Hillary, Fuchs Engage In Antarctic Quarrel

LONDON (UP)—A feisty-radio crackled across the bottom of the world today between Britain's Dr. Vivian Fuchs and New Zealand's Sir Edmund Hillary over which one is boss of Britain's Antarctic expedition.

Dr. Hartman Installed To Head Kiwanis

The origin, progress and aims of the Kiwanis International were reviewed for Kankakee Kiwanis Monday noon by Dr. H. A. Hartman following his installation as the group's new president.

Begun at Detroit, Mich., in the latter part of the 19th century, the club now numbers 250,000 members. The Kankakee club was started in 1919.

Included in the primary aims of the club are placing the spiritual and humane above the material, higher social and business standards, helping build better communities and the maintenance of high ideals.

"He pointed out that the name Kiwanis of itself has no particular meaning. It actually comes from a much longer Indian word meaning 'to trade'."

"At first this was the primary purpose of the organization, but that has been changed down through the years to include the spiritual and humane side."

The name, Dr. Hartman said, was chosen because of its euphony and easiness to be remembered and pronounced.

Donald Cooper, outgoing president, thanked the club for the fine cooperation during the past year. In reviewing club accomplishments during the year he noted that the club's treasury is about double what it was Dec. 31, 1956. Membership has remained about the same.

Cooper suggested that Kiwanis take the lead in starting an annual inter-club day. On this day the presidents of the three other service clubs in Kankakee would meet the guests of Kiwanis.

He also suggested that next year the club prepare about five times as many bags of peanuts as it used this year for the peanut day sales. Proceeds from the sale are used for the club's welfare projects.

Donald Gray was honored by the club with a pin and certificate for 25 years of membership. Six members received pins for one year's perfect attendance at meetings and 12 received two-year pins.

Don Smith and Sid Fousle received three-year pins, George Swann a four-year pin and Dr. N. J. Ignat a nine-year perfect attendance pin.

The full-time Social Security office announced for Kankakee will probably not open until after March 1, Harold Whitelide, manager of the Joliet District Office of the Social Security Administration, has announced.

Plans to open an office here to serve 25,000 people in Kankakee and Iroquois counties covered by social security were announced Dec. 17.

Whitelide has said that arrangements have been made for all real estate offices to be notified as soon as specifications for the space are published by the General Services Administration.

KHS Seniors Rate Well On Merit Exams

Kankakee school authorities are very well pleased with the results that seniors here achieved on the recent National Merit Scholarship examination.

Two of the students, Thomas Maline and William Schultz, won their way into the semifinals of the national competition, ranking in the upper 10 per cent of students taking the test.

Fourteen KHS seniors ranked in the upper 10 per cent in each of the two sections of the test—English and math—according to more detailed tabulations received recently by Principal Walter W. Knecht.

"The students were competing with a very select group and are very well pleased with their showing," said Knecht.

The upper 5 per cent of high school classes all over the country can write on the tests free of charge. At Kankakee that was 13 students. Forty-one others among the high school seniors also took the examination. Almost all of them scored in the upper half of the students who took the test.

"We are even more pleased with the progress our students are making after they get to college," Knecht added. "The real test is how well they do in college and our students are doing very well."

Fifteen KHS students also wrote on the examination for Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps scholarships. Knecht reported that 700 miles from Scott Base.

"We will find our own way out," he said.

Hillary originally was scheduled to mark a trail from Scott Base to the supply point and stop there instead of pushing on to the pole.

He then was to lead Fuchs' group out of the commitment to meet across the Antarctic to Scott.

From Christchurch, N.Z., came a report that the New Zealand Antarctic expedition, headed by a 15,000 pound ($42,000) transatlantic ship, was being sent to take Hillary's advice and quit.

Macmillan Ends Cabinet Crisis, Starts Tour Of Commonwealth

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Macmillan left London today on a five-week tour to unify commonwealth thinking on international problems.

Macmillan's visit to India, Pakistan, Ceylon, New Zealand and Australia dramatized the fact that Britain's relationship to the commonwealth countries now is one of equal partnership rather than of parent to child.

Macmillan left behind a hastily resolved Cabinet crisis and the diplomatic loose ends of his proposal for a nonaggression pact with the Soviet Union.

Minutes before he stepped on his plane the Prime Minister, smiling and jaunty, said he had resolved the differences in his cabinet revealed by the bombshell resignation Monday night of Chancellor of the Exchequer Peter Thorneycroft.

