AN EDITORIAL

THE SUMMER has ended in our northern hemisphere. The sun appears lower on the horizon, makes its appearance later in the mornings and makes a hurried exit in the evenings. Nature is exchanging its bright summer colors for the more subdued colors of its winter moods. In our American Midwest the great combines are busy gathering the harvest of wheat and corn and other life-giving foods necessary to sustain life on the earth.

In the southern hemisphere the gentle winter mood is changing to summer, and nature responds to the warmth of the summer sun and rain. To those living in this hemisphere it is a time of sowing and planting.

Although the time element differs, the universal mood at harvesttime is one of gratitude. Christians throughout the world pause to give thanks to God for the harvest the good earth has yielded. America observes Thanksgiving Day the last Thursday in November. Canada observes Thanksgiving the second Monday in October. Other countries observe a harvest festival. In most areas there is some manifestation which expresses gratitude to God for His bountiful mercies.

There is abundant evidence that the spiritual harvest of the world must now be gathered. Revivals being reported, church growth in world areas, new doors becoming open, responses to the gospel—all give evidence that the "fields are white unto harvest." The unrest and frustration which is universal, together with crime and rebellion so apparent everywhere, give a new sense of urgency to proclaim Christ as the answer.

The American Thanksgiving season has been adopted as a time to give expression of gratitude to God by giving a worldwide missionary offering for world evangelization. In recent years this great offering has enabled the church to continue its advance into world areas despite the changing financial values and high costs of living encountered by missionaries living abroad. Within a few weeks we will bring our offering of thanksgiving to make possible the ingathering of the world's spiritual harvest. May all of us give good accountability to God from a thankful heart.

Where'er the SUN

by SUSAN JENKINS

I THOUGHT I recognized the familiar strains. Turning to my friends, I whispered, "Do you know what they're singing?"

Without waiting for an answer, I sang softly,

_I am so glad that our Father in heav'n_
_Tells of His love in the Book He has giv'n._
_Wonderful things in the Bible I see;_
_This is the dearest, that Jesus loves me._

How sweet that sounds, Lord! How can they even sing these words? Oh, how often I have taken them for granted, sung without thinking!

It was hot as we made our way through the crowd which pressed in all around us. It had been a week since we entered the People's Republic of China. We had visited cold, damp tombs and had admired ancient palaces. We had climbed the Great Wall and had studied their magnificent past. We had bought lovely silk clothing and delicate tea sets, exchanged addresses with hundreds of people, visited inadequate hospitals, ate gourmet meals and read Mao Tse-Tung messages everywhere.

We had fallen in love with these people. All dressed alike, they roamed the streets in their white shirts, baggy pants, and flat shoes. With childlike curiosity, they giggled at the spectacle of our American expressions and animation. Catching our eyes, they would look down or glance away, then back again. If we smiled, they would shyly move closer to try out their English, touch our clothes, and give us their babies to hold—with or without diapers!

A hungering young man had quietly asked, "Do you have a Bible?"

I looked into his intent face, and fingering the Chinese Bible in my bag, had to reply, "I know of someone who will send you one. Let me have your address."

We had been instructed not to trust anyone with our precious cargo.

Remembering to pray with open eyes, we trusted Jesus Christ to provide ways to share His love without endangering the already-threatened Christians in China.

Now I could barely contain my joy—in this rare "open" church—as I sensed the freedom we finally had... in Jesus Christ. The blank, expressionless faces were now smiling, nodding to us, and filled with the wonder of Christ's love. They touched our hands, with tears in their eyes and on our faces. From our balcony seats, we watched in amazement as hundreds of people struggled to see one of the few Bibles scattered throughout the congregation. The Holy Spirit moved mightily among all of us, overcoming language barriers and political differences. Sweat mingled with our tears. We rejoiced, praising God for the oneness we shared in Him.

How many of these people have quietly sought You, Lord, all through these dark, isolated years? How many pastors will continue to be courageous enough to risk their lives for You?

It has been seven months since I went to church in Shanghai. Yesterday, our 50-voice choir sang Jesus Shall Reign from our brand-new hymnals in our comfortable sanctuary with the morning sun streaming in through the picture window.

The words rang out,

_People and realms of ev'ry tongue_
Dwell on His love with sweetest song.

Grey China . . . rain . . . humidity . . . sweat . . .
people squeezed together everywhere . . . sadness . . .
sameness . . . heaviness . . . worshiping in a dark church along with pictures of Lenin, Stalin, and Marx.

The organ swelled and the harmony rose,

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run;
His kingdom spread from shore to shore,
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.

Chinese Christians dwelling on Your love with the very sweetest of songs... overcoming communism, war, threats... Lord, I know that You can overcome those... but here are my relationships, schedules... oh, the pressures of living well are so great... I need you here...

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun...

Right here, in the middle of our humanity, in our beautiful, tense lives... in dark, crowded China... break through, Lord!

His love is gently moving in... where'er the sun...

PLUGS GOSPEL MUSIC

I do appreciate concern for music that has content and conviction. I do need to point out to the readers of this magazine that a high percentage of today's gospel music is solid, has content, and does not compromise the faith. In addition to being a Church of the Nazarene pastor, I am a gospel disc jockey for a local radio station. We receive all the new music from recording studios all over the country and I can report that we have many outstanding individuals and groups that are being used of God in a very important ministry, artists that are honest, Spirit-led, and instruments of God. Gospel music is still a very valuable avenue of ministry.

Finally, I agree that faith is more than "feeling," but praise God for the fact that I can feel it and for the "personal joy of the Christian life." Praise music is an extremely important part of the entire field of gospel music.

MUSIC IMPROVING

Concerning church music: There is indeed much "worldly" music being played and sung in some churches today. However, I believe that church music in general is improving. There is much good appropriate music, old and new, available today. What needs to be done, in many cases, is for our church people to first get their musical priorities in order and then keep them there.

ABOUT THE COVER

In anticipation of the church’s 75th anniversary in 1983, Nazarene Publishing House announces the release of Phineas F. Bresee: A Prince in Israel. The book is a detailed biography of one of the church’s founders, written by his colleague and personal friend, E. A. Girvin.

The author’s training as a court reporter is evident in his crisp, lucid writing style and objectivity.

Out of print for 50 years, the handsomely bound volume is a reproduction of the original 1916 edition. It was the publisher’s conviction that this generation of Nazarenes should know the record of Bresee’s God-directed life and the roots of our denomination. This prompted the reprinting of A Prince in Israel.

Other interesting details in the cover photo are the following items taken from the archives:
1) Dr. P. F. Bresee’s personal copy of the 1911 church Manual;
2) An autograph letter from Dr. Bresee to H. F. Reynolds, dated December, 1908.
3) A set of Dr. Bresee’s sermon notes.

Steve Cooley, director of Archives, says the church collection of historical documents and artifacts is rich treasury for the church historian and for those who wish to better understand the heritage that is the foundation for the Church of the Nazarene.

The cover photograph is by Russ Hansen.

Behold I Stand—and Knock

I heard You knock so softly, Lord,
You wished to enter in.
But I was busy with the world,
Its pleasures and its sin.

Again You knocked so patiently,
Though more insistent still.
Again I turned my heart away,
But it was sore and ill.

You knocked once more upon the door.
I opened it—just so.
I didn’t want to let You in,
Nor yet to let You go.

Then finally in tender love,
You knocked yet once again.
’Twas then I knew I needed You,
The truth broke, oh, so plain.

The latch inside, I opened wide
The door for all to see,
Confessed my sin and let You in,
Oh! What a change in me!

“KEEP THYSELF PURE”

KEEP THYSELF PURE” (1 Timothy 5:22). Divorced from the New Testament message and grace of full and free salvation, Paul’s admonition confronted Timothy with an impossible task. Living in an impure world, conscious of the “earthen vessel” of a fallible human personality, and assailed by the fiery darts of the wicked one, even to a young pastor blessed with high ideals and apostolic fellowship, the exhortation would be cruel in the extreme if its realization was beyond attainment. Loving Timothy as his own son, Paul would never burden him with a hopeless quest.

