TWO COMMANDS were given to Israel in a time of great crisis. The Book of Exodus records this experience in chapter 14. Verse 13 states, "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." Verse 15 says, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." On the surface these two commands would appear paradoxical, but their deliverance from the Egyptians on that memorable day depended upon their obedience to both.

We all seem to be confronted in this day with many different kinds of crises. From Israel's experience in that ancient day we can learn some valuable lessons. Crisis hours call for wisdom and understanding. Admittedly it is not the easiest thing to "stand still" in a crisis. Action always seems to be the natural reaction. However, exaggeration and alarm only make the situation more frustrating. The voice of presumption calls loudly in the crisis, urging us to action, to make decisions, to forge ahead. The opposite voice of cowardice can also be heard urging surrender, urging us to go back or to give up.

The solution to personal crisis is to recognize and obey God's voice. The mighty Elijah stood upon the mount and heard the great storm as the wind blew the rocks into the canyons below, and the earthquake and the fire followed. Then in the calm following the storm a "still, small voice" was heard which he recognized. Only then did he wrap "his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave" (1 Kings 19:13). To be able in this day to distinguish the voice of God above the frightful noises and confusing issues of our world is to be assured of deliverance and victory. To hear the Master's voice in the storm is to find calm assurance of victory, even when defeat seems inevitable.

If we can obey the command to "stand still" in the crisis, we shall learn that it enables the intervention of the Divine into our affairs. God prepared an escape route for Israel and then commanded them to "go forward." He will prepare a way for us as well.

It also enables God to give a sense of direction to our effort. We always move "forward" under the guidance of God.

Obedience also brings a greater revelation of God to the soul. To face the crisis with faith and assurance in God's ability and willingness to help us requires discipline, but at the same time becomes fascinating as we see the unfolding of His great plan and revelation of deliverance. □

THE SOLUTION TO PERSONAL CRISIS IS TO RECOGNIZE AND OBEY GOD'S VOICE

by General Superintendent Charles H. Strickland
FOR YEARS I tried every artificial means I could imagine, trying to find the ultimate “high.” It seems when a person reaches a certain number of pills, or a certain number of drinks, or a certain number of joints, they become challenged to be able to do one better—to get just a little higher. I think that’s what happens when so many, like myself, find ourselves lying on an emergency room table with doctors and nurses working over us, pumping our stomachs and doing everything humanly possible to save our lives.

My life often seemed to me so incomplete, so unfulfilled, and so completely hopeless. The only highlights were those times when I seemed to be floating in another world totally removed from the day-to-day pressures of my life as a secretary, wife, and mother, or the times before I had a family.

For years I’ve tried to reach that peak. Even after being saved and feeling that I had found that mountaintop, I was sometimes tempted to try again to artificially induce that “high.” But I thank God for being faithful to His promises, for always being there to help me rise above these temptations.

One day, though, the trials, the pressures, all the responsibilities of the children and providing for their home, seemed to loom heavier than ever. I knew whom to contact for drugs and I prayed and prayed that God would stay with me, that I not give in after His having delivered me from such a life more than two years before. The struggle went on within me for almost a week. Then one Sunday evening God did something really tremendous.

Following the sermon, the pastor gave an altar call. He said that he felt the Lord was working with someone within the congregation. As we sang the first three verses of “Softly and Tenderly,” I found myself praying earnestly for a young mother who was also widowed, someone I had talked to casually after one or two services, but that I really didn’t know well. Between the third and fourth verses, I found myself praying for this woman as if my very life depended on it. Then halfway through the fourth and final verse, the most spectacular thing happened. This woman came to the pew where I was standing, and when I responded to a tap on my shoulder, there she was, tears streaming down her face and asking me to go with her to the altar!

It has taken me years, and I’m sorry for the times I’ve fallen on the way, but God has shown me the ultimate “high.” No honor can be greater, no joy deeper, than knowing that you have been used as an instrument of His peace.

I pray that God help me to be worthy as one of His children, to live as He would have me live, to speak as He would have me speak, and to walk as He would have me walk. I want to be used by Him, for that is the ultimate “high”!

“HERALD” USED BY GOD

We thought you would be very interested to know the results of a subscription to the Herald of Holiness sent to a friend by a member of our congregation, Mr. Charles Linn.

Chuck sent a subscription to a man he works with, Mr. Josephus Brown, and as a direct result of reading each issue, Mr. Brown’s wife accepted Christ.

May God grant many more such encouraging reports.

PLEA TO PARENTS

I found myself a bit frustrated with the article, “Why Aren’t They Saved?” The author seems to make generalizations and conclusive statements about what parents may or may not have done to reach their children for Christ that are not always true.

As a youth worker, I deal very closely with teenagers and their parents. In the churches I have had contact with, too many parents leave the responsibility of ministering to their children totally in the hands of the church and youth leader. Too many don’t try to communicate with their teens, listen to and share their problems, spend quality time with them, invite youth leaders and Christian friends over (that’s a good one!).

For teens to reach their fullest potential in Christ, the prayers of parents need to grow arms and legs. They need to be vitally involved in ministering to their children. A loving, Christlike parental caring and responsibility is needed in our churches.

Self-imposed guilt, as the author says, is not the answer. Self-disciplined love in action is. Then a parent can “enjoy his own salvation” and his teenager’s too!

ANOTHER VIEWPOINT

I just read “Why Aren’t They Saved?” in the May 1 issue. The admonition for parents to not assume great personal guilt over unsaved, adult children is well stated.

Having worked with over 10,000 youngsters by now, I have faced this question repeatedly. I am convinced that in the Church of the Nazarene, we have consistently missed one vital area

A SCRIPTURAL EXPERIENCE

A well-known Christian leader asked, “Is the term ‘entire sanctification’ scriptural?”

The answer is Yes! The term entire sanctification is scriptural, in the sense that it conveys what the Bible clearly teaches. It is scriptural in the same sense that the term Trinity is scriptural. While the precise term itself is not found in scripture, it does interpret correctly what scripture teaches.

Sanctification is a biblical term, translating, in the Old Testament, various forms of the Hebrew root qdsh and, in the New Testament, translating derivatives from the Greek word hazo. The basic meaning of both is “separate,” “purify,” “make holy,” and in both testaments, the terms holiness and sanctification are practically interchangeable.

Sanctification begins at the new birth. When a man is born again, not only does he have a new standing before God, but his actual state, i.e. his inner moral and spiritual condition, is radically transformed. He is separated unto God; he is turned from sin to holiness, and the Spirit is at work within him to transform him into the likeness of Christ (Romans 8:29). This is made very clear in 1 Corinthians 1:2 where the Corinthians are described as those “sanctified in Christ Jesus.” Many of them still had a long way to go spiritually and Paul is grieved with their discords (1:10-14), their immaturity (3:1-4), their lack of discipline (5:1-2), their quarreling (6:1-8), etc. —but they were believers and, as such, Paul refers to them as “sanctified.”

There is much more, however, to sanctification than its beginning at the new birth. We could look at how Paul exhorts these Corinthians to go on to full sanctification (see 2 Corinthians 7:1), but instead we will look at 1 Thessalonians 5:23.

Paul says that God will “sanctify you wholly.” “Wholly” means “completely,” “fully,” or “entirely” and the phrase entire sanctification comes from this passage.

The Greek term translated “wholly” is holoteleis, derived from holos meaning “whole” and telos meaning “end.”

Hence the word connotes, “wholly reaching the intended goal” and in this passage it is descriptive of a sanctification that reaches every area of life.

We could very accurately translate it as: “May the God of peace sanctify you entirely.” This idea of completeness is further strengthened by the use of the term holokleron, which the KJV translates as “whole”; “your whole spirit and soul and body.”

Every part of the Christian is to be entirely sanctified; and the use of the two words wholly and whole emphasizes this so clearly. The passage could be paraphrased: “May the God of peace himself entirely sanctify every part of you…” As believers, the Thessalonians were already sanctified; now Paul prays that they will be entirely sanctified.

What does it mean to be entirely sanctified? It means the perfecting of faith (1 Thessalonians 3:10). It means to increase and abound in love (3:12). It means to have the heart established blameless in holiness (3:13). It means moral purity (4:1-8). It means being preserved blameless until the Lord comes (5:23). Thus entire sanctification is, negatively, being cleansed from all sin and, positively, being filled with the love of God and continuing to increase in that love.

Thus, according to the New Testament, our entire sanctification in Christ may be complete in this life. There can be an entire cleansing from all sin and a continuous filling with and growing in, the love of God, which the Spirit “pours” into our hearts (Romans 5:5).

How is entire sanctification obtained? Briefly, it is a grace given only to believers, who must see it as a scriptural promise, feel their need of it, believe it to be obtainable, and pray for its fulfillment in their own lives.

It is obtainable now, by faith, as with all the blessings of grace. The most important requirement, however, is not just believing that it is obtainable, or having correct doctrinal views about what it is, but is the longing, the deep desire, the soul-yearning to be cleansed and filled with the Holy Spirit.