Thorneycroft, who objected to the Cabinet's decision to increase government spending by 50 million pounds ($16 million dollars) next year, was succeeded by Agriculture Minister Derick Heathcote. Several other Cabinet members resigned, but the shakeup did not delay Macmillan's trip.

During his year at the treasury, Thorneycroft's main objective was keeping inflation down and the value of the pound up. In his letter of resignation he told Macmillan he regarded "the limitation of government expenditure as a prerequisite to the stability of the pound."

Heathcote, 58, was brought up from the low-ranking Cabinet post of minister of agriculture to the exchequer's post, third behind the Prime Minister.

World Needs Race For Peace

Preparations for war continue at a shocking pace among the major powers of the world. Here in the U.S. the attention of the administration, Congress and the citizenry is concentrated on missile making, rocket testing and the latest nuclear weapon innovations.

Why not the same effort and energy devoted to finding a permanent policy for maintaining peace throughout the world?

Western leaders are agreed on the need to reach an understanding on ways to slow down the arms race and possibly initiate first-step nuclear controls. The National Security Council Monday heard Harold E. Stassen's proposals to make U.S. disarmament policies more flexible. Perhaps the next disarmament conference should start with a preamble on the true dangers and horrors of nuclear war. Perhaps it should describe in detail what can happen if more nations get into the nuclear swim and it becomes impossible to institute reasoned controls. The full picture should be displayed.

Then it will be hard for the Russians to hide behind technicalities. The Russian people will want an end to the nightmare. They will want the kind of atomic controls that leave nothing to chance.

Something of a Western diplomatic offensive is under way on disarmament. But the Russians are not quite ready to give up what they consider an advantage. They would like to postpone agreement for as long as possible. Infiltrations in the Middle East and elsewhere would stop if there were a workable disarmament plan.

The longer the Russians wait, the weaker their power position will be. The nations on the sidelines will be rooting for those in search of a peace formula. The prestige of the West will rise in direct proportion to its efforts on behalf of disarmament.

The disarmament issue may become a duel of endurance and wits. It will take shrewd handling to keep the Russians from twisting and squirming out of valid arguments.

Saucer Sighters Need Glasses

Kankakeeland residents, like other people who have sighted flying saucers, should consider the explanation advanced by an Air Force scientist.

A former Kankakee scientist and long a specialist in aviation medicine, Dr. Herbert Strughold, argues that eye defects are what causes people to see the saucers. Attached to the department of space medicine at Randolph Air Force base San Antonio, Tex., Strughold witnessed a flying saucer one day while he was near a flight strip.

Upon sighting the object, Dr. Strughold closed his right eye and gazed through his left eye. The mysterious object turned out to be a B-29 bomber. He explained that he had astigmatism in his right eye, a defect he says is shared with about 12 percent of the people.

In his opinion, stigmatic defects are what make many people think that they see strange objects in the air.

Police officers cruising in Champaign with fire extinguishers in the back of their white station wagon represent a system that apparently is working out well.

They respond to all five alarms, ready for duty as either firemen or policemen. Boots, helmets, and firemen's coats in the station wagon make possible a speedy transition from one role to the other.

Fortunately, there have been no major fires in Champaign since this "cooperative fire-police unit" of dually-trained men was established. But experience with smaller blazes has demonstrated that the unit represents one of the most constructive moves of the City Council.

There was skepticism in both the Fire and Police departments when the plan was proposed, but it now has been replaced by respect for the job the men are doing.

Both departments have been strengthened in the process. Rather than employing more firemen to wait in the station wagon until they were needed, the city hired more policemen but made them available when needed as firemen.

It is an excellent example of the benefits that can be realized when governmental departments cooperate rather than build up separate empires.

Money Not The Cure For Education

WASHINGTON—Money isn't the cure for everything. In education, it isn't. No one has come forth to explain why these students who could not afford to go on with their education didn't have the incentive to do it themselves. Who is to blame? Were they the proper counseling? Why, for instance, as the official memorandum reveals, does it happen that "only one out of three high school graduates has had a year of chemistry, only one out of four has taken a year of physics, and only one out of three has had more than one year of algebra?" And why is there a shortage of good teachers?

THESE ARE NOT questions that can be answered just by spending more billions for scholarships. Why should it be necessary for the federal government to spend big sums of money to encourage the state and local school systems to provide more and better teaching of science and mathematics? Is there any explanation of why the state and local school systems have been permitted to get so far behind? And who did the permitting?