The earnest plea presupposes God’s miracle of cleansing in heart and life, for no one can keep that which they do not possess. Nowhere in the New Testament is spiritual and moral purity viewed or expected as an unaided human achievement. Paul speaks for every man in Romans 7, when he admits the power of indwelling sin and the inability of a sensitive conscience, zealous churchmanship, and outward conformity to the commandments of God to achieve freedom from sin. “Who can say, I have made my heart clean?” said Job, anticipating Paul’s conflict and confession. But God designs and intends to wholly sanctify human hearts and lives. This revealed purpose and privilege is a golden thread of hope and assurance in God’s Word.

The Wesleys sang and taught,

The thing impossible shall be,
Sin shall die out in me, recognizing as Paul did also, that God-given purity can be maintained only by a partnership between the cleansed believer and the “God of all power, truth, and grace” akin to the union of vine and branch. They, as we, endorsed the apostle’s wise and practical counsel to his son-in-the-faith (1 Timothy 5:21-25).

Principles of selection are placed before first impressions and undue personal preference in Paul’s injunction, “Lay hands suddenly on no man.” Appointments to responsible office in the church at Ephesus were not to be made on the basis of excessive but immature enthusiasm in a convert, or Timothy’s personal affinities. Natural partiality for one as over against another is not in itself good or bad. But astray from principles, and unwisely indulged, likes and dislikes can lead to unfairness, unfortunate choices, and needless hurt to others who are equally or better qualified. Impartial assessment, as far as possible, aided by wisdom from above, is essential in the choice of lay leadership.
Warning against unspiritual associations was also given by Paul: "neither be partaker of other men’s sins." He was writing to a successful pastor! Irrespective of age, rank, place, or grace, everyone is influenced by associations. In the fullest sense we become like those we live with; in the highest sense, men take knowledge that we have been with Jesus. Welcome or unwelcome, chosen or unavoidable, associations are privileged and perilous; but in Paul’s sensible thinking, "he who has no need to trade with the devil will keep out of his shop."

The fine line between fervour and fanaticism, a conscience at peace or one in bondage, is indicated in Paul’s advice to a sensitive heart: “Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach’s sake and thine often infirmities.” The heart of Paul’s concern is in the measure, “little,” the medicinal use, “thy stomach’s sake,” and the welfare of Timothy’s ministry, “thine often infirmities.”

In a modern society, with available supplies of pure water and medical provision, the words do not buttress moderation in alcoholic beverages or contradict total abstinence. “Hast thou Timothy’s stomach?” was an evangelist’s reply to a healthy pleader for moderate social drinking. Anyone who would use Paul’s words to argue for laxity in the use of beer, wines, and spirits is surely blind to the appalling rise in youthful addiction in many countries today. The Nazarene Manual was, is, and always will be wise in its membership covenant of abstinence.

The Spirit of God, loving counsel, and sanctified common sense will ensure balance in conscience and conduct in any culture and clime.

Remember the judgment day, Paul urged: “Some men’s sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after. Likewise also the good works . . .” Sin and saintliness have present recognition, future unveiling, and final reward. Good cannot be hid or sin concealed, ultimately. The secrets of all hearts and the deeds of all men will come to an Accounting Day, for there is no hiding place beyond the shaded valley.

The pilgrimage of all believers to the judgment seat of Christ, and of all the unsaved to the Great White Throne, is attended with challenge and comfort—to live with eternity’s values in view.

The greatest evangelists have been burdened for the follow-up of initial grace, and the greatest saints have realized it must be “My Utmost for His Highest.” God does redeem and remake humanity’s broken earthenware, but in the highest interests of pastors and people He demands purity: “Keep thyself pure.”

FAMILY WORSHIP

by MYRON L. TWEED

When worship is a part of the family environment, the young adult absorbs the atmosphere and senses that his parents are finding a presence beyond themselves to whom they give reverence.

The time and place for devotions will depend upon the schedule of each family unit. Highly regimented groups may begin the day with a devotional time at breakfast. Others may find that a period of family worship would be more convenient at the evening meal.

There should be a reading of scripture from the Bible or a devotional book. Do not make the reading long. (The father need not necessarily read all the time.) Each member should have the opportunity to narrate.

Exchange ideas about the scripture. Each person should share his insights. Conversation with people is important preparation for conversation with God.

Prayer time should include special requests or needs. Each member tells his or her concerns to the entire group. Then sentence prayers are given by each member. (Long prayers are not appropriate if each family member is to participate.) Children are not intimidated if they have to say a sentence, telling God of their particular concerns. This procedure unites the family in caring and sharing together.

Group singing may be a part of family worship. People do not forget that which they love to sing. Use the church hymnal. If the church is promoting a “hymn-of-the-month” plan, then make that a part of family worship. The words may be beyond the understanding of younger children, yet they represent God’s love and grace. Also, many new songbooklets are available, and youngsters often enjoy singing folk hymns. Memories of singing together brings happy thoughts, and awakens feelings of God’s love and gratitude. “The family that prays together, stays together.”

Dealing with the Trials of Life

by BUD REEDY

TRIALS are common to us all. There are two kinds of trials. There are "hassles." These are the minor inconveniences—a flat tire on a rainy day, an empty checkbook at the check-out counter, a cold sore or a missing button. Most people have little trouble dealing with hassles. However, there is another kind of trial: the devastating kind. These trials are difficult and soul-wrenching. Many of you have experienced this kind of trial. The loss of a job, the loss of a loved one, a broken relationship—these trials often shatter lives.

Throughout history, people have worked toward a trial-free existence. This striving has inevitably ended in failure. We cannot eliminate trials. They are part of our experience. They are with us to stay. Whether we are Christians or not, we shall experience trials. Our task is not to eliminate life's difficult situations, but to equip ourselves for dealing with them. The opening verses of James state clearly that resources are available for coping with trials.

"Consider it all joy, my brethren, when you encounter various trials" (v. 2, NASB). Christians are to rise victorious above the trials of life. Joy here refers not just to an emotion, but to an activity, a life-style. The result of such activity is endurance toward Christian maturity, because you know "that the testing of your faith produces endurance. And let endurance have its perfect result, that you may be perfect and complete, lacking in nothing" (vv. 3-4, NASB). This testing is a purification process. As metals are heated in order to eliminate impurities, so the trials of life function. James's admonition to rise victorious above life's trials is a difficult doctrine. Of this John Wesley said: "This is a right strange doctrine!" What an understatement! In my humanness, I don't respond to trials in this manner. It is beyond my capacity. Yet this comes to us from James's pen in the form of a command. Commands are to be obeyed.

The hope-filled message that rises like a mountain peak from the verses that follow is this: God never issues a command unless He also makes adequate provision for us to keep that command. And so, God equips us to face the trials of life. The resources are available.

What are these resources, and how are they to be attained? According to James, prayer equips us to deal with life's trials. "If any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask of God, who gives to all men generously and without reproach, and it will be given to him" (v. 5, NASB).

We pray in order to gain wisdom. This is not scholarly wisdom, but the power to discern right from wrong. It is the insight necessary to keep us from falling. We pray in the face of trials in order... to gain this insight. Such prayers are to be offered “in faith without any doubting, for the one who doubts is like the surf of the sea driven and tossed by the wind” (v. 6, NASB). The prayer of faith makes everything possible for him who believes (Mark 9:23). Strength, insight, perspective, trust—all the equipment needed to face life’s trials are available for those who pray.

Many believers have found this prayer life difficult. However difficult, James has stated very clearly that these things are possible when we are singleminded.

Singleness is the opposite of doublemindedness. A doubleminded man has two minds, two wills, two sets of goals, two sets of desires, two sets of ambitions. He is a divided person, for his loyalty is divided between faith and the world. A doubleminded person strives for the best of both worlds. A singleminded person is like a man with one foot on the shore and one foot on the boat. He is unwilling to let go of the things of the world and become totally God’s.

A singleminded person has one mind, the mind of Christ. His will is lined up with God’s will. His desires, goals, and aspirations are one with the Lord’s. James refers to this singleness as perfection, Christian perfection. John Wesley described this as the perfection of our intentions. This perfection, this singlemindedness, is more than adequate equipment for dealing with the trials of life.