As Jesus has so clearly taught us: “Blessed are those who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be satisfied” (Matthew 5:6). □

HERBERT McGONIGLE, an elder in the church, is on the faculty of British Isles Nazarene College in Manchester, England.

Where Jesus found His joy is where we can find joy for ourselves.

Jesus spoke of a shepherd who went into the wilderness to find one sheep. When He found it He was filled with joy. Jesus likened the shepherd to Himself as He searches for lost people. To save us, He came from heaven to earth. He endured much suffering that we should have forgiveness and eternal life, a life of joy. He shared the joy that fills heaven when someone began to experience this joy.

Henry Parton was a faithful minister for more than 40 years. He had suffered considerably during that period. He had been misunderstood and misrepresented as he stood for truth and right. I asked him whether the results were worth the anguish. Joy lightened his face as he said: “True, I had to suffer, but I have also known the joy of the Lord. During my ministry I have led several people to Christ as Savior. Each one of these has given me so much joy that it has eclipsed the pain.”

“My joy, until I die,” exclaimed Count Zinzendorf, “is to win souls.”

Jesus found joy in His fellowship with God. When Jesus was talking to His Father He spoke of His joy. “Now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves” (John 17:13). He gained it from what He was doing then—having fellowship with God. He regarded this fellowship as more necessary to His spiritual life than food was to His body. Once He was too busy to eat, but He was never too busy to spend time with His Father.

God was real to Him. His pure heart opened widely to His Father’s loving voice. J. S. Stewart comments: “Heart spoke to heart, the spirit of Jesus on the mountain to the Father in Heaven; and so precious, deep, and intimate was the hour of utter intimacy that Jesus, as the evangelists say, came out of it with the glow and wonder of it written on His very face, making it radiant like an angel’s.”

Here was Jesus’ joy. His own people could reject Him, His mother could misunderstand Him, His disciples could be poor pupils, but the joy that came from communion with His Father sustained Him at all times and in all circumstances.

Dr. F. B. Meyer once met an elderly widow who said she was most unhappy; she felt so lonely. Dr. Meyer reminded her that Jesus was always with her. Some months later the two met again. She beamed with joy as she said: “You told me to practice the presence of Jesus Christ and I am now a new creature. Everything is different, because I have found out that Jesus Christ is to me all that He said He would be.”

The 70 disciples returned from their preaching and healing tour, delighting in their success. When they gave their report, “Jesus rejoiced in spirit” (Luke 10:21). His joy was unbounded. Why? God had hidden certain knowledge from “the wise and prudent” and had revealed it unto “babes,” the disciples. The special knowledge was who the Father is. Jesus regarded knowing God as the highest knowledge available to anyone. Scientific knowledge is valuable, but a knowledge of God is essential if we are to know true joy.

Bill Blake was a prosperous businessman with a radiant testimony to God’s grace. When asked what especially gave him joy, he replied, “Knowing the Lord. I have known great success in business, though that has never brought me lasting happiness. Getting to know the Lord, understanding His plan for my life, living on His promises, and seeing His hand in my life have given me tremendous joy.”

This joy cannot be killed by suffering. Jesus spoke more fully of joy as the Cross came nearer to Him. Indeed, joy was more prominent in His farewell discourse than in any other sermon. After Paul and Barnabas had been persecuted at Antioch, they were “filled with joy” (Acts 13:52). Peter affirms that a season of many temptations will cause heaviness, but it will not prevent true rejoicing (1 Peter 1:6).

The joy which Jesus gives to us is complete. It is independent of our circumstances. The world can neither give it nor take it away. Its source is in God our Father.

An illustration of Christlike love

by GLENN J. SNEED

THE ADULT Sunday School class was discussing the command to love. Comments such as, “It is impossible to love some people,” “some are dirty,” “some are disagreeable,” were heard.

The love that God commands us to give is designated by the Greek word agape. This is love given because the person needs to be loved.

I was reminded of an incident that occurred in the little village of DuBois in southern Illinois in 1932, during the severest part of the Great Depression. The church treasurer was away and did not pay the pastor for a month. At the end of that period, the pastor received his $7.50—a month’s salary.

For over two weeks the parsonage family had eaten biscuits, water gravy, and water for breakfast. When paid, the pastor decided to celebrate. He bought a half pound of butter, a pint of strawberry preserves and a pound of coffee. The pastor’s wife baked a pan of biscuits and made a pot of coffee.

As she put the biscuits in the oven, a train pulled up to the water tank. Just as she took the biscuits out of the oven, there came a knock at the door. The pastor opened it. There stood a young man, blackened from riding a coal car for the past hundred miles.

“Mister,” the youth said, “Could you give me something to eat? I haven’t eaten anything for three days!”

“Come in,” the pastor replied.

The youth was seated at the table after he had a chance to wash his hands and face. He ate the pan of biscuits with the half pound of butter and the pint of strawberry preserves and drank the pot of coffee.

He thanked the parsonage family and left. Then the pastor’s wife made a pan of biscuits, a skillet of water gravy and another pot of coffee.

That was agape.
IT IS CONSOLING and inspiring to know that God, the Great Physician, has given us an infallible diagnosis and prescription for the malady of sin. In fact, God is so explicit in His diagnosis and cure for the universal disease of sin that nothing is left to the imagination.

In 1 John 1:7-10, God deals with the entire sin problem of mankind. These verses, taken in reverse order, open up God’s remedy for man’s sin.

God declares that all have sinned. Verse 10 gives God’s diagnosis for all mankind as it relates to acts of sin. He says, “If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.” Every person either is or has been a sinner.

This truth of God is not isolated in one or two verses of Scripture. It is made explicit throughout His Word. Romans 3:23 states the fact clearly: “For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God.”

I have met only one person in my lifetime who claimed he had not sinned. However, a brief conversation with a parent of that person revealed the truth. I became convinced that it was a lapse of memory on his part and that the Word of God was still true.

Sin is universal in its scope. We may call our willful wrongs by many sophisticated terms, but God calls them sins.

Scripture does not say, “If we are not sinning . . .” The whole matter is in the past tense. For the child of God, sinning is in the past—not the present. They have been delivered from an awful life of sinning by the transforming power of God.

Now let us consider God’s prescribed cure for sins committed.

Confession of one’s sins leads to forgiveness. Here is one of the great promises of God to every sinner: “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness” (1 John 1:9). Forgiveness is God’s prescribed cure for sins. But it is not shallow forgiveness. It is life-changing, transforming forgiveness. In fact, it involves becoming a new person in Christ. The old life of sinning passes away, and a new life of fellowship with God, through Christ, begins.

Forgiveness is God’s only cure for sinning. And this is granted only upon the condition of one’s willingness to confess his sins to God.

Genuine confession carries with it the acts of faith and the forsaking of those sins which are confessed. Thus, God gives His prescription and then tells us how to have it filled in one’s life. The simplicity of confession and believing God to forgive confounds many, but that is His cure for sinning in every case.

The presence of the sin-nature cannot be denied. Another dimension of the sin problem is introduced in verse 8. God’s Word states, “If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.” The word “sin” here is in the singular and points to the nature of sin, not the acts of sin. In verses 9 and 10, the acts of sin have been identified and a cure prescribed. Now God is calling attention to the root or nature of sin in the heart.

Everyone commits acts of sin because everyone is born with a sinful nature. To deny this fact, God says, is to deceive ourselves. Therefore, the sin nature remains in the heart until it is cared for by God himself. All acts of sin are cared for when God, through Christ, forgives; but the nature of sin is not subject to forgiveness, for it is not some wrong done. There must be a different cure for a deeper need.

This, then, is why the sin nature remains in the hearts of those who have confessed their sins and have been forgiven. The only realistic and scriptural thing to do is to admit that this is true and stop deceiving ourselves. In fact, human experience bears out what God’s Word declares. There is a defiling root of sin in the heart of mankind which sends out its awful shoots of carnal actions and attitudes in everyday living. As long as one permits the sin nature to remain in the heart, there will be deception and defeat. Since God is concerned about this fact, He prescribes a cure for the sin nature as well as for the acts of sin.

The sin nature is subject to cleansing. Verse 7 describes God’s cure for the sin nature: “But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin.”

Cleansing is the only cure for the sin nature. And this is an act of God which is distinctively different in time and scope from forgiveness. It is a second work of God in the heart, cleansing from inbred sin. St. Peter testified to this cleansing in Acts 15:8-9: "And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith."

All man-made remedies, such as suppression, growth, or physical death fall far short of curing the problem of inbred sin. On the other hand, God's cure is effective in the heart of every person who will submit to His cleansing, sanctifying power.

How alarming that many are more fearful of a second work of God in their hearts than the deceiving presence of sin. Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God" (Matthew 5:8). This statement points out the importance of experiencing heart-cleansing.