When some authoritative body makes a thorough survey of what has been going on for several years now—a situation which has caused much concern inside the education groups in America—the time will be at hand to decide what money should be appropriated, where it can be best utilized, and how the same mistakes that have been made in recent years can be avoided.

It is, of course, nowadays to spend federal funds for education. Pressure groups for years have been pushing it hard, but they have been pushing it against the segregation integration controversy which has stalled the legislative program.

Now, with federal money grants going to individuals instead of to institutions, it may be that

The Right To Starve In Peace

When I first came to Berlin in the autumn of 1946 to work as an advisor to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, I was shocked at the poor physical condition of many of the Berliners, particularly children.

Many children were suffering from edema and were all skin and bones except for their hard swollen bellies.

Khrushchev's Ambition

Khrushchev's desire for the new year is undoubtedly for Eisenhower to join him in a private tête-à-tête, a conference for only the two of them, with interpreters, of course. Then the United States and Soviet Russia would divide the world between them, much as Stalin and Khrushchev divided the world between them in 1957 when they met in alliance and produced the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact.

The only trouble is that Khrushchev, having achieved that position for the Soviet hierarchy which makes him responsible to no one, could bind his country to such a whimsical notion: Eisenhower, being a constitutional president, cannot bind the United States to any secret arrangements, treaties requiring the consent of the Senate and therefore must be published at least in the "Congressional Record" when such treaties are published.

It is a pity that Khrushchev, while he is in a position to represent the people as it did in Hungary, the United States is bound by treaty with the United Nations and with NATO powers and with the SEATO powers to keep them fully informed and to give due consideration to their views.

THE PRESIDENT of the United States is therefore in no position to act as though he alone mattered and as though his opinion must prevail. He is circumscribed by the Constitution and by treaty relationships. Although it is true that some presidents, particularly such a one as Franklin D. Roosevelt, often acted monarchically because their popularity encouraged them to believe that the people would back them up, realistically it is a dangerous procedure because Americans are volatile and often reverse themselves.

While it is possible in Soviet Russia to acknowledge Khrushchev as the leader of the country, it is not possible for an intelligent man to hold such a position concerning any President of the United States. He is not even the leader of his own party and historically rarely has been. In Soviet Russia, it is true of the first secretary of the Communist party, "he leads and I follow," in the United States the nature of citizenship is such that the right of the citizen to the exercise of free judgment is constitutionally guaranteed and at least once every two years, it is the function of citizenship to vote for or against national public officers. At least once every four years, a President stands before the people for their decision as to his fitness and if he runs a second time, it amounts to a referendum, as such an election would be regarded as a referendum on the Eisenhower policies. The President is therefore a very different kind of official from the first secretary of the Communist party USSR. (3) The latter is an autocrat who does not rule by divine right but because he has manipulated himself into supreme power; the former is a servant of his people, limited by the Constitution and the voters' confidence in his ability to serve them; to maintain their honor and dignity and to preserve us a nation. Fortunately the American people have been spared from both absolutism and the leadership principle.

A MEETING BETWEEN KHRUSHCHEV and Eisenhower therefore could not accomplish more than if our principal allies were also present, because they would have to be informed or we might find ourselves without allies and without allies. As matters stand today, it would be much more important and more effective to straighten out our growing agenda of difficulties with Canada than to worry too much about Soviet Russia because the increasing antagonism of Canada could impair our own defense and weaken Canada. Also, we need to cement our relations with Latin America where we are no longer too well regarded in most countries.

We might give our total absorption with Soviet Russia a holiday and attend to some real and pressing, if less dramatic, problems. This prolonged concentration upon our objective enemy it, it seems to me, a calculated device to disturb us.

THE TRAGEDY of millions of refugees being pushed ruthlessly from their homes in Eastern Germany in 1945 and forced to trek to the West under the harshest of conditions (thousands perished en route) also soon became an old story and not newsworthy.

Although every year for the past 10 years between 200,000 and 300,000 East Germans have fled to free Western Germany, this, too, is no news story. Only if some 200,000 to 300,000 persons from free countries fled each year to Communist territories would it be a real news story.

East Is Looking West For New Beauty Ideas

BY JEANNE D'ARCY
Who says, "Never the twain shall meet?"

According to Mikko Taka, Seattle-born Japanese movie star, it isn't so. In feminine matters, beauty and fashion, East is going West as fast as possible.

Mikko, who's an exotic American, visited Japan recently where he took starring honors in the film version of "Sayonara." With her co-star, Marlon Brando, she saw Far Eastern life at first hand, had a chance to observe it closely as a Westerner.