Not long ago I visited in the home of my friends, Warren and Esther Holloway. He is such a vibrant person. You would never guess that beneath this vivacious exterior is the hurt resulting from the tragic loss of their only son. In July, 1976, Warren, Jr., was killed in a car accident. We were very close. I was devastated, as were many of his friends. It just did not make any sense to me. He was in the prime of his life, actively involved in ministry as associate pastor in the Bel Air, Md., Church of the Nazarene. As I dealt with this tragic loss of life, I experienced spiritual trauma. I was deeply hurt and none of the pat answers and old cliches seemed to help. I walked into the funeral service wondering, as many did, how the Holloways were going to take all of this. I will never forget the witness to God’s grace that took place that afternoon. They faced that event with joy! Oh, it was obvious that the grief at the loss of their son was deep, a grief I have not experienced. And yet they were witnesses to the Word! Their lives spoke to my need. There is equipment for facing the trials of life. The Holloways proved it.

Have you prayed the prayer of faith toward singleness or Christian perfection? This beautiful relationship with God can be yours. It is adequate provision for dealing with even the most devastating of life’s trials.

THE COMFORTER

The night grew dark; my brow with fever burned, No human friend at hand to do me good. When hope for life was almost gone A shining Presence at my bedside stood. Jesus himself laid hands upon my head And gently said, “My daughter, be of cheer! Though all may leave you comfortless, I’ve come to stay, so have no fear.”

His promised Self, the Comforter, came in And instantly made all my gloom depart; His word, His touch, gave peace and calm, His joy and love filled all my lonely heart.

If never did I feel a throb of pain, If never did I know a midnight hour, How could my Lord reveal to me His comfort and His healing power!

A certain oil company claims that its product is "better than it has to be." Its motor oil, the claim implies, not only provides the lubrication and protection expected, but assures the consumer of additives and extras that make it a superior product.

If the product really is better than it has to be, that is a good testimony to its worth. We live in a day when just getting by is apparently good enough for many. Excellence of performance and craftsmanship is rare. Few companies or individuals are willing to give that extra effort which assures superiority.

Extravagant claims are not uncommon in modern advertising, but the claims of the gospel of Jesus Christ are not excessive. God's grace is better than it has to be. It offers not extravagance of claim but prodigality of product.

God's grace has to be good enough to save us from the penalty of sin—both the final penalty of everlasting punishment and separation from God, and the present penalty of alienation from God and the haunting ghost of guilt. It does; hallelujah! God's grace does what it must do, but it does more.

As with the water and fire on Mount Carmel, God has more than enough to vindicate His holy name. God not only has water enough to wash away our sins, but fire enough to lick up the sin within us. Whether it is a barrel of meal that does not waste or a cruse of oil that never fails, God's grace is not diminished. He not only has enough to meet our needs, and to justify, but leftovers enough to embarrass our draw upon His account.

God's grace is more than a rescue squad or a life-support system. It does more than save us and then barely keep us alive. God furnishes purpose and power for everyday life. He integrates the personality and frees it to function at its intended norm. He releases us from the delusion of self-reliance, yet never crushes the individual free spirit.

God's grace even lifts us into the "bonus" area of living where fringe benefits abound. There's manna waiting in each wilderness, and Eschol grapes to offset those burly giants that challenge God's plan for our lives, and innumerable extras for everyday life. The natural man forfeits all of this when he refuses this grace that is better than it has to be.

Consider Jochebed, the mother of Moses. Instead of allowing the king's edict to strike fear to her heart, she believed God could deliver her son out of the murderous hand of the Pharaoh. God did, but He did more. He not only delivered the child Moses from death, but arranged for his own mother to nurse him and paid her a handsome Egyptian salary to boot. God's grace is better than it has to be.

Or consider a more recent example of God's better-than-it-has-to-be grace. Cape Verdian Nazarenes living in Lisbon, Portugal, needed a place to worship. The only thing that seemed to be available was the street floor of a new high rise building at a cost of...
$200,000. While Rev. Everette Howard had been busy raising funds for this Garnet Howard Memorial church, he and the family of retired missionaries at Casa Robles were also praying about a price that seemed too high.

Recently, Rev. Earl Mosteller found a much better place with double the floor space for only $80,000. God’s grace is better than it has to be, and now, every Sunday, about 150 Nazarenes gather in front of that building to sing, pray, and thank God for the church home they are soon to enjoy.

This is not to suggest that all of God’s roses have thornless stems, or that God’s grace exempts one from the trials or discomforts of life. God does not always provide lavishly for His children, or, like an indulgent father, spoil them with unnecessary favors.

God does, however, often surprise His children with unexpected blessings, reminding them of His super-adequacy.

Whether our age is one of affluence or scarcity, God’s manner of working is never mediocre. If this is an age of low productivity, poor workmanship, and minimal service, that isn’t the way God’s industry is run. God is still producing quality and quantity, marketing what He produces, and giving outstanding service on His product. God’s product never fails; we just fail to use it. And when we do, we invite failure.

Even then—should we fail or have a major breakdown—God’s grace is better than it has to be. God specializes in mending, healing, restoring, and making new. What a God! What a grace! It is better than it has to be, and better than we deserve.

by WILLIAM GOODMAN

THANK the Lord my child was only drinking wine and not into drugs!” said the mother as we [police] delivered her 15-year-old child home late one night.

“We don’t drink. We do have a glass of light wine with our meals; it gives us the perk we need at the end of the day,” said a young businessman.

Wine as an alcoholic beverage is a drug. It is not a stimulant, even though its exhilarating effect makes people think it is. Wine is a depressant that affects the central nervous system. It acts much like an anesthetic to depress the activity of the brain. Wine is an intoxicant, and the first ounce that reaches the brain begins to put the brain to sleep.

Wine is not digested, it is absorbed directly into the bloodstream, where it is carried to all parts of the body, including the brain. The body disposes of wine-alcohol by elimination (5 to 10 percent) and oxidation (90 to 95 percent). Oxidation takes place in the liver at a fairly consistent rate, and the decline in the blood-alcohol concentration averages about .018 percent an hour.

If a person weighs 140 pounds drinks one three-ounce glass of natural wine (12% alcohol), the blood alcohol ratio would be .03 percent. How critical is that? Medical/legal experts say people are incapable of driving safely at or above .05 percent. Increased accident causation is noticeable at .04 percent. At .02 percent blood alcohol, a person will feel pleasant, elated, giddy, loose. If a person consumes a three-ounce glass of fortified wine (18% alcohol), their blood alcohol would be .05 percent and their behavior would be impulsive, and their inhibition lessened.

Solomon wrote, “Wine is a mocker, strong drink a brawler; and whoever is led astray by it is not wise” (Proverbs 20:1, RSV). Wine is the most deceptive of all alcoholic beverages because many make the unscientific assumption it is harmless.

“Liver disease, increased by higher consumption of alcohol, is the fastest rising cause of death in the nation. The soaring death rate of liver disease is caused by the growing popularity of wine drinking,” according to Dr. John M. Senior, clinical professor of medicine, University of Pennsylvania. “By 1985, liver disease is expected to rank behind only heart disease and cancer as causing the most deaths.”

Wine is addicting and anyone who is addicted to wine will tell you that it is terribly difficult to break the hook of the “soft, siren, mellow juice of the vine.” “As a brain surgeon, I have yet to meet a moderate drinking colleague . . . . moderation is a terrible fallacy,” says Richard E. Strain, M.D.

Every year 200,000 Americans become part of the ever-increasing rank of 10.5 million alcoholics. Two hundred thousand Americans die as a result of alcohol each year. Seventy percent of all crimes, ranging from rape to forgery, are directly related to alcohol. The drinking of wine is involved in all these sad, horrific statistics. The logical approach to stopping the sad commentaries on injuries and destruction to life is to be willing to abstain from all alcoholic beverages.