Well, here is God's diagnosis and prescribed cure for the entire sin problem. In fact, it is written much clearer than any prescription form filled out by the best of doctors. To be truthful, I cannot read what they write, nor would I understand it if I could. However, the Great Physician is open and clear in His prescription. He simply says "You have sinned, but I will forgive you if you will confess your sins to me. Secondly, you possess a sinful nature, but I will cleanse you of even this, if you will submit to my plan for you." He declares that He is both Savior and Sanctifier—He offers forgiveness and cleansing.

It was just an ordinary afternoon and I had been reading to my five-year-old daughter. Having read several stories, we were just lying on the bed resting. All was quiet, and after about 15 minutes, I concluded that Jennifer was asleep. Very quietly I got up and started to tiptoe out of the room. But Jennifer quickly got up, too.

I said, "Why, Jennifer, you were so quiet, I thought you were asleep."

"No, Mom," she said. "I was just lying here listening to my thinking!"

I laughed, and we went on about our activities of the day. However, her words continued to ring in my mind.

What would happen if we, as Christians, stopped a while and "Listened to our thinking"? Proverbs 23:7 says, "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Do my thoughts really help determine the kind of person I am? If so, it would be profitable for me to examine my thought life—just take time to "listen to my thinking."

Many scholars do insist that one's thoughts are very vital to his being and his personality. Books have been written on the power of our attitudes and of positive thinking. Some even say one's whole life can be changed by learning mind control.

That being true, can the born-again, Spirit-filled Christian afford to fill his mind daily with the immoral, godless themes of soap operas and other TV programs, popular and country music, as well as hundreds of magazines and books which fill our newsstands today?

Psychologists tell us that people talk about what is close to their hearts—what fills their minds. Therefore, if we fill our minds daily with good, wholesome books, clean songs, and especially the Word of God, (Continued on page 10) we will find ourselves talking about these things and our Christian witness will be enlarged. Others who "listen to our thinking" will be inspired and encouraged and God's name will be glorified.

STOP . . . all evil thoughts and negative thoughts.
Don't dwell on problems and defeats.

LOOK . . . for the good and beautiful things in the world and in people. Praise God for the victories and blessings in life.

LISTEN . . . to God's Word and His voice. Let Him fill you and use you and guide you daily.

Take time to "listen to your thinking." "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Philippians 4:7-8).

WHAT IS COMPASSION?
THE ABILITY TO IDENTIFY . . . TO FEEL . . . TO CARE.

PARABLES

A chain is as strong as its weakest link;
your life is as pure as the thoughts you think.
At fraying strand,
the rope breaks through.
Your love is as real as acts you do.
Though house on sand stands proud and tall,
it crumbles soon in stormy squall,
for walls come down when base gives way.
Men judge your acts, not what you say.

MOVED WITH COMPASSION

One man’s lesson for putting love into action

by LEROY H. REEDY

I WAS IN MY CHURCH OFFICE opening my morning mail when the phone rang. A weeping mother had called to ask me to conduct the funeral of her 22-year-old son.

"He was on his way to visit his fiancee last night," she said. "He never got there. The police found him dead in his car with the motor running and all the windows rolled up. He’s been working two jobs, you know, so he and Gloria could get married next month. He must have stopped to rest and died from carbon monoxide. I’ve been begging him to get that muffler fixed but he said he had neither the time nor the money."

She continued, "He was such a good boy. He sent me a check every payday and he always took the kids to Sunday School until he went into the army."

I felt a measure of sadness about this fine young soldier. I had tried to visit him several times but he was always at work. I had been driving the Sunday School bus and bringing the younger children to church for several months now but had never succeeded in getting the mother to come.

"Pastor, I’d love to come," she had explained, "but I have to work six days a week and Sunday is the only time I have to wash, clean and do my mending. And too, the only time I really get to rest is on Sunday while the kids are in Sunday School."

Now, as I walked up the steps of this poor home, I noticed that the lock on the front door was broken, toys were scattered about, and everything looked topsy-turvy.

The weeping mother met me at the door and showed me to a worn, lumpy, overstuffed chair. The house was filled with relatives and friends. Cigarette smoke hung in blue clouds. I refused the black coffee offered by one of the children. Soon my asthma began to kick up and I began to cough and sneeze. I got a rough outline of the service and left as soon as I could.

As I drove away, some very unworthy thoughts were going through my mind. "Well, I wouldn’t spend much time on this one. These people are so poor and ignorant, they’ll never know if your sermon is good or bad. And besides, you know people like this never pay anything for your services anyway."

Then another thought came to me, "How would I treat this widow if she were rich and drove a Cadillac?" I had to go back!

I made a U-turn. As I drove back toward that poor home, I suddenly got a mental picture of another dead boy. That boy was my son. He, too, had died in an auto accident. I saw again the flower-filled church. I could hear the soft organ music, the sympathetic words of ministers, family, and friends. I suddenly felt a wave of compassion and sympathy sweep over me. Once again I felt the bitterness of death, the great weight of agony and disappointment, the frustrations of burying all one’s hopes and dreams.

As I walked into that home the second time that day, I no longer saw the worn chairs and the scattered toys, but I saw a courageous widow weeping over a dead son who had been working double shifts to gather enough money to marry the girl of his dreams. I saw a loving family and friends who were doing their best to stand by in life’s darkest hour.

I sat down; I accepted the black, bitter coffee; I identified with this sorrowing mother. I wept with her as Jesus had wept with Mary and Martha over their dead brother. I worked out the minutest details of the service. Before I left, I called everyone in and read from the Scriptures and prayed.

The funeral chapel was packed. The soldier boy’s buddies were there with their wives and sweethearts. I preached from John 11, stressing the words of Jesus to Mary and Martha: "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (v. 25). I held up the bright hope of the resurrection against the dark background of poverty, disappointment, and despair. I closed with the great challenge of Micah 6:8, "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Few left without shaking my hand and expressing appreciation for the message. How glad I was that I had done my homework well. And how glad I was that I had been moved with compassion by the Holy Spirit that earlier day.

What is compassion? It is the ability to identify with the sufferings of another, to feel, to care, to sympathize. It is "love in action," and only the love of Christ in our hearts can help us to have compassion in every circumstance.

LEROY H. REEDY is a retired Nazarene elder residing in Sacramento, California.
PROBABLY no doctrine in the New Testament is as misunderstood as the doctrine of the Holy Spirit. He has received both credit and blame for things for which He is not at all responsible.

So, then, just who is the Holy Spirit, anyway?

First, the Holy Spirit is a Person. In the words of the Manual of the Church of the Nazarene, “We believe in the Holy Spirit, the Third Person of the Triune Godhead” (Articles of Faith, III). He, together with the Father and Son, comprise the unity of the Trinity. Yet He is one distinct Person in His own right, and He functions uniquely.

He is a Person because, like a person, He has self-identity. He exists independent of any other individual. We have transliterated—carried from the Greek directly to the English—our word ego. It is the Greek first personal pronoun. Psychologists tell us that the ego is the center of the human personality, the essential self of a person. A person’s ego may be tainted by selfishness, but every person, even the sanctified Christian, has an ego, a self.

In Scripture the Holy Spirit rarely refers to himself. He functions mainly to glorify Christ (John 16:8-11). On one occasion, however, He speaks in the first person. As Peter was thinking about his recent vision concerning the Gentiles, the Holy Spirit spoke, “Simon, three men are looking for you. So get up and go downstairs. Do not hesitate to go with them, for I have sent them” (Acts 10:19-20, NIV). Clearly, only a person speaks of himself this way.

Also, the Spirit is a Person because, like a person, He has self-determination. Jesus said of the Spirit, “The wind blows wherever it pleases. You hear its sound, but you cannot tell where it comes from or where it is going. So it is with everyone born of the Spirit” (John 3:8, NIV). The wind is impersonal. But the Spirit, being a person, wills, chooses, and exercises volition. On one occasion the Spirit chose not to allow Paul to preach the word in the province of Asia (Acts 16:6).

The Holy Spirit exhibits another characteristic of personality—intelligence. After the Jerusalem Council had met and decided what they would require of the Gentile believers, the apostles and elders sent a letter informing the Gentiles of their decision. In the letter they wrote, “It seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us not to burden you with anything but the following requirements” (Acts 15:28, NIV); and then they listed them. In this statement the church leaders credited the same intelligence to the Spirit that they claimed for themselves.

Those who fail to perceive the Spirit’s personality sometimes think of Him as a force, a power, an influence, or a thing. Perhaps part of the misunderstanding comes from some unfortunate translations in the King James Version of the Bible: “The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God” (Romans 8:16, 26, italics mine).

In the past I have been guilty of carelessness when it came to remembering and referring to the just who is the Holy Spirit, anyway?

by MERRILL S. WILLIAMS

“THE PROMISE IS FOR YOU... FOR gender of a baby. Often when told the sex, I'd forget. I was often more than a little uncomfortable not knowing just what to call it. And that was my mistake—calling he or she it.

