Your Income Tax—No. 6

Controversial Expense Account Ruling Reversed By Protests

(Editor's Note: Here's an explanation of the Internal Revenue Service's stand on the controversial line item (9), one of a series of articles designed to aid you in filling your tax returns on 1957 income. Clip and save it for use in preparing your tax form.)

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP News Service Writer
 Last fall the word got out that the Internal Revenue Service was adding a new line to form 1040 for the reporting of job-connected travel expenses and money that taxpayers spent on expense accounts. The idea was to crack down on taxpayers living high off expense accounts, but failing to treat this expense account money as income. Putting the new line (9) on the first page of form 1040 had one basic purpose: to bring right up to the front the total amount claimed as business expenses. That way it could be checked easily without opening each individual form. Any reporting abnormal high expense accounts would be suspect and probably would be asked to justify his deductions.

NO. 6. I DON'T MAKE A SINGLE GALE BUT MY TAXES ARE GOING TO BE A DILLY.
 THERE HAS BEEN a rule on the books since 1921 requiring that all money received on expense accounts be reported as income. Money actually spent on job-connected expenses, of course, could be deducted.

The rule doesn't differentiate between the grocery clerk who gets a $100 travel stipend and a grocer who takes a trip around the world and chalks it off to business expenses. But if the Internal Revenue Service was going to crack down, it had to get a report from every taxpayer. The official word was that anyone who had any sort of expense account would have to fill in the new line.

The news was greeted with howls of protest. The average taxpayer, who has been breaking even or maybe making a little bit on his expense accounts for years, just didn't want to make the records to back up the required statements. And his employers could force thousands of dollars spent in digging up those records for him.

A FEW WEEKS LATER the revenue service backed down. It acknowledged that the new line had not been made public until 10 months of the tax year had passed and hence had a retroactive effect.

Taxpayers this year, the IRS said, could treat the new line as a reimbursement of expenses, and for 1957 just as they had in the past. But the announcement carried the warning that taxpayers should keep adequate records during 1958 so they'll be in a position to make an accounting next year.

This is what it means to you: If in 1958 you were given $200 in expense account money by your employer and you didn't report it as income, you don't have to report anything you got in 1957 on an expense account. That's true whether you broke exactly even, or made a profit.

However, if you reported that $200 as income (which you should have), and then deducted what you actually spent for your employer, you should show that same procedure this year.

THE IRS ACKNOWLEDGES that thousands of taxpayers haven't in past years been reporting the comparatively small amounts they got for cash fares, meals bought while working overseas, telephone calls, stamps, etc. And, frankly, the IRS hasn't been too much concerned with that fact.

But this much seems certain—the IRS wants to get at those taxpayers who have been using their expense accounts to cheat the government and, thus, other taxpayers. So, this will probably be the last time you'll have a choice as to whether you report or not.

More Comfort Wearing FALSE TEETH
 If you have false teeth, you know how uncomfortable they can be. That's why you should wear them with the comfort of a real tooth. The new "False Teeth" are made of a special material that is soft and comfortable. They are also very durable and will last for years. They are available in all colors and sizes. They are also very easy to wear and remove. They are a great help for anyone who has false teeth.

THE BLOODY BODY of Fred Schubert, 48, was found in a fifth floor bathroom of the 15-story Manhattan Building by a day janitor, Homicide Lt. James McMahon said. Schubert suffered a knife wound on the head and cuts on his hands—apparently trying to ward off his assailant.

EIGHT OFFICERS from the 6th to the 16th were ransacked. McMahon said the burglars' take apparently was not large. The burglars forced their way into the building by jumping a rear door, police said.

Police said papers found in Schubert's locker indicated he was the Distinguished Service Cross recipient. The papers also indicated he was a member of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Now if your expenses outrun your reimbursement, it obviously is to your advantage to list them. Your expense deductions will be greater than your expense income. And the adjusted gross income is the basic figure, important one, in determining what you owe the IRS in taxes.