At this point, our argument against alcohol is best framed in expediency. For a clear head, healthy liver, a certainty of not becoming an alcoholic or statistic, the wise person refuses the mockery of wine.

The Sabbath and Its Relationship to Modern Times

by PAUL W. BEALS

Historically, the sabbath is older than the Bible or the Church. The root of the Hebrew word sabbath means "to cease, to rest, to interrupt one's work." The use of this concept is as old as creation itself: in six days God finished the heavens and the earth, and He rested on the seventh day. He blessed this day and made it holy because He rested on that day.

The sabbath was first observed by the Israelite people shortly after they began their journey from Egypt's slavery to the promised land. They were in the desert en route to Mount Sinai when God provided manna for them to eat. They were instructed to gather manna for six days, to gather a double portion on the sixth day, and not to gather on the seventh day, a day of rest. Later, when they arrived at Mount Sinai, the observance of the sabbath was made one of the Ten Commandments:

Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days you shall labor, and do all your work; but the seventh day is a sabbath to the Lord your God; in it you shall not do any work, you, or your son, or your daughter, your manservant, or your maidservant, or your cattle, or the sojourner who is within your gates; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day; therefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day and hallowed it (Exodus 20:8-11, RSV).

It was made into a perpetual covenant, a permanent clause in the contract between God and His people. Forty years later it was reaffirmed before the Israelites entered the Promised Land.

The Israelites were not the only people of ancient times to rest one day in every seven. Ancient records show that the Assyrians and the Babylonians had weeks of seven days, with the seventh a day of rest.

Jesus Christ honored the sabbath. He declared it was of value to men. At the same time He opposed the senseless rules of the Pharisees. Our Lord's mode of observing the sabbath was one of the main features of His life.

The sabbath day was observed for the first 20 years by the Early Christian Church. Then the Church began observing the first day of the week instead. Several reasons may have led to the change: the first day of the week was the day of Christ’s resurrection, a day of victory. Apparently, it was also the day of Christ’s next appearance. The day when the Holy Spirit was given, the day of Pentecost, was on the first day of the week too.

Under the ministry of the apostle Paul, the first day of the week was observed as a regular day of worship. The seventh day was disregarded as being a part of Judaism. The Gentile Christians were urged to be tolerant of Jewish Christians, but to avoid things from Judaism.

The first day of the week was called “the Lord’s Day” by Ignatius in about A.D. 110. “Let us no more sabbatize,” he said, “but let us keep the Lord’s Day on which our life arose.” Another document from about the same period, the Didache, speaks of coming together and breaking bread on the Lord’s Day.

Justin Martyr, in the middle of the second century, was the first Christian to have called it Sunday, the day when Christians assembled for worship.

In the Early Church, emphasis was at first on worship. Slaves had no opportunity to rest. Then in A.D. 321, Constantine’s edict commanded observance of Sunday as a day of rest. The “heathen” also wanted a day of rest. Also, Leo’s decree of A.D. 469 described it as a day of rest, a day to cease from labor. This was still the official church attitude even until the time of the Reformation, though observance was sometimes ignored.

The Reformers continued the Sunday tradition. Martin Luther said, “Because Sunday has been appointed from earliest times, we ought to keep this arrangement, that all things may be done in harmony and in order, and no confusion be caused by unnecessary novelties.” John Calvin desired to rest from works, that God might work in him. He wished to spend the day in hearing the Word of God, partaking of the sacraments, and in public prayer. He believed that dependents and servants should also rest.

In the 17th century, the English Parliament approved the longer and shorter catechism, which read in part as follows:

The sabbath is to be sanctified by holy resting all the day, even from such worldly employments and recreations as are lawful on other days; and spending the whole time in public and private exercise of God’s worship, except so much as is to be taken up with works of necessity and mercy.

John Wesley taught that Christians were obligated to observe Sunday, and dismissed the negligent from his societies. He believed that this observance was a part of the moral law.

The Roman Catholic viewpoint during the same period was that mass in the morning, with the rest of the day in pleasure, was a concession to human weakness, not an exposition of Christian doctrine.

We have spent some time reviewing the origin of the sabbath and its development into Sunday observance. In this way we have amplified the words of our text “remember” the “sabbath.” Last but not least is the word “holy.” “Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.” A holy day—separate from evil. Holy day—sacred, not common or profane, not secular.

People like something holy they can see or hear. Idols, saints, and holy water are examples. In the jungles of Central America the Indian farmer believes his field is holy ground, a sacred altar. His labor is in partnership with the divine. Many primitive religions have sacred words, which must be repeated precisely to achieve the correct answer from the supernatural. The Tibetans have a sacred prayer wheel: the prayer is written on the prayer wheel and every time the wheel turns the prayer is automatically forwarded to the Almighty. The Navajo Indians make sacred prayer sticks, which must be constructed correctly to achieve the desired result. The ancient Israelites, too, had their holy objects, such as the sacred stone tablets on which the Ten Commandments were written. (They were broken when Moses saw the golden calf—otherwise everyone would have worshiped the tablets!)

The Bible is more concerned with holiness in time than with sacred objects. Sacred moments! Moments of prayer! Moments of holy insight! Sacred sabbath days! Sacred time! Holy time is unique in Judaism and Christianity. Time is the process of creation. The things of space are the results of creation. We can’t bring back time—sacred time or common time. We can only kill time. The sanctification of time is the heart of Jewish and Christian devotion to God! A day not to use money for common, ordinary things! A day not to worship the idols of technical civilization!

The spirit of Christianity is the ability to sanctify a moment, to sanctify a day! Make it holy, not common!

Jesus said: “The sabbath was made for man, not man for the sabbath!” (Mark 2:27, RSV).

My Reward

I do not ask that Thou shouldst smooth
This rugged path I climb;
But give me inner strength to pray,
“Lord, not my will but Thine.”

Let me not seek to be consoled
When sorrow comes my way,
But let me reach out lovingly
To others, day by day.

Let me not seek for earthly praise
For any errand run,
Your smile in heaven my reward
When life on earth is done!

EIGHTEEN-YEAR-OLD Amy Brown of Jackson, N.J., eats a dozen eggs for breakfast and two steaks for lunch in order to keep her weight up to 90 pounds. Doctors tell her there is little she, or they, can do about her metabolic disorder—except for her to keep on eating.

Amy suffers from malabsorption, an unusual syndrome that usually afflicts younger children, which requires her to eat almost hourly to replace lost potassium in her body. Doctors predict her condition will change, for better or worse, as her body completes maturity in the next few years.

Meanwhile, her meals equal those of four adults. Her food bills alone take $170 a week out of her father's salary as a township public works employee.

Until the illness struck at age 14, she was a healthy, energetic teen-ager. Now, in and out of hospitals periodically, she is weak unless she eats constantly.

The sad fact is that numbers of people who sit among us Sunday after Sunday suffer from a syndrome similar to Amy's—not a metabolic disorder resulting from loss of potassium, but spiritual malabsorption.

The prophet Micah wrote, "You will eat but not be satisfied; your stomach will still be empty" (Micah 6:14, NIV). J. B. Phillips paraphrased those words, "There will be famine in your heart."

There are folks in your church and in mine who attend regularly, ingesting a prodigious diet of spiritual food, yet never growing spiritually as a result. Some have never even come to the place of acknowledging Jesus to be the Lord of their life, even though they have given mental assent to the gospel and perhaps supported the church with their attendance and giving for years!

Paul warned Timothy that in the last days there would be those who, "having a form of godliness but denying its power" are "always learning but never able to acknowledge the truth" (2 Timothy 3:5, 7, NIV).

It breaks a pastor's heart to greet folks at the door Sunday after Sunday who express appreciation for "good preaching" but whose absorption of spiritual food leads them neither to faith in Christ nor to spiritual development.

But not only can individuals suffer from spiritual malabsorption, entire congregations can be afflicted by the syndrome as well.

Ray Stedman tells the story of a man who was taken through an oil refinery and shown acres of fabulous machinery. When his tour was over he said to his guide, "You've shown me everything except your shipping department—where is that?"

"Oh," the guide replied, "we don't have one."