But now we have a new little person living at our house. And since this little one has adorned our lives, I understand more clearly the importance of personality in infants. My little boy, Justin, is definitely not an it! To properly honor the Spirit we must recognize that He is a Person.

But we know something else about the Spirit. He is a Person like Jesus. Before His ascension Jesus sought to comfort and reassure His disciples who were concerned about His absence. He told them about Another who would come and minister to them after He had gone. He said, "I will ask the Father, and he will give you another Counselor, the Spirit of truth, to be with you forever" (John 14:16-17, NIV).

We know that the Spirit is like Jesus because what He does, Jesus did. Jesus spoke of His relationship to His followers in terms of being in them (John 14:20). The Holy Spirit also indwells the disciples of Jesus (John 14:17). Like Jesus, the Spirit will teach believers (John 13:13; 14:26). Jesus testified of himself. The Spirit will also witness in Jesus' behalf (John 15:26). Jesus speaks to God in our behalf; He pleads our case (1 John 2:1). So does the Spirit (Romans 8:26).

We also know the Spirit is like Jesus because of a word Jesus chose to describe Him. He is another Counselor. In New Testament Greek two different words are translated by our English word another. The writers sometimes use them interchangeably, but they are different enough in meaning to be distinct. Heteros refers to something of a different kind. Paul uses this word to distinguish between the law of sin and the law of his mind; "but I see another law at work in the members of my body" (Romans 7:23, NIV).

Allos means something of the same kind. W. T. Purkiser reminds us that when we want to know what God is like we look at Jesus (John 14:9). But we can also look at Jesus to see what the Spirit is like. He is another Person like Jesus.

The Spirit then is a Person. And He is also a Person like Jesus. But He is also a Person who ministers to modern-day Christians in different ways as they need His help. The word translated "Comforter" in the KJV and "Counselor" in the NIV is a word that is impossible to translate by one English word.

Some, therefore, have transliterated the Greek word into English as Paraclete. Wycliffe first translated it "Comforter." Comforter comes from two Latin words, con and fortis meaning "with strength." Although Comforter then meant strengthen, today it means primarily one who consoles. Although He minister in this way, consolation is not His only or primary ministry.

Literally Paraclete means one called alongside to help." Perhaps Catherine Marshall has best captured the comprehensive meaning of the term in the title of her book on the Holy Spirit, The Helper.

Since the word Paraclete is untranslatable into English, the reasons why a person was called alongside to help in Jesus' day give meaning to the Spirit's various ministries. In court a paraclete was called in to testify in defense of the accused. He was an advocate, a counsel for the defense. But as defense counsel, the Spirit does not plead any client's cause; He defends only those in the right.

John calls Satan "the accuser of the brethren" (Revelation 12:10). Through false accusation he attempts to discourage, confuse, and defeat the Christian. But we have an Advocate, One to plead our case, One to defend us against the venomous threats of our enemy. The Holy Spirit helps us defeat the arch accuser.

A paraclete also witnessed in someone's favor in a court of law. In this sense the Holy Spirit helps us with our doubts. He gives witness in our hearts to the reality of God's Word. He confirms that Word and assures us of our right relationship to God.

A paraclete was also one called in to offer comfort to one who was troubled, disappointed, or bewildered. Our heavenly Father is "the God of all comfort" (2 Corinthians 1:3), and the Holy Spirit is the One who administers this comfort to our hearts.

When Jesus told His disciples He would soon leave them, fear, disappointment, and sorrow filled their hearts. What would they do? How would they live? Who could ever take the place of the gentle Galilean? Another Helper, the Holy Spirit. Jesus promised to send Him to help them in their daily Christian living.

Jesus' promise was fulfilled historically on the Day of Pentecost. But on that momentous day Peter spoke to a convicted crowd and said:

"The promise is for you and your children and for all who are far off—for all whom the Lord our God will call" (Acts 2:39, NIV).

The promise still holds true. It is for us today. It is for you.

ALL WHOM THE LORD YOUR GOD WILL CALL.” ACTS 2:39, NIV
BACKSLIDING: NO SMALL THING

BACKSLIDING is no small thing. It inflicts losses on every church and hounds the heels of every Christian.

In his Second Epistle, Peter likens the condition of backsliding to a dog returning to his vomit or a pig, after being washed, returning to the mire. He also says it is better for one never to have known the Way, than for one, having known, to backslide.

This condition needs to be dealt with not only in the backslidden, but the believer must be warned to “take heed lest he fall.” I have found the following four suggestions most helpful.

First of all, one needs to make a commitment, full and complete, then lock it in. I call it a mind-set. In the backslidden, you will find that circumstances control one’s commitment rather than one’s commitment controlling circumstances. We need to lock in our commitment.

Joshua told the assembled multitude, “Choose you this day whom ye will serve” (24:15). By this he did not imply that we are to decide every day whom to follow, but rather, make a firm decision. Lock it in. Let that commitment govern everything else in any given day. One whose commitment is floating and changing is headed for backsliding.

Secondly, an attitude of following through must be adopted. A person who never finishes anything he begins will be a prime candidate for falling back. Many do not follow through with anything. They quit somewhere in the middle; usually it is easier to quit because they do not know how to finish.

When Paul wrote to the church in Galatia, “I marvel that you are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ” (1:6), he was probably writing to people who never followed through on anything. Adopt an attitude of always following through in every endeavor.

Another suggestion is that we must always be realistic. Being unrealistic is the source of many falls and leads to disillusionment, disappointment, and unrealized dreams and ideals. John gives us insight into the realistic approach to things that Jesus had. “Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men and needed not that any should testify of man; for he knew what was in man” (2:24-25). Too many times our estimation, expectation, and evaluation of people, the church, and even God are totally unrealistic. The result is disillusionment which often leads to backsliding. Be realistic.

Last, let God be God. So often we try to do it all. The obvious result is mental, physical, and spiritual fatigue. Fatigue makes cowards of us all. Jesus said, “Without me ye can do nothing” (John 15:5). No greater lesson can be learned, no greater source of power can be tapped, and no greater cause of backsliding can be removed than by just letting God be God. Hebrews calls it the "rest of faith."

There are causes for backsliding—there are cures. I have found that making a locked-in commitment, adopting a follow-through attitude, being realistic, and letting God be God not only can cure it, but, better yet, can actually prevent it.
HIS EXPRESSION was used only once in the New Testament, and that was by St. Paul in the first chapter of Ephesians (v. 18.). The KJV renders it “the eyes of your understanding,” while the NIV, TEV, and others translate it “the eyes of your heart.”

This descriptive term, with its context, infers that what we see with our physical eyes may or may not move us; what we see with the eyes of our heart always motivates us. What we see intellectually may be true but cold and calculating; what we see with inner vision is warm, moving, and alive.

The enlightened mind is not necessarily an obedient mind, but a surrendered heart obeys implicitly. Paul brings to the fore this concept of certainty in the lives of believers with his words, “that ye may know” (v. 18). This is good news today to a world filled with uncertainty and doubts.

The view through the eyes of the God-blessed and God-directed heart brings a trio of deep spiritual blessings, the first of which is the “hope of his calling” (v. 18). In actuality, it is a relationship with Christ. Paul expresses it in another place as “Christ in you, the hope of glory” (Colossians 1:27). The eyes are blinded by sin until we enter into this relationship through the sanctifying power of God. Life is viewed with distorted vision until the Holy Spirit cleanses the heart.

“Called to be saints” (Romans 1:7) are the words Paul uses in relating believers to everyday life. But we are not called to be museum pieces, or hothouse Christians who wilt in the hot suns of life. “For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness” (1 Thessalonians 4:7).

The hope of His calling is irrevocably tied to the possibility of fulfilling His calling. God must not only call us to holy living, He must make it possible, else He cannot be the Heavenly Father He proposes to be. Believers everywhere have found Him equal to every test.

The second blessing viewed is that we may know “what are the riches of His glory” (Ephesians 1:18) in relation to His people. Not only are His people His cherished inheritance; He insures their inheritance in glory. The riches of His glory, or His glorious riches, are expended lavishly to bring victory to the saints.

I once heard this beautiful prayer, “0 God, it does not impoverish Thee to give nor enrich Thee to withhold.” He will spend whatever power is necessary to bring and maintain victory in the lives of believers. That is what sanctification is all about! Not that the sanctified will not suffer, but that they will suffer victoriously, seeing with the eyes of their hearts that God does provide.

Do we need grace? This blessing is according to “the riches of His grace” (v. 7). He not only works in believers but for believers. Matthew Henry said, “Grace is glory begun, and holiness is happiness in the bud.”

JOHN W. MAY is superintendent of the Eastern Kentucky District and lives in Mount Sterling, Kentucky.
JOHN WESLEY said of the early Methodists, “Our people die well.” What was their secret? It was a relationship with God that took the terror out of death and turned it into a triumph.

