As Olivet's student body is regularly dedicated to a variety of extracurricular activities, several clubs on campus have united to educate and act upon social justice — an issue that is becoming more and more prevalent in our world.

Social justice, for many Olivetians, is not about politics or economics, or the debates that involve either topic. Rather, social justice is about seeking justice for all. Angie Beauvais, senior class president and member of several social justice clubs, defines social justice as “simply enacting what the Lord calls us to do: ‘seek justice, love mercy, and walk humbly’” (Micah 6:8).

“Things aren’t always fair in this world,” Beauvais said, “but that doesn’t mean that innocent people have to suffer. God sees us all the same, so we ought to all be free from oppression.”

Because these clubs unite under the same purpose, they are part of Students for Social Justice (SSJ), created by seniors Lindsay Bailey, Beauvais, Ryan Quanstrom and Marcus Winn.

“We decided that SSJ would remain a relaxed and open forum for students and the community to learn,” Beauvais explained.

1. Sarah Horvath and Rachel Dawson enjoy free coffee and hot chocolate provided for them at the end of the World Vision AIDS Walk for Orphans in Chicago.

2. Megan McGrath, Melissa Harper and Andy Carretto enjoy a coffee break during their Fall Break road trip to Washington, D.C., for Ugandan Lobby Day.

3. Several students from Olivet joined this large group in Washington, D.C., over Fall Break to lobby for peace in Uganda. Olivet senior Keri Shay was the photographer for the event.

The club holds monthly meetings and shows documentaries twice a month as an educational tool to increase awareness in the Olivet community.

One of the groups under SSJ is International Justice Mission (IJM). There are several dozens of students involved in this group; they come from several different backgrounds, majors and mindsets. Setting aside differences, the group finds one common bond: their desire to become better informed about and more active in the erasing of social oppression in the world.

Olivet's chapter of IJM is one of many chapters at universities across the nation formed under the parent organization of the same name.

According to the parent IJM Web site, www.ijm.org, the organization originally began in 1997 as a human rights organization “that rescues victims of violence, sexual exploitation, slavery, and oppression.” Beauvais, president of Olivet's chapter, said that her decision to become involved in IJM was inspired by Gary Haugen's book Good News About Injustice. In his book, Haugen, the founder of IJM, describes the injustices that he has witnessed around the world.

“I can and must do something, and if I can have half the heart Haugen has for the oppressed, I can make a huge impact in this world,” Beauvais said.

What is AIDS?

HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus) is a viral infection that attacks the body's immune system so that it cannot fight off infection. Symptoms may take 10 years before appearing and, by then, AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) has already begun to deteriorate the body and infected persons pose a higher risk of unknowingly spreading the disease.

How many people are affected worldwide?

People living with HIV and AIDS	40.3 million
Total HIV cases to date	64.3 million
Total AIDS deaths to date	23.1 million

What region is the most affected?

Sub-Saharan Africa
Adults and children living with HIV	25.8 million
Women living with HIV	13.5 million
Adults and children newly infected with HIV	3.2 million
Adult and child deaths due to AIDS	2.4 million

byron carmony

to alma mater, olivet...

In February 1935, Byron Carmony stepped onto Olivet's campus as a new student. During his years at Olivet, Carmony became heavily involved in the Department of Music, participating in a school quartet and earning a diploma in Music Theory in 1941.

But Carmony's love for music wasn't limited to the textbook or the one quartet. Having previously written a hymn at age 13, Carmony was able to further his passion and develop his musical talents as a song writer. Carmony's songs included "Books" and "Back Again in Olivet."

It was through Olivet's Department of Music that Carmony experienced the various genres of music, thus developing a love for the world of classical music in particular.

"Before Olivet, my music appreciation was limited to gospel songs," he mentions in The Olivet Story, a book by Dr. Leslie Parrott, former Olivet president. "I have very limited appreciation for the old hymns. Popular music was spiritually suspect, and classical was simply not a part of my world. The first songs I heard at Olivet were 'Hands Across the Table' and 'Stars Fell on Alabama.' I learned popular music was legitimate."