"You don't have a shipping department?" The man asked in amazement! "Why not?"

"Well, you see," the guide said, "it takes all the oil we produce to run the machinery we have here."

Unfortunately, that's a parable of the church in many places, operating only for its own benefit, absorbing all the physical and spiritual energy produced to maintain itself.

How does one overcome spiritual malabsorption? First, eat the right food, that which is capable of producing spiritual maturity. Peter urges us "like newborn babies, crave pure spiritual milk, so that by it you may grow up in your salvation, now that you have tasted that the Lord is good" (1 Peter 2:2-3, NIV).

But like its physical counterpart, reaching spiritual maturity involves far more than achieving and maintaining homeostasis, the state of stability and equilibrium toward which all nature strives. Mere maintenance of the status quo is not enough. We have within us an innate, God-given urge to develop our abilities, to grow. So the Word commands us to "grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 3:18, NIV).

This growth, whether on a personal or congregational level, has three dimensions: spiritual, organic or functional, and reproductive.

Spiritual growth in a congregation is measurable in terms of victorious prayer, fervor of evangelism, a relevant message, triumphantly faith, an attitude of expectancy, membership involvement, a dynamic fellowship, and the reality experienced in worship. For the individual there will be a deepening of relationship with the Lord, a sensitivity of spirit, and a desire to share one's faith in meaningful ways.

Organic or functional growth relates to the development of leadership skills and the discovery and utilization of the gifts of the Spirit. God has given every born-again believer one or more spiritual gifts for use within the context of His body, the Church. The congregation grows functionally (as does the individual believer) when the gifts of the many members are used interactively to promote the cause of Christ, according to God's "body building" program laid out for us in Ephesians 4. His body "grows and builds itself up in love, as each part does its work" (Ephesians 4:16, NIV).

Amy Brown, fighting to maintain her weight at 90 pounds, says of her physical problem: "I'm not going to let this thing beat me. I wanted to become a cop, but that's definitely out of the question. I may want to be a secretary or possibly a singer. I want also to have children."

Both the Church of Jesus Christ and the individuals who comprise it are born to reproduce. Without the birth of new believers into the Family of God, a local church soon dies. Without the exhilaration of being a personal soul winner, one's spiritual vitality begins to diminish.

It's healthy to have a voracious appetite for the Word. But if it does not eventuate in measurable growth, it may be a symptom of spiritual malabsorption.

TWO PREACHERS were discussing the financial situations of their churches. The holiness preacher, whose congregation numbered about 100, mentioned the total giving of his church for the past year.

The other, pastor of a liberal church which ran three Sunday morning services totaling about 900, was astounded. "Why," said the flabbergasted minister, "your little church takes in more money than my big church does!" Then wistfully he added, "If it weren't for the bingo parties, our church would never make it. How do you do it?"

"My people practice tithing," was the simple reply.

Tithing is more than giving money. Tithing is a spiritual act. In Malachi 3:10, God promises those who bring in the tithe that He will open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing so great there will not be room enough to receive it. That blessing may not always be material. It is often a spiritual blessing.

In one of our pastorates, it fell to my lot to be one of the money counters. During that time, I made a surprising discovery. I noticed that people who began tithing right away when they were saved followed through consistently in good times or bad. They also were the ones with the best attitudes about other matters in the church.

On the other hand, those who didn't start tithing immediately after conversion never did get into the habit. They might give occasionally for some special thing, but not on a regular basis. I also observed, over a period of time, that the non-tithers seemed to be the people who had the most unresolved spiritual problems as well. They were also the loudest critics of the overall program of the church.

Some get into trouble over tithing because they pay bills, buy groceries, gas, etc. Then they try to tithe from what's left, but there is never much, if anything, left.

LOLA M. WILLIAMS is a free-lance writer and a pastor's wife at Sheridan, Illinois.

"WITH-OUT THE BINGO PARTIES, WE'D NEVER MAKE IT!"

The Bible clearly states that the "firstfruits" should be brought to God, not the leftovers.

If we get into the habit of paying God's share first (and we pay our tithe, not give, because it already belongs to God), then somehow the other 90 percent seems to stretch to cover our other needs. Perhaps one reason is because we learn to budget the rest more carefully: but let's not rule out the power of God. The same Lord who could feed 5,000 people from a small boy's lunch can stretch our paychecks to cover the necessities when we honor Him as we should.

Brother Turner had a well-developed sense of spiritual priorities and his life was a blessing to others. Though limited in education and earning power, he was deeply in love with his Lord. Each Friday afternoon when he collected his paycheck, he would go by the bank to cash it, then head straight for the church office to hand the secretary his tithe.

One day she said, "Brother Turner, why don't you just wait and put your tithe in the offering plate on Sunday morning like everyone else does?"

"Oh, no, ma'am. I prefer to bring it right over. Suppose I should die before Sunday morning gets here? I don't want God's money to be in my pocket when I go to meet my Maker."

Some argue that tithing is an Old Testament practice, done away with in the New Testament. But Jesus put His stamp of approval on tithing. In Matthew 23:23, Jesus spoke to the religious leaders of that day. "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." Jesus was not criticizing them for being strict tithers, for he said, "these ought ye to have done." He was telling them that they stopped too soon on the other matters.

How much is the tithe? The Bible plainly says it is 10 percent, but where do we start to figure that 10 percent?

Ray made a point of letting everyone know that he tithed. He wore it like a badge of honor. He earned a good hourly wage in one of the local factories, but deducted from each paycheck were the usual state and federal taxes, Social Security, and union dues. Since he had consolidated all his bills through the credit union, a sizable chunk of his check was also deducted each week to pay back his loan. What he brought home was considerably less than what he actually earned. He tithed, by his own admission, only on that part of the check that was his take-home pay. But—the government took out taxes on the entire check, before deductions!

Can we do less for our Lord than we do for our country? Kenneth L. Wilson said, “Stewardship is not a classroom exercise in fractions. It is a homework assignment in total living.”

The Bible tells us that “Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required” (Luke 12: 48). The late Peter Marshall, popular chaplain of the U.S. Senate, put it this way. “Let us give according to our incomes, lest God make our incomes match our gifts.”

It is not a sin to make money, as long as we acknowledge God’s right to our fortunes, be they great or small. John Wesley said, “Make all you can, save all you can, and give all you can.”

We ought to tithe because it’s right, because it’s scriptural, and most of all because we love God. “God loves a cheerful giver” (2 Corinthians 9:7, NIV). No matter how much we give, we can never outgive the Lord.

GOD KNOWS

God knows how much or how little I love Him;
He hears how much or how little I pray;
God knows my thoughts as I waken at morning;
He sees the paths I choose day by day.

God knows how much or how little I serve Him;
He judges well the intent of my heart.
My Lord can see, when no other one can fathom,
How far from the world my life is apart.

God knows how much or how little I give Him,
Tithe or an offering, or widow’s mite;
He sees how much is left for my spending,
Which proves if my values are focused aright.

God knows my deepest emotions toward others,
The love or hate of my heart clearly shows;
How wonderful on our journey to heaven,
To feel secure in the truth—God knows!

Book Brief

COUNT YOUR PEARLS

ESTHER LUNSFORD, author

EVEN THE POOREST of us has a fine collection of pearls. How long has it been since you took stock of your pearl collection?

Esther Lunsford is committed to the concept that most of us become so absorbed with the daily routine that we do not take time to see how rich we really are. With our myopic vision, we often fail to revel in the glorious panorama of the horizon. We become prisoners of circumstances, conditions, and events.

Thanks to Mrs. Lunsford, the reader pauses and looks out a kitchen window, or into the face of a child.

This is delightful reading, not just because of the author’s warm spirit, which gives kind of an incandescence to what she writes, but also because of her spiritual perception. There isn’t a boring paragraph or poorly turned sentence in the whole book.

Why would a busy wife and mother take time to write such a book? Listen to author Lunsford:

“It was never hard for me to believe in God and His providence. My mother had a gigantic task of rearing six of us children, all by herself, during depression years. That she succeeded was a miracle of grace and faith, evidenced by God’s presence in our home. He supplied our needs and blessed around the family altar.