Does such inner grace work the same today? Let Carla answer. In the midst of extreme suffering (cancer), she was able to say, “I’ve never been happier, never in my whole life.” No, she was not delirious. Her mind was perfectly clear.

But we need to get her story. For 11 years she was rebellious against the teachings of her godly mother and against the Christian school she had attended; but her rebellion was really against God. She was determined to have her fling in the world. The consequences were divorce, loneliness, disappointment, and heartache. What had beckoned so alluringly proved to be ashes.

Then in 1977, at only 31 years of age, the doctors discovered cancer. She knew that God had her cornered. But it was the cornering of infinitely tender love.

It was not until September that she quit fighting. In her own words, “I came to the end of myself. I just threw myself on that couch and I told the Lord that I couldn’t go any farther without Him. And He came to my rescue. When you’re filthy in your soul and living in sin, and nothing is going right as far as you and the Lord are concerned, you have a real need and I had a real need. The Lord fulfilled that need that day, because I repented of my sins.”

For the next 11 months she was in and out of the hospital. Her body was wasted but her spirit soared. The real secret of the growing triumph which kept pace with the increasing pain and weakness was a spiritual turning point in January, 1978.

Although her salvation in September was so real that she could say, “I was walking in heaven,” yet paradoxically she would look back later and confess: “Even after I was saved, there was still that pull—there was still that earthly, that carnal nature. I had it, and it was tugging.”

But in January she touched God at a deeper level. It was while in the hospital in Portland, Oregon. “I gave my will totally over to the Lord and asked for the infilling of the Holy Spirit.” Up until this time, she declared, “I still hadn’t given up my will. This is the key. I feel—the absolute key.”

When her mother queried, “Did you know it?” she responded, “Of course I knew it. You can’t help but know it when the Holy Spirit comes into your life.” “Do you think it made a difference, dear? A distinct difference?”

“It made all the difference in the world. When you give your will over, that’s the last token that you have of self. For me it was. I’m willing to do anything the Lord wants me to do: It doesn’t matter to me, I’m His.”

This was not a profession of yieldedness as a ruse to persuade God to heal her. It was total, unconditional abandonment, with a joy and peace that accepted, in the months to come, either prospect equally—to die or live, as long as it was God’s will.

Only once did the pain threaten to disturb the equanimity of her spirit. While lying in the back seat of the car, enroute to Tacoma, she started to cry because of the excruciating pain. Then suddenly she began to call out in prayer: “Dear Jesus, please don’t let me be complaining and crying around, but make me a joyful Christian, a testimony for you, Jesus.” After that no one ever heard her complain, or even cry out with pain.

In spite of her weakness she had strong determina-

DEAN SPENCER AND DEAN NELSON, authors

THE POIGNANT STORY of the late Dean Spencer's escape from a burning hotel and his slow recovery in a hospital burn unit isn't pleasant reading. But it is a powerful reminder of answered prayer and of God's involvement in our lives.

Let the book speak for itself: "While I slept, destiny was marching in my direction. . . . I was face-to-face with the biggest battle I had ever fought. The fight would be for my life. . . . Someone was yelling, 'The hotel is on fire!' . . . The fire is getting worse. Can't breathe—smoke. Must have air. . . . The heat is now unbearable! . . . Dear Lord, help me get out of here so I can see all my girls again! It was the last conscious thought I would have for some time. God answered that prayer.

"Ambulance doors open . . . The siren screams and I'm inside. . . . Moving objects, masked people hurrying, putting bandages everywhere . . . I will not die! . . . Dear Lord, I really need You now! . . . I will not die! . . . A doctor and nurse are in the corner of my room talking about someone. They aren't too sure he's going to make it. Poor guy, poor family. . . . 'You'd better watch him real close. We may lose him tonight.' But they are talking about me . . . At this point, it looked like I was losing."

But Dean Spencer did live from this catastrophe. He returned home to a loving wife and three daughters. He returned to a busy life of executive responsibility. He returned to a life of working and witnessing for Christ.

This is an unforgettable story. It will strengthen your faith and assure you that God is still working miracles today.

Author-subject Dean Spencer was killed in a private plane crash in February of this year. Coauthor Dean Nelson is a graduate student in journalism and recipient of the 1981 Evangelical Press Association scholarship award.

DICK McCool: THE MAN & HIS MISSION

by JENNIFER AILOR

I N THE SPRING OF 1965, the promise of four years of collegiate athletics lay before Dick McCool. But a summer vacation and a fateful accident changed all that.

The summer after Dick had graduated from high school, he and his parents and older brother Doug were vacationing in northern Michigan. They had already spent an afternoon water skiing and boating when Dick asked his brother to go swimming just one more time with him.

While Doug ran to the cabin for a dry towel, Dick casually picked up a football, tossed it back and forth in his hands and suddenly hurled it as far as he could out over the dock and into the lake. Then, running the length of the dock at top speed, he flung his full 245 pounds and 6 feet, 5 inches into the water.

The last thing he remembered for many hours after that dive was drifting up through the water and seeing two small girls on the bank pointing him out to his brother. Then he blacked out.

"The Bible tells us that we are our brother's keeper. For me, Doug was my keeper, and his resuscitation efforts saved my life," Dick said.

At the time of the accident, the McCools did not know that Dick had broken his neck and for the rest of his life would be a partial quadriplegic, meaning that he was paralyzed from the chest down with partial use of his arms remaining.

Many months of hospitalization and rehabilitation followed Dick's accident. During the initial operation after he was brought by plane to a hospital in Saginaw, Mich., his heart stopped, but he was revived. Then he was in a coma for two and one-half weeks, followed by a semicoma in which he was in a dreamlike world of water images and symbols of good and evil. A month and a half after the accident, Dick very nearly died again when he was abruptly set upright from his circle bed on which he had been lying flat on his back since the accident. As his blood pooled in his legs, Dick's heart stopped once more, to be revived again.

"I remember crying myself to sleep many, many nights. I wasn't one to try to blame God. I just didn't understand what purpose I now had. It was like being born into a new world after the accident. I was different now. I was a different person," he added.

Because Dick had been so active in sports and had planned a career in athletics, he was suddenly at a loss as to what to base his life on.

"One night I felt so totally alone, and it seemed that the rest of the world was out there and I was here by myself. I asked my brother Doug who was with me that night to just hold me. He lifted me up and held me close, and I felt in touch with the world again," Dick said.

He was eventually transferred to McLaren Hospital in Flint, Mich., for rehabilitation. There occupational and physical therapists worked with him to prepare him for a readjusted lifestyle in the outside world.

"In physical therapy I was taught to work my muscles so I could reach my fullest potential. Occupational therapy taught me to do as much for myself as I possibly could," he said.

Dick recalled important lessons in survival that he learned at the hospital. For example, a jar of pins, needles, nuts, bolts, and assorted objects was dumped in front of him, and he was asked to place them back in the jar. After hours of effort, he eagerly presented his full jar to the therapist who smiled, complimented him, and then dumped it out again and told him to do it over.

Another time he was put on the floor and told to roll over by himself—a seemingly impossible task at the time. But after working for two hours a day, five days a week for two weeks Dick was able to get up on his elbows. He later mastered rolling over by learning to use muscle spasms in his legs to give him enough "momentum" to turn over. Still another time he took advantage of a friend's offer to push his wheelchair to a meeting. When a nurse saw what was happening, she stopped Dick, took him back to his room, and made him push himself to the meeting place.

"Today I can do anything I used to do, only differently," he said. "I have learned to figure things out, and I realize now that, like the architect who draws up the plans for his house. I'm not less of a person because I don't hammer in all the nails myself."

After Dick's dismissal from McLaren, he and his family moved to Flint, Mich., where he drifted into an almost listless existence of eating, sleeping, and watching TV.

"In high school I had solved problems by joking. Now I would talk about my accident and joke about it, but I was still paralyzed. It didn't go away. At this point in my life I felt totally worthless and was no use to myself or God. I had no purpose in life," Dick recalled.

His life was soon to take a new direction, however, and with it came a series of fortunate events in which Dick clearly saw God's involvement. Having moved back to the country, Dick began to look forward to the frequent visits of a local minister and some of the young people from his church.

"They cared about me as a person and would stop by to sing and talk about school and ask about me and my interests," he related. When his friends arranged to have a ramp built into the church's new building, Dick was there for the first service in the new church. Shortly after that, Dick became a Christian.

"I realized that God loved me whether I was standing or sitting. I asked Jesus Christ to forgive me my sins. He did, and He came into my life, filling it with purpose and meaning," he said.

More changes followed. Dick took his first job, teaching remedial reading at a local high school and also doing clerical work for his church. During this next year, the sale of some family property enabled Dick to buy a van to give him more mobility and independence. When the van's roof was too short for his tall frame, a raised roof was donated by a man who had formerly been considered something of a miser. Finally, a mechanical lift was purchased to enable Dick to get in and out of his van without assistance.