In a telephone interview from California, she told us her reaction to the East.

"Japanese women," she said, "are greatly influenced by American styles. Western dresses are the thing. They wear kimono in the winter, but their summer dresses are just like those you see in New York or in Hollywood."

According to Mikko, Japanese women are even going along with Western hair styles.

"Why, if you don't have a permanent wave in Tokyo," she observed, "you're just old-fashioned. Many women are dyeing their hair, too. Red is the big color. But, personally, I think it's a shame to change that beautiful black hair. It's such a wonderful shade."

We asked Mikko about the weight problem, a major obsession with American females. But it's no dilemma in Japan.

"You hardly ever see a fat Japanese," she said. "They're on the slim side. I can't tell you the secret, but you might be interested to know that their diet contains very little meat. They're great eaters of fish, rice and of vegetables."

At an interesting afterthought she mentioned that dessert (a sweet pastry) is the first course of a Japanese meal.

"Maybe," she said, "that takes the edge off the appetite." Mikko thinks American women are far more fashion-minded—but the Japanese are getting there fast, she says. Still, the Oriental woman, she noted, has an advantage over her American sister.

The No-Fad Diet: 2 Is Bread Your Staff Of Life? Make It Part Of Reducing Plan

(Second of Six Articles)
By GAYNOR MADDOX, N.Y.A. Food and Markets Editor
A frantic king once offered his kingdom for a horse. A slice of bread with butter seems equally important to some men and women on a diet.

In the first article of this No-Fad diet series we stated that even in a 1,500-calorie reducing pattern there is nothing you like which you cannot eat some of the time. That goes for bread, rolls and even coffee cake. But of course not at every meal.

A diet plan which is psychologically upsetting is never a permanent success. To many people bread is the gastronomic symbol of security. Emotionally (not nutritionally) they feel insecure without it.

Therefore, for those people bread must be included in their reduction routine.

For example, most soldiers demand bread no matter how much other food in the meal, according to Dr. Martha F. Trulston, associate professor, Department of Nutrition, Harvard University.

During World War II, while serving as dietitian in an Army hospital in the South Pacific, the bread supply was shut off for several days. She reports that, although adequately fed, both nutritionally and in quantity, the men were restless without their bread.

An average slice of American bread has about 63 calories. It supplies protein and, if enriched, vitamins and minerals and is therefore good food on a low-fat diet such as this. A small (a teaspoon) pat of butter carries about 45 calories. Therefore, if you cannot be happy without a slab of buttered bread every now and then, enjoy it in good conscience. But—and this is an important but—you must fit those 100 calories into your 1,500-calorie pattern without upsetting its nutritional balance.

Remember, your reducing diet must under all circumstances remain nutritionally balanced if you are to maintain your health while shortening your waistline.

It must contain milk, protein such as beef, fish, veal, lamb, chicken, or cheese or eggs; also three or four servings of vegetables, including dark green and yellow ones, fruits, including citrus, bread and cereals, some fat not much sugar and fat (butter, margarine, shortening and oil). All of these foods are on your grocery list.

Exercise above and beyond their normal activity, another slice of bread or a crisp roll won't throw their diet routine out of kilter. For example, an hour of extra housekeeping will burn up calories at the rate of about 100. A half-hour's brisk walk will burn up the same number.

Check your calorie arithmetic daily. Use the bathroom scale at the same time every morning, preferably just before breakfast. If you are a dieter bread lover, get yourself a reliable calorie table and compare the count of the various kinds of bread you like. Don't cut down on some of the other foods in your basic diet. And the subject of such debates is whether to be or not to be married. "I am engaged to a boy named Jack whom I have known for five years. He has everything that should make him a wonderful husband and father."

"Our interests and hobbies are the same. We are active in the same church."

"My parents like him, and his parents are very fond of me. But I still hesitate."

"Maybe we have gone together too long, do you suppose? Has the novelty worn off? Am I too romantic and still childishly dreaming of a knight on a white horse?"

"I don't get butterflies in my stomach when Jack kisses me. Yet I hesitate. Dr. Crane, please give me a big push one way or the other."

MANY WONDERFUL people are like an automobile starter that gets on dead center. They need a push. And I seldom hesitate to push them into marriage if I think they have the makings for permanent happiness.

For marriage can be compared to a square dance. You pick a partner in the dance for a brief interval.