“Many times I have shared those experiences with others, and finally those stories became a column in our local newspaper, which I wrote for two years.

“At the urging of several readers, I put the stories into book form, the manuscript which I submitted to Nazarene Publishing House.”

And your Publishing House is happy to present this charming volume to you.
REDISCOVERY AND REVIVAL

Is the Church of the Nazarene rediscovering its human founder, Phineas F. Bresee? I hope so. "Follow me," cried the apostle Paul, "as I also follow Christ." Of all the men who gave direction and impetus to our work in its early days, none is a choicer, safer model than P. F. Bresee.

Our publishing house has recently reissued Phineas F. Bresee: A Prince in Israel, by E. A. Girvin. It appeared first in 1916 and has long been out of print. I read it a few weeks ago, and it stirred my heart, which some of my friends regard as a difficult feat.

The PALCONs conducted this past summer featured D. Paul Thomas in a dramatic presentation, The Sun Never Sets in the Morning, sketches of the life and work of Dr. Bresee. To me, Thomas made Bresee live. The performance moved me deeply, and made me want to serve Jesus Christ, and forward the mission of our church, with fresh zeal and dedication.

A chapter in Carl Bangs's little book, Our Roots of Belief, is devoted to Bresee, and relates some intriguing details not given elsewhere. Like everything Bangs has written, it is well done.

The first Church of the Nazarene was organized by a man who was willing to pay any price to preach the gospel to the poor, and to herald purity of heart and life as a present possibility for all Christians. Bresee was passionately committed to the doctrine of entire sanctification as a second crisis of grace wrought by the baptism with the Holy Spirit. To this he gave his energy and thought, his time and his money, his very life during the most productive period of his career. Other preachers, and a host of godly laymen, joined him in the work of establishing "centers of holy fire" across America and around the world.

I do not want to see what began as holy fire end up as cold ashes. I pray that God will mightily revive our church and rescue us from any doctrinal, ethical or moral compromise that militates against the founding vision and aim.

Read Girvin and Bangs. See Thomas. It will do you good.

LIVE UP TO YOUR NAME!

Parents can't always be trusted with the naming of their children.

James S. Hogg, a former governor of Texas, named his two daughters Ima and Ura.

Erskine Hewitt, according to Brendan Gill, was named in a strange way. At his christening ceremony, his father's glance fell on the tombstone of Robert Erskine, buried on the estate in New York where the ritual took place. "Erskine was named after the tombstone," said his brother Edward, and added, "He grew up rather gloomy."

Even when motives are good, a name may turn out unfortunate in the opinion of its bearer. I named a son after a great Scottish freedom-fighter. Present day stereotyping has attached this name to effeminate, limp-wristed characters in books and plays.

God did not trust the naming of His Son to earthly parents. An angel instructed Joseph, "You shall call his name JESUS, for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matthew 1:21).

Even the Lord's name has suffered horribly in the minds and mouths of a god-hating world. "Jesus" and "Christ" are used in speech and print today as obscenities and profanities. More persons use the Lord's name abusively than worshipfully.

But the name of Jesus receives its saddest profanation when professing Christians contradict His Spirit and life by their own.

"Jesus" means Savior, and we honor His name only as we live as He lived, in the interest of saving others. We bear His name in vain unless our time, funds, energy, and abilities are committed to His work.

He especially cared for the poor, widowed, bereaved, sick, oppressed, and lost. His enemies were found chiefly among the ruling classes, often among leaders of religious institutions, who exploited the common people to protect and increase their own vested interests. His name is disgraced when the church neglects the poor and courts the privileged.
The first Church of the Nazarene was organized by a man who was willing to pay any price to preach the gospel to the poor, and to herald purity of heart and life as a present possibility for all Christians.

MOVING "STANDPOINT" AGAIN

With this issue, the editor's writing returns to the center of the magazine. I experimented briefly with a one-page editorial on the inside back cover. The only response I got to the change was negative.

I liked it because it was less work, for I had to provide copy for a smaller space. Doris thought the editorials there were harder to read. Although she was too gentle and kind to say so directly, she also thought they were getting duller, and would not be read for long. Bud Lunn concurred with her criticism. The two of them represent a formidable power structure, with a lot of influence over my life, so here I am in the middle again.

No apologies are being made for the experiment or for its abortion. Efforts will be made from time to time to change, to innovate, to reconstruct. Otherwise, the magazine will not be improved and our readers will be cheated.

Sometimes, however, improvement means going back to a former way of doing something. The saying, "You can't turn the clock back," is for cowards and fools. If the clock needs to be turned back in order for it to tell time correctly, that is precisely what must be done. Editors and churches need to be flexible enough to say, from time to time, "This isn't working out. The old way was better. Let's go back."

For example, if we have quit praying, trying to find a substitute for it is futile. The wise thing is to go back to praying. A similar case can be made for biblical preaching, for tithing, for repentance, for baptism with the Spirit, and for revivals.

I remember when Roosevelt campaigned under the slogan, "Don't swap horses in the middle of the stream." Sounds smart, but a lot depends upon the quality of the horse. The alternative could be drowning along with the horse!

Anyhow, we'll keep working at the job of trying to produce a magazine that honors the Lord and helps the people. And we'll try to keep all gears functioning smoothly, including reverse.

"COMMANDING LAY FIGURE"

We are in "The Year of the Layman" for the Church of the Nazarene.

I thought of this when I read Corsair, a biography of J. Pierpont Morgan by Andrew Sinclair. I was drawn to the book by a fondness for biography and because Doris, on her mother's side of the family, is a distant poor relation to the famous millionaire. I was attracted to the biography, also, because I had read in another book that Morgan was "the most dominant banker who ever lived," and "the supremely commanding lay figure in the Episcopal Church."

That he was the world's most powerful financier was no credit to his church. That he was its foremost layman was a disgrace to his church. For Morgan was a man who could hold the most orthodox religious opinions side by side with the most unscrupulous moral behavior. His affairs and adulteries were discreetly private, but they were also public knowledge. As his biographer says, "He was notorious for traveling with beautiful women on the Corsair [his yacht] or in his private railroad cars while his wife stayed at home." He even took a mistress along when he attended the Triennial Conventions of his church. To the everlasting discredit of the church, Morgan had no pastor or bishop who would rebuke his abominable behavior with the courage that John the Baptist displayed in reproving Herod.

Laymen in our church should not expect honor and deference because of their financial wealth or business stature. If they sin, their pastors should call them to repentance in unminced language. No layman has a better friend than a preacher who will be Nathan when that layman has been David.

Conversely, no pastor has a better friend than the layman whose life adorns the gospel of Jesus Christ. His most convincing arguments for the truth and power of what he preaches are the people who live in obedience to the Scriptures.

Our preachers should not fear money. Those with sense enough to make it should have a voice in the church's use of it. But money should never buy acceptance and control if the moneymakers and money-givers are corrupt!
the United States, have engaged in methods to sell these bottle-fed formulas to women of third world countries which have resulted in over a million deaths per year with a total of some 12 million babies’ deaths to date.

When the World Health Organization asked for passage of a resolution to persuade the governments of these countries to encourage the manufacturers of baby formulas to cease the despicable sales methods, only the United States, at the urging of President Reagan, voted against the resolution, under the pretense that it was an infringement on the free enterprise system. Is the right to market a product more important than the lives of millions of babies?

Further, there are other millions that die from starvation and disease. That doesn’t seem to bother too many people, as I hear many church people who advocate the elimination of the welfare system and food stamps.

I read in the Bible where Jesus Christ said I was hungry and you didn’t feed Me. I was thirsty and you gave Me no drink. I was naked and in prison and you visited Me not, and inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of these my brethren ye did it not unto Me. How are we going to reconcile our political actions with our claims of love and compassion?

APPRECIATION

I appreciate your sense of fairness and understanding. As a layman of about 35 years in our church, I sometimes feel the gap between leaders and followers is too great. I believe we have good leaders, but they are not infallible.

I worked for 25 years for IBM.

One thing that makes them great is that they not only accept suggestions, they encourage and pay for them.