This musical influence, as well as his gift for hymn-writing, highlighted Carmony's passion and leadership as a student at Olivet. In 1938, Olivet's graduating class asked Carmony to write a song for a special occasion. The resulting composition was the song "Alma Mater Olivet" and was later declared Olivet's official alma mater.

Besides his leadership as the 1939 Aurora editor, and also as a student, Carmony's contribution as the composer of the alma mater stands tall in Olivet's history. Today, it is sung in chapel services, at Homecoming events, at athletic competitions, and during various other official Olivet activities. As Olivet's song, the alma mater "reflects the mission of Olivet and communicates the experience alumni had while students here," said David Caudle, Olivet's director of alumni relations.

For Caudle, the alma mater is not just Olivet's chosen song; it also is a personal testimony.

"Singing it is almost always an emotional experience for me, as I recall the incredible blessing from the Lord it is to be an Olivetian," he explained. "I am also reminded of the challenge of living up to the words 'I'll love the Christ you gave first part.'"

Carmony passed away earlier this year, on Jan. 24, 2007. He left his mark of influence and leadership at Olivet. In the words of Dr. John C. Bowling, "Towering above his many contributions to the University, his most loved gift to Olivet is its alma mater," said Dr. John Bowling, Olivet's president. "His words and music are now a part of every significant Olivet gathering."

Sports

Sports at Olivet is more than a pastime; for some, sports is a way of life. During the fall semester, the highlight of the week for most students is the journey to Ward Field to watch the crushing of pads and the smashing of helmets on a brisk Saturday evening. In November, fans pack McHie Arena for the basketball season openers. Watching fellow classmates suit up and face some of the finest athletes in the Midwest can be quite the rush. But it hasn't always been a tradition. In Olivet's history, intercollegiate athletics is more of a recent development.

Prior to 1966, Olivet's administration believed intercollegiate competition to be a worldly endeavor. In attempts to keep the institution beyond reproach, Olivet abstained from engaging with other schools on the battlefield of college athletics.

It didn't mean, however, that Olivet students were not involved in athletic events. Sports is a thread of Olivet's history, as students have always found a way to compete among themselves. In 1915, when Olivet was still located in Olivet, Ill., the preferred sports were kickball and croquet. Then, in 1931, the intramural competition was heightened with the formation of three athletic societies. Each society created a team for competition against the other societies. These societies had team names: the Spartans, the Indians and the Trojans, who battled each other for almost 30 years. Soon, more sports were added. On the campus in Bourbonnais, Basketball games were played in Birchard Gymnasium, which was more commonly called "The Pit."

Football games were also added to the competition and were played on a field which was located where Benner Library is now standing.

As an unofficial participant in intercollegiate sports, Olivet began played sister school Bethany Nazarene College in a series of games carefully approved by the administration and organized by student Cecil Crawford. The team adopted purple and gold as its colors and settled on the mascot "Tigers." These games were a hit in 1940, but any momentum gained for athletics by the games was soon demolished by the coming of World War II and the draft.

The athletics issue eventually regained focus, with proponents believing athletics could mean ministry opportunities. But Olivet's Board of Trustees was slow to make any drastic changes. Eventually, because intramurals remained a large component to student life, Olivet hired its first full-time director of athletics in 1958: C.W. Ward.

Just a few years later, in 1966, the appeal for an intercollegiate sports program was approved. Today, 41 years later, Olivet offers 18 varsity sports (including cheerleading), upholds the mission "To Provide Opportunities for Ministry Through Athletics" and has taken a place on the national scene.

Running on a different track

Christmas break was cut short for 13 members of the Olivet track and field team, who did anything but relax during a week-long effort to make a difference. Along with coaches Ashley Palmer and Mike McDowell, the team traveled to New Orleans from Dec. 31, 2006, to Jan. 6, 2007, to aid in the hurricane-relief efforts in New Orleans. The mission trip included gutting, power-washing and painting various homes, as well as cleaning and mowing 61 lawns.

Palmer, a team leader and graduate assistant, said she went on a mission trip to Costa Rica when she was in college and wanted to provide that kind of an opportunity for Olivet's track team.

The team's original plan was to fly to the Dominican Republic to help with ministry and construction, but when complications arose, the team contacted Nazarene Disaster Relief and made arrangements to help with hurricane relief.