A complete breakdown of allowable job-connected expenses must be attached to your form if you use line (9). You can attach it on a separate sheet of paper, or ask the IRS to send you a copy of form 1040, which is for that specific purpose.

THE BREAKDOWN should include money spent on transportation fares, meals and lodging, local transportation, and automobile expenses. You should also make a further breakdown of your mobile expenses, showing the amount spent for fuel, repairs, depreciation, etc.

The deductions outlined above are the only ones that can be deducted on line (9). The next article will tell you about other job-connected expenses that can be deducted on line (9).

Girl Stays With Friend On Bridge, Train Kills Both

By G. K. HODENFIELD

TWO FRIGHTENED little girls were driven to their deaths from a railroad trestle Saturday. Witnesses say one could have lived if she had abandoned the other.

It wasn't until 12-year-old Pamela Harmon didn't want to live. Twice her friend sent her scrambling toward a water barrel where she could have pulled herself out of reach of danger.

But twice she turned away toward the oncoming train. When her friend Dorothy Miller, 11, screamed, Dorothy's foot was caught in the trestle.

The second time Pamela put her arms around Dorothy and the train faced the oncoming train. The bloody body of Fred Schubert, 48, was found in a fifth floor bathroom of the 15-story Manhattan Building by a day janitor, Homicide Lt. James McMahon said.

$238,000 Fire Razes Peoria Firm

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP News Service Writer

PEORIA — A searing blast visible for miles ravaged an automotive distributor firm in downtown Peoria Saturday, causing damage estimated by the fire department at $238,000.

This central Illinois city's entire fire fighting force turned out to quell the blaze, which also threatened two adjoining buildings, in the midst of a driving snowstorm. Peoria has a population of 115,000.

Temperatures ranged in the mid-20s as firemen attacked the multi-story blaze at the intersection of Washington St. Three firemen sustained minor injuries.

THE FIRE RIPPED through the interior of Robins Automotive Imports, Inc., burned out one wall, the roof and the top floor of the three-story building. The department said two adjoining buildings received no major damage. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

Equipment from East Peoria was also called into action, and more than 1,000 spectators thronged to the scene. Two firemen were hospitalized, and a third man was released after treatment. The two were identified as Ed Nash and Hugh Sturges, both Peoria firemen.

The loss was estimated at $200,000 for the building and $38,000 for the contents.

Optimism Runs High But No Official Word

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP News Service Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A mighty Jupiter-C missile rocketed on Tuesday night, but there was no official word yet on whether it had reached its target.

The Journal's Page Of Opinion

The Kind Of Defense We Need

The Army has acknowledged there is no longer any doubt that the Soviets have at least one intercontinental ballistic missile. This much has come out in testimony by Secretary of the Army Wilbur Brucker. It was made public in heavily censored form by the House Armed Services Committee.

At the same time Brucker expressed belief that the United States is just about on par with Russia in development of such devices. This is a more optimistic view than that taken by the Senate Preparedness Committee, which said a few days ago that most experts who testified before it believed that Russia is out in front.

Another security officer, Deputy Secretary of Defense Quarles, has not concealed the fact the government is concerned with rate of progress in weapons development. It is his considered opinion, however, that the United States still has a qualitative lead in weapons technology.

It may be deduced that we have a good chance of making up lost ground.

However, a defender has to face overwhelming security if he is to keep an aggressor at bay. This superiority must take in more than weapons; it must include research and planning.

It is pretty well agreed that retaliation is a powerful deterrent, but those who think in terms of surprise attack may figure it is possible to paralyze the other side with one smashing blow. That was the psychology of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. The fact it didn't work is secondary to the fact the Japanese decided to start hostilities in this manner.

What we need today is the kind of offensive and defensive facilities that will checkmate this type of speculation. The other side must be given overwhelming proof that not only would surprise attack fail, but that retaliation would be complete.