I read the Herald of Holiness with interest. May God bless your “labor in the Lord.”

CONTEMPORARY ENGLISH URGED

Hearing young, non-Christian men talk of church, the first things said are “thess, thous . . .” Many Christians use old English with genuine sincerity, but many young men feel that it’s a great big facade. I’m convinced that Jesus preached in contemporary language. The church should act on 1 Corinthians 1:17: “…preach the gospel—not with words of human wisdom lest the cross of Christ be emptied of its power” (NIV).

The Power of Prayer

We were pastoring a small country church outside of Nashville, Tenn., my wife, daughter, and I, when the Lord blessed us with an answer to our prayers. We had waited seven long years for another child, and finally God was giving us one. As the months of Amelia’s pregnancy passed by, we patiently waited for what we hoped would be a boy.

But then problems came; she went another month, and still no baby. Her doctor admitted her to Vanderbilt Hospital. Induced labor was attempted for about four hard, cruel days. The baby’s coming was prevented by a mass of scar tissue which formed after our first child was born.

Doctors opposed a C-section; it might endanger Amelia’s life. The sustained labor was causing heart trouble. Finally the doctors told me they had done all they knew to do, and it looked like my wife was not going to make it. They thought the baby could be saved, but there wasn’t much hope for my wife. They told my wife the same thing, but being a strong Christian, she testified to her doctor, saying, “God has given me this baby and I know that He won’t let me down now.”

The only thing we knew to do was pray. A few hours later, they came to us with worse news. They had given mother and baby up to die. My whole world began to crumble before me. I prayed desperately for God to spare them both. Our pastor and Christian friends joined with us in prayer.

My wife was taken to the delivery room. What was only a few minutes seemed a lifetime. Then the nurse came and said, “Mr. Gray, you can go in now to see your wife, and baby boy.” God had answered prayer, and the hospital staff gave complete credit to God.

When this was all over and my wife was in her room, her doctor came in and said, “Mrs. Gray, I was raised in a Christian home. My parents are Christians. But I was a doubter; I didn’t think God really did those miracles that my parents and you believed in. I thought healing came only from a doctor. But what happened to you has made me a believer. After that baby was born, I knelt and gave my heart to God. And then I called my parents long-distance to tell them what happened. I’m glad now that I really know the Great Physician.”

After hearing all this, my wife and I knew the purpose behind God’s plan; it was to save that doctor. My faith in the power of prayer has been strengthened.

A NATIONWIDE CALL CELEBRATION OF AGING DAYS

November 26-29, 1981

On the eve of the 1981 White House Conference on Aging (November 30—December 4), churches are called upon individually to recognize and in some way celebrate the aging members of their congregations.

The Church of the Nazarene has an adequate approach to this call through its Senior Adult Ministries program. This would be an ideal time to start if no Senior Adult Ministries program is in operation in your church. (For packet of materials, write Senior Adult Ministries, 6401 The Paseo, Kansas City, MO 64131.) The Thanksgiving season is perfect for celebration dinners.

Sunday services could honor and highlight senior adult members. A retiree could give the message and other senior talent could be used where personnel and circumstances permit.

The national celebration will be climaxd by an interfaith service, 4 p.m. Sunday, November 29, at the National Cathedral in Washington under the direction of former Commissioner Dr. Arthur S. Fleming.

NICA (National Interfaith Coalition on Aging), a voluntary association of church bodies for the promotion of "spiritual well being" and programs for the aging through congregations, is sponsor of this Celebration of Aging Days.

RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE AT LOW LEVEL. The Princeton Religious Research Council reports a sorry state of biblical knowledge in the United States and a shocking lack of knowledge about the basis of the nation's Judeo-Christian heritage. The trend threatens to undermine organized religion in the 1980s.

A recent Gallup Youth Survey shows that only 3 teens in 10—most of whom stated their religious preference as Christians—are correctly able to answer three simple questions drawn from the New Testament that are keystones of the Christian heritage. Even among teens who attend church regularly (about half of those polled by the Gallup Youth Survey), only 43 percent answered all three questions correctly. One teen-ager in five, 19 percent, was unable to come up with the right answer to any of the quiz questions which were:

1. Can you name the four Gospels of the New Testament of the Bible?
2. How many disciples did Jesus have?
3. What religious event or happening is celebrated on Easter?

CHURCHES, RELIGIOUS GROUPS AFFECTED BY TAX CHANGES. Three sections of the tax cut package Congress recently sent to President Reagan for his signature contain tax changes of special interest to U.S. religious groups.

The comprehensive tax measure, which will reduce individual and business taxes approximately $750 billion over the next five years, cleared the Senate on a 67-8 vote and passed the House 282-95.

The final version of the tax cut liberalizes both the amount and scope of the Foreign Earned Income Tax Exclusion. It also reduces the so-called "Marriage penalty tax" and allows a tax deduction for charitable contributions made by persons who elect not to itemize deductions when filing federal income tax forms. For Americans who are "bona fide" residents of foreign countries, Congress agreed to exclude the first $75,000 income in 1982 and to boost that by $5,000 annually over the next four years to $95,000. It also provides for the exclusion of excess housing costs. The new law will replace a variety of deductions and exclusions for Americans working abroad.

Congress also changed the current law under which a married couple with two incomes is taxed at a higher rate than two single persons with identical incomes. To correct this "marriage penalty," the new law allows a joint return to deduct 5 percent of the first $30,000 in earnings of the spouse with the lower income in 1982. The deduction increases to 10 percent of the first $30,000 in 1983 and the following years, meaning a maximum deduction of $3,000.

CANADIAN CHURCHES MERGE WITH FREE WILL BAPTISTS. The National Association of Free Will Baptists welcomed the 16 churches and 1,100 members of Canada's Primitive Baptist Denomination at its 45th annual convention which met July 19-23 in Louisville, Ky., and included over 4,300 delegates and visitors.

The Primitive Baptists, an Arminian group tracing their roots to the northern Free Will Baptist movement fathered by Benjamin Randall in 1780, are based in New Brunswick, Canada. Affiliation with the National Association of Free Will Baptists was proposed a year ago in a feasibility study completed by the Primitive Baptist Executive Committee.

In July, 1981, following a conference with Free Will Baptist Executive Secretary Melvin Worthington, the Canadian churches adopted the Free Will Baptist Treatise and petitioned the National Association for membership. National Convention delegates accepted the petition and voted the group into affiliation as the "Atlantic Canada Association of Free Will Baptists."

The Answer

The "miracles" in the Bible are no more believable than some "far-fetched" incidents in other religions, even ancient religions, so why should we be more inclined to believe them?

The Bible claims to be a revelation from God, bearing witness to Jesus Christ, through whom God has provided salvation from sin. The authenticity of Bible miracles and the redemptive work of Christ can be argued by comparison to the writings of those other religions. Ultimately, however, the Word of God is self-authenticating. The Holy Spirit attests to its truth and convinces our hearts. Otherwise, we would not believe, for the natural tendency of sinful hearts is in the direction of unbelief and rebellion.

If one refuses the mark of the beast, confesses his sins to God, and accepts martyrdom after the Rapture, will he be saved? I have heard ministers of the gospel say he would be saved, but most of our Bible study group thought he would not. Please help us.

Since I do not accept the teaching of a pre-tribulation rapture of the church, you may find my answer unsatisfying. I believe that anyone who repents of sin and believes on Jesus Christ will be saved, whenever and wherever that repentance and faith occur. And I believe the possibility of repenting and believing will exist as long as the Holy Spirit convicts of sin and draws to Christ through the preaching of the gospel. Until "the day of the Lord," the promise abides. "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Acts 2:17-21).

A Jehovah's Witness cited Leviticus 17:11-14 to support their refusal of blood transfusions. Please comment.

I think the law given in this passage was (1) hygienic, designed to protect and prolong human life, for animal blood carried diseases and troubled digestion; and (2) symbolic, designed to affirm and illustrate the value of atoning sacrifice, especially the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, whose blood made atonement for our sins. In neither case does blood transfusion enter the picture. Blood transfusion has saved countless lives. It has nothing to do with animal blood, Mosaic law, or theological symbolism.