Senior Jenny Ellis said one of the most memorable experiences was when the homeowners from one of their housing assignments came home on the team's second day in New Orleans. It had only been the family's second day back to New Orleans in 16 months.

"It was definitely a God thing that they chose that day to return," Ellis said. "The husband kept thanking us over and over and telling us that he was speechless. It was neat to see how our work was making an impact and blessing to others."

While the work was rewarding, it was also difficult. Team members said they were surprised by how much physical labor their bodies could handle, especially with the addition of their normal track workouts after each day's work.

One of the team's favorite memories was an impromptu wrestling match held in the lounge. Pumped up from watching ultimate-fighting tapes, the guys received bruises and rug burns, while the girls also enjoyed wrestling each other in a makeshift wrestling ring.

"I enjoyed getting to know the track guys better," said freshman Brett Stewart. "Staying up late with the guys was hilarious. We got to learn a lot more about each other."

During their stay in New Orleans, track team members held the mindset that the trip was meant to serve others; and while the work was tiring, they left with the satisfaction that they did something worthwhile.

"It was a satisfying feeling when it was all over," Stewart said. "I feel like our team did a great job."

For Palmer, the best part was walking down the street and having people ask why they were there.

"Even though we were only there for five days, you could see how much we actually helped the people," she said.

The team's effort helped put hope back in the lives of those whose homes were destroyed. And team members had hope for the citizens of New Orleans.

"My hope is that the foundation of this city is not only rebuilt, but comes to be focused on Jesus," Ellis said.

After an NAIA Elite Eight finish in 2005-06, the men's basketball team entered 2006-07 with question marks.

But following a rocky start to the year, the Tigers were 8-7 at the semester break, were ranked in the NAIA Top 25 throughout most of the second semester and won 9 of 12 games to close out the regular season at second in the CCAC. In the process, they lost the second-leading scorer Stan Chismark to a knee injury.

Despite a semifinal loss in the CCAC Tournament, the Tigers gained an at-large berth to the NAIA National Tournament, where they fell in the opening round to end the year at 17-12 overall and 7-3 in the CCAC.

Chismark and Phil French were named to the All-CCAC First Team. Josh Bronke and Tyler Wallenfang were named honorable mention selections.

The highest-scoring team in NAIA Division I last season continued that trend in 2006-07, as the Tigers averaged 102.7 per contest and set a University record for points with a 145-52 defeat of Calumet College of St. Joseph in November.

Despite the scoring effort, the team struggled to a 6-10 mark before the start of the Chicagoland Collegiate Athletic Conference (CCAC) season. But a win over third-ranked St. Xavier University in the CCAC opener fueled a 12-2 finish and a tie for the CCAC regular season title.

The team fell to St. Xavier in the conference championship game to finish the year at 20-13 overall and 11-1 in the conference.

Kellie Mullin, Hilary Disch and Maggie Sillar were named All-CCAC First Team, and Poppy Miller was tabbed a second-team all-conference selection.

After starting the year at 1-7, the volleyball team rebounded to win 29 of its next 36 matches and collect its sixth Chicagoland Collegiate Athletic Conference (CCAC) Regular Season Championship. With two straight wins in the NAIA Region VII Tournament, the Tigers also qualified for a fifth appearance in the NAIA National Tournament. There, the Tigers lost three matches to end the year 30-16 overall and 8-1 in the CCAC.

Megan Gullickson was named an NAIA Third-Team All-American and Michelle McFadden was an NAIA Honorable Mention All-American selection.

thank you ∞

I must admit that there have been points during the coming together of this book when I was not sure that it would come together. However, thanks to many different people and their efforts, we were able to complete the unique, once-in-a-lifetime task of bringing you the Centennial Aurora.

First, I have to extend a giant thanks to assistant editor Jayne Karenko. Your extreme amount of extra time and immense amount of extra effort during the last few weeks of work on the book were more helpful than you can know. I know that you were overwhelmed beyond belief and things were thrown at you with no warning at all due to my family emergency, but you made it through and did an amazing job. This book would never have been finished without you, and I never would have made it through such a tough time without you, either. I cannot begin to thank you enough, but just remember ... you are my hero!