And in the broad view of this Cosmic Universe, our life here on this Earth is relatively but an instant of time.

When we marry, we simply choose a partner with whom to share this brief dance on Earth.

So it is wise to pick a congenial partner who matches your ideals about religion and culture, the rearing of children and your mutual hobbies as well as recreational likes and dislikes.

Love is wonderful, but it can be developed even after marriage, so don't be idolatrous and worship the intoxication of love itself.

Moreover, sexual infatuation and true love are much alike on the surface. But infatuation is very selfish. It is demanding.

So boy, who insists that you prove your love by giving in to his illicit desires for premarital sexual liberties, is not really in love with you at all.

For true love would make him more concerned with the girl's future happiness, instead of his own temporary sexual gratification.

WEED OUT THESE selfish infatuations versus the true motives that assure formula.

"If you go through the proper motions," runs an adage of psychology, "you will soon begin to feel the corresponding emotions."

So pick your mate largely with your brain and then fall in love by going through the proper motions.

Many wives have reported to me that they had never been fully in love with their fiancés, but married anyway. And later they fell ardently in love.

So I urged Mabel to take the plunge. For she was becoming a victim of the typical springer's decision.

If you approach the age of 30 and are still unmarried, you may find it very difficult thereafter to make up your mind.

For you have developed the habit of deferring a decision till tomorrow. This is the "Manana Complex."

Moreover, sexual infatuation and true love are much alike on the surface. But infatuation is very selfish. It is demanding.

So boy, who insists that you prove your love by giving in to his illicit desires for premarital sexual liberties, is not really in love with you at all.

For true love would make him more concerned with the girl's future happiness, instead of his own temporary sexual gratification.

WEED OUT THESE selfish infatuations versus the true motives that assure formula.

"If you go through the proper motions," runs an adage of psychology, "you will soon begin to feel the corresponding emotions."

So pick your mate largely with your brain and then fall in love by going through the proper motions.

Many wives have reported to me that they had never been fully in love with their fiancés, but married anyway. And later they fell ardently in love.

So I urged Mabel to take the plunge. For she was becoming a victim of the typical springer's decision.

If you approach the age of 30 and are still unmarried, you may find it very difficult thereafter to make up your mind.

For you have developed the habit of deferring a decision till tomorrow. This is the "Manana Complex."

After the meeting, refreshments were served in the lower hall by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rosendale.

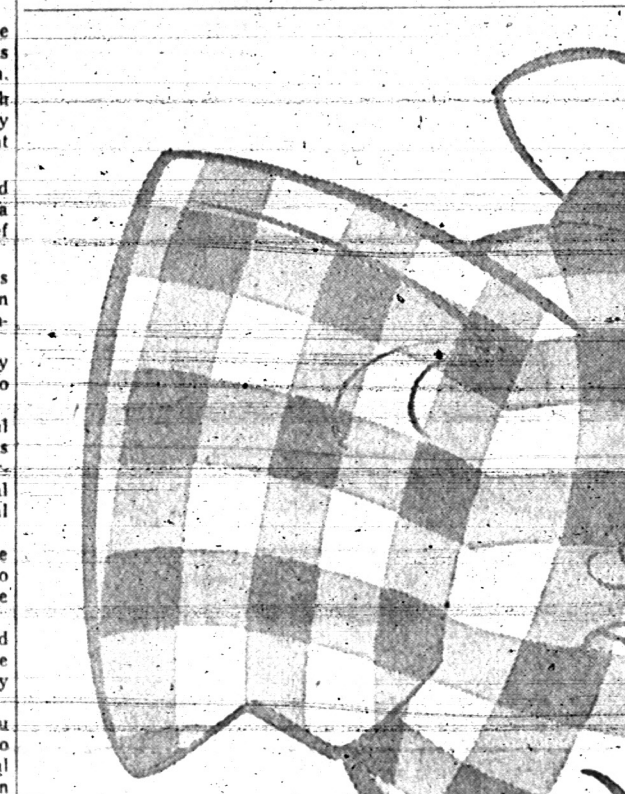

Serve broiled tomatoes with cheese sauce and strips of bacon for a fine luncheon dish.

Dulles To Stay On As Secretary Of State

WASHINGTON (AP)—John Foster Dulles has decided to stay on as secretary of state and is steering himself to resist what he anticipates will be a mounting Democratic demand he retire.

President Eisenhower has given him the assurance of full backing if he continues to stay on.

The 69-year-old secretary is reported to have considered his future carefully within the past few weeks.