I respect the right of those who differ from my opinion to refuse blood transfusions. However, I think it is tragic when they refuse for those who cannot make their own decisions, whose recovery from illness or accident may be negated by such refusals.

Is it accurate to say that in justification we experience Christ as Savior, and that in sanctification, we experience Him as Lord?

I don't think so. Jesus Christ is Lord and Savior of all who are justified by faith in Him. We do experience Him more fully as Lord and Savior when we consecrate our redeemed lives totally to Him and trust Him to cleanse us from all inward sin, and ever more fully as we grow in grace and in knowledge of Him as Lord and Savior.
The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hill Oakes, members of the Lancaster, Ky., church, disappeared suddenly October 11, 1980. She has been missing since that day and has not been heard from by any family member or friend.

Her name and description is: Helen Marlene Oakes Major
Age—26
Birthdate—December 7, 1954
Height—5'1"
Eyes—Green
Hair—Blonde
Weight—approximately 110 lbs.

Anyone with information about her can contact her parents: Mr. and Mrs. Bill Oakes, 105 Turner Ave., Lancaster, KY 40444.

The Porterville, Calif., church Senior Adult Ministry group of 34 escaped tragedy on their way to a three-day retreat in San Diego. Bus driver Dale Phelps, a member of the church, heard a noise from the exhaust system and pulled over to the side of the freeway. He walked to the engine compartment and saw flames flickering above an overheated exhaust pipe. He quickly urged the passengers to get out.

The emergency door was useless since it was directly over the heart of the fire so most of the elderly passengers filed out the front door. A couple climbed out a window. Just moments after all were safely out, flames raged through the floorboards, seats sizzled and smoke blanketed the interior. Though the bus was gutted, luggage stored in the baggage compartment went unscathed.

Some of the passengers' purses, jewelry and handbags were burned. One woman lost a $500 back brace, and another lost her Bible. But it was evident the Lord was with them.

The bus had just been on a round trip to Seattle, without any problems and recently passed safety inspection.

NAZARENE MINISTER IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY SERVICE

Recently, Rev. Glyn Thomas represented the Guide Dogs for the Blind Association in a commemoration service held in Westminster Abbey to...
The Iowa District selected the pastors' wives as campaign directors in their Herald of Holiness drive for 1981. Katy Suman, pastor's wife at Clinton, Ia., First Church accepted the challenge and enlisted the children of the church as her helpers. She named them "Katy's Kids" and promised them a picnic with fun and games if their goal was reached. The children are pictured with a special copy of the Herald which they distributed as they made their sales. Renee Runquist, age nine, was top salesgirl. Nora Nippers, age six, did her share, selling when she was in the laundromat one day with her mother. The goal was exceeded and Mrs. Suman received a bag of groceries from the district at the district assembly—thanks to the help of "Katy's Kids."

celebrate the golden jubilee of the association.

Before a packed congregation, Rev. Thomas and his dog Fanta led the procession of clergy from the Jerusalem Chamber Vestry along the Nave to the Quire and Sacrament. Over 600 dogs were present with their owners, and amazingly not a sound was heard from the dogs as the processional hymn commenced with a trumpet fanfare.

The Right Honourable George Thomas, M.P., Speaker of the House of Commons, was the preacher in the service. Later in the day, Rev. Thomas and Mr. G. Thomas met at the tea party held in the Palace Royal Mews.

Rev. and Mrs. Thomas are retired after many years of successful ministry. However, Brother Thomas recently was involved in a month's ministry in Ulster, Northern Ireland. He is the president of the Torch Fellowship in Leeds, a Christian ministry to the blind. He is a member of the Leeds Dewsbury Church, pastored by Rev. J. R. Wetherill, who accompanied him to London and the Abbey service.

MEMO

to church board members:

When you don't pay the electric bill, the lights go out. When you don't pay the fuel bill, there soon will be no means of heating your church. Likewise, if your local church does not pay its Pensions and Benefits Fund in full, you jeopardize the pension and benefits of your present minister, your past ministers, and over 2,000 ministers and widows of ministers who are already retired and depending on the regular church pension check.

Currently ministers may receive up to $200 a month in the Nazarene "Basic" Pension Program. Since 1919 widows' benefits have been equal to 60 percent of the amount for which their spouse was eligible. With the pension roll now exceeding 2,000 and the total amount of pensions paid out averaging $250,000 per month, and no General Budget monies allocated for this purpose, one can easily see why full payment of the Pensions and Benefits Fund by each local church is so essential for the fulfillment of this responsibility.

The highest denominational average for district payment of the Fund was 93.38 percent (1978-79 assembly year). This is a commendable achievement, but should the church do less than 100 percent for those who have served the Kingdom and the church so well?

NEW INNER-CITY MISSION LAUNCHED IN DOWNTOWN SAN FRANCISCO

Golden Gate Community, an urban mission in San Francisco patterned after the Lamb’s Mission in Times Square, officially began ministry August 1, but is currently in the process of purchasing a building in the Haight-Ashbury area of that city.

According to Rev. Michael Christensen, director of the mission, $60,000 is needed in cash before October 30 to make a down payment on the $300,000 structure. The facility will serve as a residency for the staff of five, ministry center, and an initial house of worship.

Golden Gate Community is a district-sponsored project supported by the General Church of the Nazarene.

Rev. Christensen was formerly associate pastor of the Lamb’s Mission which he helped pioneer eight years ago.

The new San Francisco ministry will focus on the social and spiritual needs of people in the inner city. According to Christensen, “Haight-Ashbury in the 60s is no longer the hippy haven of the 60s nor the drug ghetto of the 70s, but is a radically mixed neighborhood of Blacks and Whites, rich and poor, gays and straights, young and old, married and singles, who need to experience the love of God.”

Golden Gate Community is an approved 10 percent special project of the Church of the Nazarene and contributions may be sent to Dr. Norman O. Miller, General Treasurer, in Kansas City.

ADULT MINISTRIES FIELD TESTS FAMILY ENRICHMENT SEMINAR

The office of Marriage and Family Life recently field-tested a model for family enrichment. The prototype seminar was developed by J. Paul and Marilyn Turner, directors of Marriage and Family Life for Adult Ministries in the Division of Christian Life. The Turners are known throughout the denomination for their development and encouragement of marriage enrichment retreats.

Four basic components form the structure of the Friday evening through Saturday evening format. They are: “We Are Unique,” “We Are Friends,” “We Talk and Care,” and “We Walk Together.”

Five sets of parents were involved in this pioneer family enrichment setting. The nine children present, four girls and five boys, ranged in ages from 11 to 17 years. The families are completing an evaluation tool.

According to Turner, the Marriage and Family Life office plans two additional, yet different models. Each one is based on the assumption that participating families are reasonably healthy and committed to spiritual growth. They project completing testing of the concept in mid-1982.

Persons interested in the family enrichment retreat idea may contact the office of Marriage and Family Life, 6401 The Paseo, Kansas City, MO 64131 (816-333-7000, ext. 364).

ENROLLMENT AT NIBC CONTINUES TO PRESS CAPACITY TO THE LIMIT

Enrollment continues at absolute capacity at Nazarene Indian Bible College in Albuquerque, according to President Wayne Stark. In 1980 enrollment took a major leap forward, going from approximately 25 to nearly 50 in the first semester; at one time in the second semester enrollment peaked at 52. First reports of the 1981 fall enrollment list 47 students enrolled. Among them are representatives of the Navajo, Apache, Mojave, Quechan, Papago, Pima, Eskimo, Chippewa, and Creek tribes.

The school is pressing toward the improvement in facilities and toward Bible college accreditation. When that milestone is achieved, enrollment can be expected to make another major and unprecedented leap.

The Church Extension Office in Kansas City is providing funding for a house trailer, basic equipment for student dormitory rooms, and other equipment needs of more than $5,000 for which the school is not budgeted. Any special giving above General Budget for the Nazarene Indian Bible College is an approved 10 percent Missionary Special.