To the rest of the Aurora* staff: This year was definitely interesting, and we had a lot of technical difficulties, unforeseen staff member changes and communication issues outside of our own control, but you can breathe your sighs of relief; we made it! Several of you stepped up to pull the extra weight when I was not able to be there, and your help will not be forgotten. Thank you for making this a great year through it all!

Heather Shaner, you went above and beyond your position as adviser and helped me through a ton of unforeseen tough times this year when you could have left me to handle them on my own. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for the extra support, for knowing how to help me get the job done and, of course, for all of the strawberry Laffy Taffy. I couldn't have asked for a better adviser.

Marc Shaner, you did a tremendous amount to help us out when it was most definitely not in your job description. Thank you so much for chipping in and helping us finish the sports section!

Mom and Dad, I know you were worried about me going into this year, especially finishing up with 19 hours and the job of executive editor, but you never wavered in your support and believed in me all along, even when you thought I was crazy. I know that you think I put too much on myself, but I know that I never could have made it through all of the times I have overworked myself without you there. I love you!

Andrew, thank you for not giving up on me. I know that there were times you probably thought I was lost in my office forever and you wondered when we'd have time to talk again, but because of your support, understanding and little encouraging messages throughout the day, I knew you'd be there when things calmed down a bit. I love you!

To my roommates, Amber, Chelsea and Liz, you have been amazing! Thank you for bringing me tons of laughs and hugs during my busiest times, and for leaving the light on during my latest of nights. Whether you shared time with me in the office, brought me late-night snacks I shouldn't have been eating, helped me do a job that wasn't yours to do, pretended to be excited about the yearbook or just talked to me when things weren't going well, you were wonderful! And Lizzy, of course, thanks for your interpretive dance.

Thank you to Tim and Davey just for being who you are. Your friendship and complete insanity help me get through when you don't even know. You always know how to get me laughing when I'm almost in tears.

Tabitha, our Monday night dinners always brought a welcome break in the middle of a night of work. So simple, but so good.

To Aaron Payne, thank you for always stopping by to make sure things were going all right, for leaving me my only Post-It because you knew it broke my heart that I didn't get them, and for being a constant source of encouragement ... and no, I don't want any Spark.

To the rest of my fellow ASC members, thank you for your prayers and support. Whether it was a voicemail from McCartha, a hug from E-Hall or a Psalm from Ian reminding me of the Biblical command to rest, I never would have made it through without your encouragement. You are a wonderful group!

Kenn Knisley, thank you for the many encouraging words, hugs, pictures and constant support. You always brightened my days just by showing up to show me some love.

Gordon Wickersham, thank you for having been a tremendous help in acquiring pictures and information for this book. Our workload in gathering old photos and information was greatly eased by your help.

Heather Day and all in the office of Marketing Communications, thank you for your tremendous help! You contributed a great deal that we would have been lost without!

And thank you, everyone that I know I've forgotten to thank. There have been so many of you that have helped this book come together and helped me to maintain my sanity. I could never have done this without each and every one of you. Don't let the absence of your name being mentioned make this thank-you seem lessened.

The 94th Olivet Nazarene University Aurora was created by a student staff and printed by Herff Jones of Marceline, Mo. Kris Hawkins was the service representative and Erlinda Bloss was the plant representative. The press run was 2,000. The book was submitted through e-Page, with pagination done on a Macintosh using Adobe InDesign CS2. Photos and graphics were edited in Adobe Photoshop CS2 and Adobe Illustrator CS2. Copy was written and edited by the Aurora staff.

The cover material and spine area is white lithograph-based material with matte lamination and four-color application. The cover was designed by Alyssa Lytle. Endsheets are Vibracolor Antique Silver with four-color application. Paper stock throughout the entire book is 80# matte. Headlines and body copy throughout the book are in Georgia. Caption copy is in AHJ Times.

Portraits were taken by Jim McAdams of MJM Photography, 1101 N. 800 East, Greentown, IN 46936.

Inquiries regarding the book should be directed to the Aurora, Olivet Nazarene University, One University Avenue, Box 6025, Bourbonnais, IL 60914, or 815-939-5337.

intramurals

Throughout the year, students participate in a variety of intramural sports, which provide opportunities to meet new people and be active without being part of an intercollegiate team. Intramural sports range from softball and basketball to euchre and Mario Kart.