In 1973 Dick enrolled at Olivet Nazarene College in Kankakee, Ill., where he chose religion as a major. After his graduation in 1977, he enrolled at the Nazarene Theological Seminary in Kansas City, from which he graduated last May to begin a 12-month chaplaincy internship at Trinity. He plans a career in hospital chaplaincy after he completes the internship.

Today Dick feels a great responsibility as a handicapped person. He believes that all handicapped persons have an opportunity to help people develop "the fruits of the Spirit"—including kindness, love, patience, and consideration of others.

"I almost wish that just for a short period of time everyone could be paralyzed. Then, perhaps, people would set their priorities on the truly important things in life. As for me, I try to let people know by my presence and by my concern and care for them that there is a God who loves them. You know, actions speak louder than words," he said.

"When you think about it, too, there are even some advantages to being paralyzed," Dick added with a smile that lit up his face. "People hold doors open for you. You can go to the front of the line. You don't even need to buy shoes—this is only my 5th pair in 15 years!

"You can look at the negatives in your life or you can see both the negatives and the positives and concentrate your energies on the positives," he summarized.

Dick McCool's whole life now is one big affirmation of the positive.

William Howard Hoople

WW I CHAPLAIN, WILLIAM HOWARD HOOPLE

William Howard Hoople is usually remembered for pioneering the holiness work among the urban poor in Brooklyn and for his part in the 1907 merger with the Los Angeles-based Church of the Nazarene. Another often forgotten chapter in Rev. Hoople's ministry began in 1917 when he accepted a call to serve as a chaplain in France during WW I.

Trusting his Brooklyn pastorate to the hands of John Norberry, Rev. Hoople left Brooklyn to serve behind the front lines until Armistice Day. His beautiful singing voice soon earned him the affection of the American soldiers who referred to him as "Pop" Hoople.

Rev. Hoople continued his chaplaincy after the war, serving American troops in Italy, Germany, and Russia. After returning home to Brooklyn, William with our children. Jesus quoted Deuteronomy 6 as the greatest commandment of all. That scripture commands the parent to put God first in every area of life (and isn’t that the start of holiness?) AND teach the children the same—at every meal, every trip, in short, constantly. Yet what have we consistently done? We send them for training six hours a day, five days a week to a school system where it is virtually illegal to talk about God, much less put Him first!

Howard Hoople died on September 29, 1922, as a result of poison gas inhalation during his chaplaincy in France.

BROUGHT BACK MEMORIES

The mailman just brought our mail containing May 1 edition of Herald of Holiness.

I just read your article “Mother’s Laws.” It is what our world needs so very badly today. It brought back many memories of my childhood days. A plum sprout didn’t break easily. I am so glad I learned obedience then, because it has helped me walk closer to Christ.

KEEP AFTER THEM

I want to comment on the article “Why aren’t They Saved?” by Rev. Dale German. I was in agreement with all of it except the last two paragraphs. As a parent of three sons who were brought up in a holiness church but who are now serving sin, I have had the same questions. I have found it more of an exercise of faith to intercede for them than to spend the time being haunted by doubt and giving in to defeat.

I cannot agree that they should be left to “work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.” Paul was writing to Christian people. He later wrote to Timothy encouraging him to instruct those that oppose themselves and are a captive of the devil.

We can enjoy our own salvation and daily walk with Christ so much more if we have a concern for the lost, our own and others, and don’t leave them to find their own way.

A BIG BOOST

I want you to know I love and appreciate the Herald of Holiness. It is food for my soul and I can hardly wait for it to come. I go to a wonderful church in Baraboo, Wis., and have a great minister, Rev. Mack Armstrong, but I live so far away I can’t get there as often as I want, so the Herald is a big boost for my spiritual life. I certainly enjoyed the story on Colonel Sanders—so glad that money and popularity were not his god.

Keep up the good work.

In prayer one day, Mother found her answer. On Friday when she walked two blocks to the downtown shopping area, she went into Ken-Mac’s florist shop, purchased one red rose in a bud vase and took them home. On a small card she wrote a verse of scripture, taped it to the tissue wrapping and walked next door with her little package. Talking with Mrs. Rudolph at the door, Mother inquired about Mr. Rudolph’s condition, and then asked that she give him the little token of remembrance.

The next Friday, Mother Restrick purchased another red rose and, along with another scripture verse, delivered it next door. Each week for nearly three months Mother continued her little ministry to her needy neighbor, witnessing with a rose and some scripture, praying earnestly that the entrance of God’s Word would give light and that Mr. Rudolph would experience peace in Christ before he died.

A few days after the funeral, Mother was roused from her afternoon nap by the doorbell. (At 86 years of age, she took a short rest after lunch each day.) Mrs. Rudolph wanted her to know how much the roses and scriptures had meant to her husband. Using the cards as bookmarks, Mr. Rudolph had underlined each of the verses in his Bible and had begun to read the Word for the first time in his life. As a result, the gospel had indeed become “the power of God unto salvation,” and Mr. Rudolph found comfort in his time of need.

PEOPLE AND PLACES

Elizabeth B. Jones, former primary editor in Children's Ministries, has been chosen for the Fifth Edition of the World Who's Who of Women. This volume, published in Cambridge, England, is a listing of women of achievement around the world who have given meritorious service in their field.

Mrs. Jones is the author of 20 books and numerous stories, poems, and articles for children, parents, and teachers. She is now a free-lance writer and an active member of Kansas City First Church.

Rev. Wes Meisner, director of the Nazarene Student Center, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, Okla., was recently elected president of the Association of University Ministers. The association's membership is composed of ministers who are specifically involved in ministry to students at the OSU campus.

Rev. Meisner has been the director at the Nazarene Student Center for only nine months. He was placed in his position by the Northwest Oklahoma District Church of the Nazarene. August 5, 1980. He is a 1971 graduate of Oklahoma State University, where he earned his B.S. degree in civil engineering. He received his Master of Divinity degree from Nazarene Theological Seminary in 1975. Rev. Meisner served as campus minister at the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., for three years before accepting his present position.

Kathleen Tarr, a junior at Mount Vernon Nazarene College, was recently notified that she has been selected as a recipient of a research grant sponsored by the National Science Foundation. She hopes to do research on synthesizing blood.

Kathleen, one of 10 students chosen to receive a $1,200 grant from the National Science Foundation, will be doing research for 11 weeks during the summer at Bethany Nazarene College in Bethany, Okla. She, along with other students, will be under the direction of Dr. Paul E. Reinbold, chairman of the Chemistry department at Bethany. Five chemistry professors from several colleges and universities around the United States will be serving as their advisors.

Kathleen is the daughter of George and Lucille Tarr of Akron, Ohio.

Janet Smith Williams, professor at Nazarene Bible College in Colorado Springs, was guest lecturer and research associate at the Conservative Baptist Theological Seminary in Denver for the spring quarter recently concluded. The class, "The Role of Women in the Church," was under the instruction of Dr. Timothy Weber, professor of church history at the seminary. Professor Williams's special assignment was "The Impetus for Holiness Women to Preach the Gospel." While her research covered women of all holiness denominations, a special emphasis was given in her presentation regarding women ministers in the Church of the Nazarene from its origin to the present day. Her research, covering the call and personal life of Nazarene women ministers, uncovered many positive contributions to the church. At present there are 468 ordained and licensed women ministers on the rolls of the Church of the Nazarene.

An ordained elder in the Church of the Nazarene, she has been on the faculty at NBC for seven years, is chairman of the Division of General Studies, and a member of the Academic Council.

NNC COMMENCEMENT

A total of 214 men and women participated in the commencement exercises at Northwest Nazarene College on June 14. President Kenneth Pear­sell conferred degrees on 155 bache­lor of arts candidates, 8 bachelor of science, and 51 associate of arts degree candidates.

Special music was provided by the Crusader Choir, directed by Dr. Marvin Bloomquist, and the Hallelujah Brass Ensemble, directed by Dr. James Willis. The College Concert Band, directed by Professor Michael Bankston, played the prelude and academic procession.

The commencement program was held outdoors for the first time, on the campus lawn between Wiley Learning Center and the John E. Riley library.

The baccalaureate sermon was given by President Pearsall the same Sunday morning in College Church. Degree candidates received their hoods at that time from Dr. Gilbert Ford, NNC vice-president for academic affairs. Special music was provided by the Northwesterners, 18-member choral group directed by Dr. D. E. Hill.

Other graduation weekend events included a breakfast for honor students, a student art exhibit, the president's reception for graduates and parents, and concurrent alumni activities honoring the classes of 1926, 1931, and 1936.

NPH BOOK STAND IN NEW ZEALAND

Several thousand people visited the Nazarene Publishing House Bookstand at the Winter Show in Hamilton, New Zealand, May 22—June 1, and took copies of the Herald of Holiness. Dwight Neuenschwander, district superintendent, reported that in addition to introducing Christian literature, the stand afforded opportunity to introduce the church and make many new friends.

A special feature that attracted many church musicians was a display of the Please, Would You Play the Piano? church pianist teaching method.