Friends said he realized that if he wanted to quit his 70th birthday Feb. 25 and the approach of an expected hectic congressional session would have given him ample reason.

Now that he has made his decision, informants said, he has no intention of quitting under domestic political fire.

The big question mark is his health. He is understood to be confident, however, he will be vigorous enough for the job.

Dulles had some reason to question his fitness when he returned from his Atlantic Pact summit meeting in Paris two weeks ago, weary and suffering from a bad case of laryngitis. At that time he complained to friends he never before had felt so tired.

But after a five-day New Year's vacation on Long Island, he appears to have bounced back.

He told friends he never before had felt so good as he exchange views, an old tribal custom.

BUT THIS GENTLEMAN showed up on the right bank of the river. Why? Because he didn't know which side his bride was battered on.

The above was authored and uttered on the radio by Henry Morgan, a man who takes his humor so seriously that he will tell you he believes the most famous pun in the one involving the Russian composer Shostakovich.

Which one is that, Henry?

"Shostakovich small by a water-fall," he says.

When Clifton Fadiman was master of ceremonies on the "Information Please" program he participated in many a spontaneous pun, including the one about Shostakovich, which was uttered on a Middle Eastern subject. Fadiman wanted to know whether Shostakovich was punning.

"O, yes, he puns," he said.

"A 'Sutany'."

ASKED TO NAME the most famous pun, Fadiman said it would be either Franklin's "hang" or his remark at the end of the Constitutional Convention. Looking at the speaker's face, where there was a glint of sun with overcast face, Frank said he often had wondered there was a pun involved in that but that now he was sure it was a rising sun.

There may be some doubt whether there is a pun involved in that but that now he was sure it was a rising sun.

Bennett Cate, a punster of repute, is proud of his effort to make the small boy who said he had stopped saving stamps because a neighbor boy copied every stamp saving thing he did. His father comforted him: "Remember, imitation is the sincerest form of philately."

Hoosier GOP House Members Try To Smooth Over Party Feud

WASHINGTON (AP)—Indiana's Republican House members appeared today to try to take a step toward truce in a party feud.

But Sen. Capahart (R-Ind.) did not seem to be a part of the peace-making efforts by Rep. Hallock (R-Ind.), dean of the state's congressional delegation.

Hallock called a meeting of the state's GOP House members for today to help him answer a peace gesture from the wing of the party led by Sen. Jenner (R-Ind.) and Gov. Harold W. Handley. Neither had any qualms about the project, which was to be a "cave of years."

Bank Profits Average 10-13 Per Cent Higher

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—The profits of the nation's top banks in 1957 ran from 10 to 13 per cent higher than the year before and averaged out at a gain of 12.4 per cent.

But their deposits advanced only 1.5 per cent, and their loans fell 1.5 per cent, according to a survey by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

The big increases in the first half were due to the combination of high demand by borrowers for bank funds and the increasing rate of interest.

A decided slowing down in the demand for loans to business is indicated in the final figures of the year, as compared to the previous year, when demand was expanding rapidly. Coupled with a falling rate of interest, this has resulted in the question in business circles as to how soon the commercial banks might be forced to abandon the high level of their loan structure.

The BIG BANKS, however, mostly continued to increase in size. Only three of the first 14 of the top banks showed a drop in deposits. The 14 together have total deposits of $45,247,750,000, compared with $43,915,471,000 at the start of 1957.

The top six maintain their previous rank in the list of the top 14. Bank of America still leads the list with deposits of $5,324,117,000, and net earnings of $64,324,000.

Republic City of Chicago, Chase Manhattan with deposits of $5,884,502,000 and earnings of $55,474,000. Chase National City of New York with deposits of $5,884,502,000 and earnings of $55,474,000.

Two other New York banks are fourth and fifth, Manufacturers Trust with deposits of $5,884,502,000 and earnings of $55,474,000. First National City of Chicago follows sixth place.

Some bankers feel that the peak of the credit boom has been reached for a while. They cite the signs that demand for their funds is falling, and the changes that interest rates may ease if demand for funds is falling.

THE AMERICAN BANKERS Association has pointed out that many banks are finding collections of installment loans lagging. And like most business lines the operation is finding the costs of operation rising.

The battle among various forms of savings for the saver's dollar is continuing. The Federal Reserve Bank reports the rates they pay on time deposits to encourage savings.

The New York State Bankers Association reports that state and local governments are showing a net loss in deposits while their savings banks are showing gains.