1. Senior Brandon Davey pitches for the Big Stix during a chilly day of co-ed softball.

2. Senior Neal Peterson gets ready to make a hit for his team during a frigid game against the Big Stix.

3. Debbie Zwirkoski waits for the perfect pitch.

4. Josh Kennedy successfully makes it to second, keeping his eye on the ball.

2. Junior Brian Robbins strains at the finish to take the lead over an opponent.

3. Freshman Christopher McCarty takes off with power out of the blocks.

4. Sophomore Rory Fry passes the baton to Derrick Wauthier who will run the next leg of the relay.

5. Senior pole-vaulter Mark Hollis pushes himself to force his body over the pole.

The men's track and field team opened the season with a second-place finish in the Illinois Wesleyan University Relays, and as the season continued, the Tigers proved to be a tough opponent.

Kacey Carr and Mark Hollis took first place in their respective events at the NCCAA Indoor Championships, and the team finished fourth overall. The Tigers also placed fourth at the Chicagoland Championships.

To cap the season, Hollis won his second straight NAIA national pole-vaulting title, and Carr and Ryan Richert finished second and third, respectively, in the marathon. Kendall Thomas finished seventh in the hammer throw.

Did you know? Mark Hollis is a two-time NAIA national pole-vaulting champion. He claimed the 2007 crown with a vault of 17'5 3/4".

5. Lindsey Zurlinden and Sarah Juenger cross the finish line.

The women's track and field team began the season with a third-place finish at the Illinois Wesleyan University Relays, upholding the team's reputation for strong starts.

The trend continued with Carmin Green and Bethany McCoy both taking first in their respective events at the NAIA National Indoor Meet. The team also placed fifth at the NCCAA National Meet.

And the Tigers posted a strong finish at the NAIA national meet, as the 4x800 relay team of McCoy, Green, Cheri Hoffmann and Aulbrey Gailey placed first; McCoy won the 1,500-meter run and Green finished third; Jenny Ellis placed fourth in the marathon; and Kaylin Himes placed third in pole-vaulting. The Tigers finished fifth overall.

Twenty former Tiger baseball players have gone on to play professional baseball.

Despite 13 new faces on the Tiger baseball roster, the team managed a 26-18 overall mark and a 13-7 record in the Chicagoland Collegiate Athletic Conference (CCAC) — good enough to tie for second place.

In postseason play, the Tigers won the CCAC Tournament, securing a place in the NAIA Region VII Tournament, where they fell in two games.

A season highlight was coach Elliot Johnson's 800th career win.

senior banquet

Members of the Class of 2007 gathered together in April to celebrate their accomplishments at this year's version of the Senior Banquet, held at the InterContinental Hotel in downtown Chicago. The annual event took on a different flair this year in a more intimate setting.

The banquet program included a welcome from the senior class president, Angela Beavuias, prayer offered by class sponsor Dr. Mark Quanstrom, and senior superlative awards presented by Chelsea McKay and McCartha McKenzie.

Most seniors continued the celebrating after the banquet, staying in the city for one last hoorah with their friends.

1. Senior class treasurer Chelsea McKay and Kathy Steinacker, director of community life, spent much time coordinating the banquet.
2. Jenifer Bowman and Justin Torrence show their true colors during dinner at the banquet.
3. Good friends Grace Gessner and Brent Keemle take a moment to capture one of their last times together.
4. The banquet was held at Chicago's gorgeous InterContinental Hotel.
5. Liz Hilger and Brian Chandler enjoy some down time during dinner to look at some instant pictures of the evening.
6. Students greet each other as they arrive at the hotel.
7. Sarah McDevitt and Michelle Bateman show off their respective senior superlative awards, Miss Congeniality and Most Fashionable.
8. Seniors socialize as they wait to be served a delicious meal in the ballroom.

Commencement

The 2007 Commencement marked a milestone in Olivet history. Held May 5, it was the Commencement of the Centennial class. The morning's beautiful weather served as the perfect setting for the outside ceremony, punctuated by a powerful and humorous address from Dr. Gary Streit, provost of the University.