Plans are now under way for another NPH bookstand at the Easter Show in Auckland in 1982. The Easter and Winter Shows of New Zealand are similar to the home shows or state fairs in the United States.

HEADQUARTERS HONORS EMPLOYEES AT AWARDS CHAPEL

The parable of one, two, and five talents was shared by Dr. Samuel Young, general superintendent emeritus, with the headquarters’ employ-
Dr. Samuel Young speaking during the chapel service.

This service was held to honor employees who have completed 2, 5, 10, 15, and 25 years of service at the International Headquarters of the Church of the Nazarene. Thirty-six employees were honored at this chapel service for giving their talents to the church through service at headquarters.

Dr. A. F. Harper, retired executive director of Church Schools, paid tributes and Benefits Services, has also completed 25 years of service at headquarters. Dr. Wessels began working in NMBF (Nazarene Ministers' Benevolent Fund)—now Pensions and Benefits Services—in November of 1955 and continues to provide excellent leadership in that office. He was unable to attend the Awards Chapel due to a prior PALCON commitment.

A reception was held following the chapel service as a time of fellowship and congratulation to the recipients.

MAKING CONTACT IN WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin District was host to puppet programs, songs, and fun this summer, as Contact, the children's ministries program sponsored by Youth Ministries, spent the summer of 1981 in the backyards and living rooms of home mission church communities, reaching children and parents for Christ. Twenty-two Nazarene collegians in three teams toured Wisconsin, spending two weeks each in 12 different locations. Their programs brought sunshine into the lives of hundreds of children, and scores of families were reached in this major home missions emphasis.

The students were trained in puppetry, music, evangelism, group dynamics, and follow-up at the Youth in Mission training camp at Golden Bell, Colo. They began their efforts on June 23, holding four one-hour “Sunshine Clubs” in four different “backyard” locations in the community. During their stay at each church, they also conducted puppetry seminars, Sunday School teacher training, and led small-group Bible studies. The highlight of the event was a rally day on the final Sunday, with Contact teams participating in the worship services. Children and adults alike learned about Christ’s love, memorized Bible verses, and discovered ways they could serve Jesus.

Contact is a program unit of Youth in Mission. The program is sponsored by Youth Ministries, under the supervision of Mike Estep, Campus/Career program director. Contact is directed by Gary Siveywright, editor of Bread magazine and Teens Today. This year’s “Sunshine Club” programs were written by Steve Pennington, special ministries consultant.

MARRIAGE ENRICHMENT TRAINING—OHIO

The Southwestern Ohio District hosted its second training retreat in cooperation with the denomination’s Marriage and Family Life Office.

Couples who receive marriage enrichment training do so with the intent of establishing an ongoing equipping and nurturing ministry of marriages in the local church.

Three of the seven couples who attended were from the Southwestern Ohio District: Barney and Karen Richardson, Newtonsville; Harville and Lois Duncan, Franklin; Roland and Carolyn Booher, Dayton. The other four participating couples were: Ronn and Connie Collier (New Carlisle), Northwestern Ohio; Richard and Cheryl Gatlin (Cleveland), North Central Ohio; Mike and Mary Ellen Murphy (Chillicothe), Northwestern Illinois; and Ken and Margaret Col- len (Flint), Eastern Michigan District.

Under the leadership of Arlan and Denise Hoskins, the Southwestern Ohio District now has five clergy couples and two lay couples who are certified to lead marriage enrichment events. The Hoskinses are Southwestern Ohio District Marriage and Family Life directors.

For information on how your church or district can host a marriage enrichment experience, write Marriage and Family Life Ministries, 6401 The Paseo, Kansas City, MO 64131, or call (816) 333-7000, Ext. 364.

NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN DISTRICT SHOWS PROGRESS

There are approximately one-half million native Americans living within the area of Oklahoma, Arizona, and New Mexico in the North American Indian District. In this district there are 30 Nazarene churches, 1,755 Nazarenes, and multiplied numbers of un-reached native Americans, 25 percent of whom live in large metro areas and 67.3 percent of whom live in nonmetro areas.

District Superintendent Julian Gunn reported that three of the new mission churches are developing rapidly and have accepted budgets though not fully organized. Two other outreach areas are developing into mission status. The Indian District paid their General Budget in full and more than 90 percent of the Pensions and Benevolence Budget assigned, in addition to district budgets. They are moving steadily on a 10-year program toward self-support.

WILLIAMSONS CELEBRATE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Dr. and Mrs. Gideon B. Williamson celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on June 6.

Because of Dr. Williamson's declining health, the event was limited to a private celebration with the families of their sons, Joe and John, and their daughter, Maylou Cook. However, hundreds of congratulatory messages were received from friends around the world.

Upon his retirement from the general superintendency, the Williamson's enjoyed a new career as faculty members at Nazarene Bible College.

Within recent months he has published two books, Holiness for Every Day and Models for Modern Ministers. Audrey Williamson has been active as a teacher, writer, and convention speaker.

The Williamson's send their “thanks to hundreds of friends and fellow churchmen who remembered us on the occasion of our golden wedding anniversary,” adding, “Our hearts are full of gratitude for such an outpouring of love.”

Dr. and Mrs. Williamson now reside in Mesa, Ariz.

Writers frequently quote William Barclay. On the radio, I heard a man say that before Barclay died he wrote his autobiography. In this book Barclay says he does not believe that the Bible is the Word of God, nor does he believe that Jesus is the Son of God.

Is this true? If it is true, why do Nazarene writers quote Barclay?

I have not checked Barclay’s autobiography for the accuracy of the charge. However, I know that he has a commendable discussion of Jesus as “the Son of God” in at least one of his books which I have read with profit.

I can answer your question, however, without difficulty. Writers quote Barclay because he has a lot of good things to say in very helpful ways, whatever his theological deficiencies in some areas.

The notion that one should not quote an author unless he is totally orthodox would surprise the apostle Paul. He quotes approvingly from pagan sources, and his quotation has become part of the Bible (Acts 17:27-29; Titus 1:12-13). Truth is truth, whoever tells it, and Christianity has nothing to fear from the truth.

If we only quoted scholars who were right all the time about everything, it would bring quotation to a screeching halt, for not even “giants” among conservative, evangelical scholars are always right. To quote a man where he is right does not mean that we endorse him where he is wrong.

The 20 cities that Solomon gave to Hiram for his help in building the temple—are these the cities the PLO is fighting for?

According to 1 Kings 9:11, the 20 cities given to Hiram were “in the land of Galilee.” Hiram was displeased with them, and gave them back (2 Chronicles 8:21).

Since they are not identified, and may not all exist today, I can’t say the PLO is fighting for them. The PLO wants more than Galilee. It wants the whole of Palestine for the Arabs.
Edmonton, Alberta: The Beverly Church recently had a revival with Rev. Luther Collins. It has wonderfully fully changed the church. People sought the Lord in almost every service for forgiveness, for holiness of heart, and for physical healing. There were real miracles of change through the “touch of God.”

—C. V. Cornish, pastor

Marseilles, Ill.: The church recently had an inspiring and encouraging revival with Evangelist and Mrs. I. Thurl Mann. Attendance was excellent, prayers were answered, and many spiritual victories were won.

—Duane Kaufman, pastor

Austin, Tex.: Grace Church recently had a revival with Rev. Gary Haines as evangelist/song evangelist. Many of the church members received spiritual help. New people were at the altar for salvation. Several were sanctified. There were many seekers at the altar in each service. Brother Haines sang and preached with the Spirit’s anointing. His messages on holiness were clear, scriptural, and penetrating.

—Harry L. Evans, pastor

Aurora, Ill.: First Church experienced a Holy Spirit-anointed revival with Evangelist J. C. Crabtree. Many came to know the Lord in saving and sanctifying services as the Word was brought forth in old-fashioned, Holy Spirit convicting style. The ministry of Rev. Crabtree was uplifting and inspiring to the church. Eight people were sanctified in the services, and many saved for the first time.

—John L. Kizdee, pastor

Brownsville, Alberta: God recently came in His glory upon the church through His servant, Evangelist Hugh Gorman, during 10 days of blessed and powerful preaching of the Word. Through His holy anointing, the Word spoke to every needy heart, new people were saved and reclaimed, old people discovered new desire for a closer walk with the Lord. Every life has been enriched, and new vision received through this exciting time of revival, giving impetus for new growth.

—Doug Russell, pastor

Red Bluff, Calif.: First Church recently concluded a series on prophecy with Rev. Kenneth Wells as the speaker. Rev. Wells celebrated his 80th birthday during these meetings. Rev. Lily Wells, his wife, served with him in reading the texts and scripture, because of his failing eyesight. The congregation was stirred, and a man for whom much prayer had been offered, found the Lord. Rev. Wells was truly used of God, and the services were well attended.