We were in that position a few years ago before the Soviets developed the hydrogen bomb and various missile-type devices. We are not in that position today.

A Step Toward Renewed Progress

Usually, business slowdown is accompanied by lower prices. The readjustment which became apparent in the third quarter of last year has not slowed down the consumer price index. Statistics just announced for December show prices held level with November. Except for a similar leveling two months ago, the index has marked upward for the past 16 months.

This is why the action of the Federal Reserve Board of Philadelphia, cutting the discount rate 3 to 2 1/4 per cent,

Still Hot Stuff With 'In' Out

There is something relatively new on oil and gasoline trucks. Where the word in big red letters was "inflammable" it is now flammable.

This is an improvement. It eliminates in the people's mind confusion between two kinds of the prefix "in": (a) meaning not or non or, and (b) giving stress or emphasis to the word.

It has been rather hard for many a child to learn that inflammable means just the opposite as incombustible.

What Ever Happened To Tom?

By THOMAS OCHILTREE
LONDON (U-P)—If your Christian name is Thomas do you sometimes get the uneasy feeling that you're a member of a dying tribe?

Aren't you sometimes surprised, as I am, that you so seldom meet another person with the same name?

Go to any cocktail party and you will run into three or four Bobs and as many Bills, but how often do you see another Tom?

AFTER ALL it's an ancient name—this name of one of the Apostles. Every language in Christendom has its form of Thomas. But do people in the English-speaking world call any of their boy children Tom any more?

Writers to the editor of a London newspaper—willing as they are to be cast light into dark places—have taken up the question of what has become of the fine old name.

For me, at least, this is an important period. J. W. Leaver started the correspondence with a letter listing the most frequent Christian names given to children whose birth or adoption was announced in the newspaper during 1957.

Among the boys, John headed the list as it did in 1956. It was followed by David, James, Charles, Richard, William, Christopher and so on—but Thomas was nowhere in sight.

Ernest Barker—presumably a friendly neutral—since he is not one of us—subsequently wrote that the great days for Thomas came before the middle of the 19th Century.

It was one of England's leading names soon after Archbishop Thomas Becket was murdered in Canterbury Cathedral in 1170.

"THE NAME THOMAS came in with the Norman conquest, flourished after the martyrdom of a Becket and faded with the Reformation," Barker suggested.

Thomas Bodkin, a true member of this vague fraternity of Toms, showed how things have gone recently in the letter.

"The name Thomas has usually been borne by some member of my own family since the 13th century. I am asked why I have failed to maintain this tradition I can only reply that my wife demurred to having any of my five daughters christened Thomas; and I hoped until it was too late that they might have been called a Thomas."

"All five are now the mothers of sons, not one of whom is a Thomas."

Girl Missing 2 Months

SYCAMORE (U-P)—Eight weeks ago today, Maria Ridolph disappeared. Hundreds of men have searched and a thousand possible suspects checked. Still no clue to her fate. Is she dead or alive?

Maria was 7 years old. She lived at 616 Archie Place with her mother, her father, two sisters and a brother.

The evening of Dec. 2, 1957, she was playing with Cathie Sigman, 8, near her home.

Cathie said a tall man stopped to play with them. He said his name was Johnnie. He gave Maria a piggy-back ride.

Cathie said he told Maria to go home and get her doll and he would give her more piggy-back rides.

Maria ran home.

HER MOTHER wouldn't let her take her good doll out to play.

"Is It Contagious, Amigo?"

By Rep. Leslie C. Arends

Maintaining National Security

The administration and the Congress are determined that our country shall maintain military superiority against all potential enemies. This is evident from the expeditious action, and the unanimity, by which the House passed recent legislation to supplement defense funds.

The Congress opened on Jan. 7. Seven days later our House Committee on Armed Services reported a bill to authorize additional military expenditures. On the following day, by a vote of 374-4, the House passed the bill.