More than 1,400 degrees — including 455 traditional undergraduate — were presented on the day, marking the second largest class to graduate from Olivet.

A variety of awards were also presented during the traditional undergraduate ceremony. Rebekah Smidt and Matt Scheibel were honored with the Robert Milner and Maggie Sloan awards, given each year to the outstanding male and female graduates. Honorary doctorate degrees were awarded to Cecil Crawford, founder of TicketMaster, and the Rev. Mark Hostetler, pastor of Grace Church of the Nazarene in Portage, Ind. The Richard M. Jones Faculty Award for Teaching Excellence went to Behavioral Sciences professor Dr. Lisa Gassin.

1. Members of the Class of 2007 stand in eager anticipation as the ceremony begins.
2. Students make their way from their seats to the platform to receive their diplomas.
3. Krisitn Stockng and Mike Stogsdill, diplomas in hand, show their excitement after the closing of the Commencement ceremony.
4. A surprised Bekah Smidt makes her way to the platform to receive the Maggie Sloan Award, annually given to the outstanding female graduate.
5. Luke Smith, video camera in hand, receives his diploma from Dr. Bowling.
6. Brad Smith gives a smile and wave to cheering family and friends after receiving his diploma.
7. The four graduating members of ROTC were commissioned in front of the Commencement crowd following the presentation of diplomas.
8. Shane Cournia used the receiving of his diploma as a photo opportunity, making sure to get a picture with Dr. Bowling.
9. Dr. Gary Streit delivered the Centennial Commencement address.
10. Jill Neimi returns to her seat after receiving her diploma.

west side story

The highly anticipated 2007 ONU musical production of West Side Story played in February to sell-out crowds in Kresge Auditorium.

A 1957 Tony Award-winning Broadway musical and a 1961 film, West Side Story portrays the story of two teenage gangs on the Upper West Side of Manhattan: the American Jets and the Puerto Rican Sharks. The two gangs are continuously fighting and causing trouble around town while being closely watched by Officer Krupke.

Maria, the sister of Sharks leader Bernardo, falls in love with Jet Tony, causing an even greater battle between the gangs, which eventually leaves Bernardo dead. The musical ends with a powerful last line from Maria to Tony, who has just been killed: "Te adoro, Anton" or "I adore you, Anthony."

1. Luke Frame portrayed the role of Maria's love interest, Tony, in the 2007 musical production West Side Story.

2. Lisa Denault played a fiery Anita, girlfriend of the Sharks' leader, Bernardo, portrayed by Andrew Biggs.

3. Steve Cargile and Michael McIntire share a scene as Jets Snowboy and Riff.

4. Ashley McIntire, as lead character Maria, performs the song "I Feel Pretty."

5. Danny Quanstrom, Ruben Lillie, Steve Cargile, Dave Mohr and Jared Morehouse perform as members of the the Jets gang.

6. Luke Frame as Tony sings his heart out while the Jets and the Sharks are on either side of him.

7. The Jets hold a song-ending pose during the production.

Chalfant Hall, usually the home to chapel services, was transformed into a “professional” wrestling arena in February.

Tiger Championship Wrestling (TCW) is an annual wrestling event sponsored by Men’s Residential Life. The 1,000 people in attendance saw a show full of power bombs, body slams and the occasional garbage-can shot to the head.

The “professional” wrestling extravaganza gives the opportunity for students to trade in their textbooks and clickers for singlets and title belts to become professional wrestlers for one night.

Highlights of the show included Chief Executioner Officer beating Irish to become the TCW Champion, The Nazarene World Order capturing the tag-team titles and a surprise appearance from Dr. Jay Martinson. Dr. Martinson’s appearance was a crowd favorite, but he was no match for TCW legend Manteno Mangler, who pinned the professor 1,2,3.

1. Peter Hall pins Kyle Autrey for the win during their match.
2. Dr. Jay Martinson brought intimidation to his battle with the Manteno Mangler.

3. Seniors Jon Hall, “Irish,” and Gary Bishir, “The Manteno Mangler,” say goodbye to the TCW crowd.
4. Josh Kennedy and Chris Walker sport some amazing plaid shorts and strike a pose as they make their entrance.

and yet ...