—Frank L. Dabney, pastor

Albany, Ky.: First Church recently experienced an outstanding week of revival with Evangelist Dale Martin. There were five people sanctified, one saved, and the church was revitalized. The people responded in giving the best revival offerings each night and the best Sunday morning offering ever remembered.

—Dary E. Hodges, pastor

North Battleford, Saskatchewan: This new home missions church on the Canada West District experienced a deep moving of God’s Spirit during a “New Life Services” week of May 5-10. Average attendance was 23, but 15 people sought God and found definite victory. Marriages were mended. God wonderfully used the ministry of Rev. Luther Collins.

—Roy D. Kanhai, pastor

Reading, Pa.: “It’s Beginning to Rain,” was the theme chorus Evangelists Calvin and Marjorie Jantz recently used for the revival at Calvary Church. The Holy Spirit sent refreshing rains upon us night after night, service after service.

The Jantzes were the right people at the right time, used to spark a beautiful outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Definite conversions took place—one a young Catholic lady. Backsliders found forgiveness, others sought and received the fullness of His Spirit.

The family service on Sunday morning was beautiful as Mrs. Jantz preached the word. Rev. Jantz closed the service out on Sunday night with a beautiful time around the altar with the people.

THE CHURCH SCENE

Rolla, Mo., First Church recently held a mortgage-burning, with Pastor Don C. Farnsworth, Mr. William Seal, and Dr. Royce Thomas, church board secretary, participating. The $8,500 left owing on a $20,000 note was paid in full by an anonymous layman in the church. This layman also paid the 1981 Pensions and Benefits Budget of $800.

First Church relocated on 10 acres in 1979, with a total debt of $140,000.

Pastor James M. Raum, of the Lakeview, Ore., church, holds a $5,000 cashier’s check to be used on their building fund. It was sent anonymously after a lady called and informed him of her intent to give some money to the building fund. The Lakeview church is an “Oregon Church Planting” that presently meets in a Day Care Center for services Sundays and Wednesdays.

This layman’s generosity has permitted the church to use the $631 monthly payment of the $20,000 note on the principal of the $120,000 note. The church also received $700 from a couple who are not members of either the church or community. This inspired relatives, who are members of the church, to give an additional $500.

The men of the church organized a

to church board members:

What is your church doing to help your pastor proclaim God’s timeless truth to today’s society? He may learn the process at seminary, but today’s communication channels continue to change.

What ways can you help? One way might be for your church to provide a continuing education allowance in the annual budget. This provision would enable your pastor to purchase books, or attend seminars or classes dealing with various aspects of ministry. You would be reassured to know your doctor had just attended a seminar on how to treat your particular physical need. Are your spiritual needs any less important?

By the way, a continuing education allowance should be considered an expense of the local church, rather than a part of the pastor’s salary.

You are to be commended if your church already has provided a continuing education allowance for your pastor. You probably are reaping the reward of more relevant preaching.

Saturday morning prayer group over one year ago. They specifically began praying for answers to the financial dilemma of the church, having only 44 “active” members. God began to answer our prayers, and He is continuing to do so.

Sunday, June 7, the Circleville, Ohio, church honored the nine octogenarians of their congregation. The Senior Adult Choir sang and Pastor William Hill delivered an appropriate message. After the morning service, the guests of honor were treated by the congregation to a carry-in dinner in the church multipurpose center.

Each of the octogenarians was able to attend at least one service during that special day. Those honored were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Carter, Mrs. Bessie Hill, Mr. Edgar Newland, Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Pusey, Mrs. Edith Russell, Mr. Harry Salsbury, and Mrs. Dorothy Snyder.

NAZARENEM FAMILY LOSES SON IN HYATT TRAGEDY

Mr. and Mrs. Bartels, longtime members of the Olathe, Kans., College Church, lost their only child in the recent tragedy at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City. Their son, William III, and his wife, Bonnie, were in the lobby of the Hyatt Regency celebrating Bonnie's 39th birthday when the accident occurred.

Shortly after the accident Dr. Paul Cunningham, pastor of the Olathe College Church and presently serving as chaplain of the Olathe Police Department, was asked to proceed to the Hyatt Regency to counsel with the injured and family members at the scene. Pastor Cunningham arrived at the temporary morgue facility at the hotel where he said 40 bodies had already been received. After doing all that he could in the morgue, he was asked to help comfort those still on the main floor of the lobby. For the next seven hours, Pastor Cunningham counseled and prayed with survivors who were still trapped beneath the rubble. Although they could not see each other, they continued to communicate in encouragement and prayer.

Pastor Cunningham said that as he reflected on the tragic events of the evening, he was impressed by one thought: "There are very few things in life that are important. The top priority is being ready to go, and the need for Christians to pour out their lives to help every man, woman, and child to be ready to go!"

LOS ANGELES CHURCH EXPERIENCES RAPID GROWTH

Los Angeles Grace Church is growing so fast that Pastor Roger Bowman has been literally crowded out of the parsonage. The church operates a Christian grade school on the church property near the Watts district in Los Angeles; in June alone, 15 new families were won to the church.

It now appears that 270 children will enroll in the school in September. The Bowmans have vacated the nearby parsonage to provide more space. However, estimates are that it will take at least $20,000 to make minor repairs and provide additional facilities such as restrooms to handle the anticipated enrollment.

Los Angeles Grace is an Approved Ten Percent Missionary Special of the Church of the Nazarene. Contributions can be sent to Dr. Norman O. Miller, General Treasurer, in Kansas City, designated for Los Angeles Grace Church.

Rev. Bowman, the pastor, served for five years as director of Outreach for the Department of Home Missions, now called Church Extension Ministries.

DR. DONALD OWENS TO PHILIPPINES

Dr. L. Guy Nees, director of the Division of World Mission, was at the Kansas City International Airport on July 6 to see Dr. and Mrs. Donald Owens and daughter Dorothy off to their new residence in the Republic of the Philippines.

Dr. Donald Owens has accepted the position of regional director for Asia and the South Pacific for the Division of World Mission and will live in the Philippines as a central location from which he will make frequent visits to the mission areas under his supervision.

Dr. Donald Owens holds the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Oklahoma and three degrees from Bethany Nazarene College. He was the first Nazarene missionary to Korea in 1954, and was founder and director of the Nazarene Bible College there. After 12 years in Korea, Dr. Owens became professor of missions at Bethany Nazarene College before coming to fill a similar position at the Nazarene Theological Seminary in 1974. During these later years, Dr. Owens gave two short periods of service to the church in Korea.

Dr. Owens is the second regional director to take residence in the area of his responsibility. Dr. Richard Zanner moved to Johannesburg, Republic of South Africa, in 1980, where he is regional director of the African districts of the Church of the Nazarene.

At the present time the Division of World Mission has three men serving as regional directors; the third being Dr. James Hudson who is director for the Caribbean, Central and South America, and Mexico.

The Mail Bag

WHERE CORRESPONDENCE IS CONCERNED, editors are never lonely. The mail pours in, and a fellow had better not read it before he has his devotions. Human nature being what it is, for every one pat on the back, you get two left hooks and a right cross to the chops.

Sidney Harris had a column recently about "Questions I never expect to hear the answer to." One of the questions: "Why is it that the most offensive, vituperative and uncharitable letters a columnist receives are from readers who hasten to identify themselves as religious?" I understand his question.

An editor's job would be Dullsville without his sometimes volatile mail. Who could enjoy work that was no more exciting than shuffling sentences and resetting displaced commas? The day is perked up by a letter strongly pro or con.

Letters betray the whimsical, unpredictable, and illogical elements of human nature, the very traits that keep people from being cookie-cutter dullards. I got one from a woman who was angered by something I wrote about secret orders. She closed it with these hot words: "Listen, Buster, if I do go to hell for attending my lodge"—which I had neither said nor implied—"I'll be waiting to meet you at the depot when your train rolls in."

Another woman took offense at an anti-smoking editorial. She said, "I dislike opinionated people," and then proceeded to fill several pages with her own very forthright opinions.

When my picture was used in the Herald, a woman, upset by something I had written, said in her letter, "I see you wear glasses. You probably wore out your eyes gawking at Nazarene women in mini-skirts." The symbol appearing on this page will show you how I really exhausted my vision.

On balance, women write nicer letters than men, and they are no less logical and consistent. I treasure a letter from a man who ripped up me and all previous Herald editors, insisting that none of us had ever given decent answers to people's questions. He concluded that none of us "had the Spirit." Then he added, "By the way, if you have time, here are some questions I wish you would answer!" And one man denounced me as a "traditionalist" and "iconoclast" in the same letter.

The nastiest letters I've received have been from preachers. That speaks volumes about the terrible pressures they were working under. The steam had to be let off, and maybe writing me saved their congregations from a skinning.

Let me testify that most of my mail is calm, fair, and supportive. Consider this excerpt: "I like you . . . your mind . . . your humor . . . your sense of things. You are a God-gift to our denomination. . . . You are a God-gift to me personally in every issue where I share your thought. . . ." Ah, there is a very discerning reader!