Last Thursday by a vote of 388-0 the House passed the bill reported from the Committee on Appropriations which makes available to the Defense Department new funds in the amount of $1 billion 289 million.

Not a single amendment was offered to either measure. The House simply accepted the judgment of the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Appropriations as to what was needed to accelerate our military strength. And that judgment of both committees was based on recommendations, with testimony to substantiate, made by our defense officials, civilian and military.

IN REALITY the appropriation of these additional funds constitutes an advance installment on the 1959 fiscal year defense budget. The huge defense appropriation bill itself will be considered later. This advance installment, so to speak, was made for items and areas of critical high-priority status. It was made in order that we may purchase 6 months of precious time.

We repeat what we have said before: we are today prepared to meet and destroy any potential attacker. But we must look to the future. We must retain this position of superiority and we shall, whatever the cost. It is far, far better we make the necessary sacrifices in tax dollars than that we risk having to make sacrifices in blood and human suffering.

That is our determination. With a united front, such as was shown in the action taken on these two defense measures—the authorization of military strength and the appropriation of funds to carry it out—we can maintain the peace.

AGRICULTURAL REVOLUTION—Over a century ago our people experienced what is characterized in our history as the "industrial revolution" the advent of the machine age. During this period our whole way of life was radically changed. What used to be done by hand and horses came to be done by machines.

During our lifetime we have been witnessing what we shall call an "agricultural revolution." There has been an ever increasing decline in the number of farmers and a constant increase in the size of the farms. In the four years from April 1948 to April 1953 our farm population declined by 3.3 million. In the years from April 1953 to April 1956 the drop in the farm population was 2.8 million. This farm depopulation trend continues but at a much slower and orderly pace.

Today a successful farm family needs much more than a mule, a plow and a few acres of land. He needs a tractor and other expensive equipment, and in order to realize a good living and operate economically he must have more and more land.

This is a trend no one can stop. To ease the adjustment, this is one of the complications of our present farm problem.

H-Bomb Science Crusade

WASHINGTON (U-P)—Implementation of President Eisenhower's new "Science for Peace" crusade by world scientific cooperation to harness the hydrogen bomb energy for peaceful uses is proposed here by Dr. M. Stanley Livingston of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Livingston is one of the best qualified high energy physicists in the United States to put forward this suggestion. He was associated with Dr. E. O. Lawrence in developing the first cyclotron at the University of California.

Dr. Livingston then became chairman of the United States and the United Kingdom held back, under their joint security regulations. The result is that the Russians again imposed secrecy on their research.

IT IS TO BREAK this bottleneck that Dr. Livingston is advocating a worldwide research program to harness the energy of the hydrogen bomb reaction.

Dr. Livingston thinks it may be from five to 15 years before the United States has the technology to harness the energy of the hydrogen bomb reaction.

Dr. Livingston's plan is to use his "Science for Peace" plan as the last of eight points in his State of the Union message. The President suggested cooperation with Russia and all other countries to wipe out malaria and attack cancer and heart disease.

U.S. scientists are reported to have achieved million-degree temperatures. The British are rumored to have reached five million degrees. This still leaves a vast research gap.

One approach has been to use magnetic fields to contain clouds of light element gases. Electrical discharges in these gas chambers create the high temperatures in which nuclear fusion is released. The problem then is to convert this high energy into usable heat or electricity.

Russian scientists are known to be working on the problem. British and American scientists are supposed to be cooperating on it. The United States has three research projects on thermonuclear power development at Los Alamos, N.M., Princeton, N.J., and Livermore, Calif., laboratories.

THERE has been much rivalry on which country has made the most progress. A major breakthrough was claimed for the British last fall. It has been widely reported that a British announcement on this was held up at U.S. insistence. This is denied by U.S. Atomic Energy Chairman Lewis L. Strauss.

"If we are behind," comments Dr. Livingston, "it is because of the lack of an enforced military and AEC security."

He estimates this country may have lost three or four years by unnecessary secrecy. It prevents professors from teaching what they know about thermonuclear physics.

EDSON was developed. He is now chairman of the electron-synchrotron project at Harvard.

Voice Of The People

KANKAKEE—Could you please publish this expression of gratitude to the officials of the Kankakee Civic Music Association for scheduling Ralph Hunter's Cavalcade of Song. This was an excellent production and a great musical treat. Each member of the group seemed an artist, masterfully directed by Mr. Hunter. It was worth the price of the season's ticket to hear and see this performance.

That is our determination. With a united front, such as was shown in the action taken on these two defense measures—the authorization of military strength and the appropriation of funds to carry it out—we can maintain the peace.

Salute To Heroes—Unsung

When a pilot knows that his plane is a bomber and that he has a split second to make the decision that may save lives or lose them, he is a hero. He has faced the consequences of his decision and has dared to do the unorthodox.

So, Walter Hagen exhibited the courage and apishness such as gave Arturo Toscanini his start. When the conductor, Pietro Cimara, was beginning to slump in the pit in the Metropolitan Opera House, Hagen, a second violinist, stepped up to prevent the conductor from falling. Had no one stepped forward, there could have been confusion, a scream, a mad rush, pandemonium, hysteria. Who knows what can happen when 3,000 are crowded into a theater?

But Hagen, 37, did step out of line. He was a little late. Pietro Cimara already was suffering a stroke. So Hagen seized the baton and kept the play on the stage. It was only for a short interval until they found an older and more experienced conductor to close the show.

TOSCANINI BECAME A CONDUCTOR because of his being ready, on the spot, when fate required him to be. Hagen should have a similar opportunity. In an age of feather-bedding and coffee-breaks, 40-hour weeks and punctilious gradations and seniority, of not sticking one's neck out and of not daring to get out on a limb, it is a mark of encouragement to see a young man stand up, see his duty and do it.

Although Walter Hagen was born in Munich, he came to the United States with his parents when he was 3. His training, education, habits of mind and culture are therefore wholly American. His father is an organist and the family lived in Philadelphia, Detroit and Buffalo where they finally settled down. Walter was undoubtedly a prodigy because he played Mendelssohn and Bruch violin concertos with the Buffalo Symphony when he was 12 years old.

He won the Rochester Prize Scholarship and studied at the Eastman School of Music where he met his wife, Carrie Featon, whose father was an organist and choir director. Carrie is a pianist and plays the oboe and the organ. After a tour in the army, Walter became a fiddler in the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra.

IN 1941, WALTER HAGEN SPENT a summer at Tanglewood, in the Berkshires, where the music school is producing such a galaxy of American talent. Tanglewood has an atmosphere and an attitude which are undoubtedly best portrayed in the personality of another American, Leonard Bernstein, who has now reached a peak in music by becoming the musical director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, which New York. Bernstein enjoys a mass popularity among young people which is understood better as one listens to him teach the meaning of music to children over television on Saturday mornings. Bernstein possesses the pedagogic gift of explaining the obscure in the idiom of the day.

And I could not help recalling how Serge Koussevitzky was able to convey ideas by a gesture, which, of course, is what conducting really means. The Boston Symphony had been playing "All the Beethoven symphonies one summer at Tanglewood, from one to nine, right through. It was a tough chore to do and to listen to and one wondered what would happen by the time the ninth came along. Koussevitzky dressed in summer clothes, white trousers and a grey cotton coat which would become stained by sweat.

CAME THE NINTH and NO Koussevitzky. The orchestra was on stage. The tuning up had been unduly prolonged. But no Koussevitzky. The audience applauded. Those who had to catch trains to New York or Boston showed anxiety. Still no Koussevitzky. Each minute was an eternity.

Finally, the maestro appeared, fully dressed in evening clothes, white tie, boiler plate shirt, long tails—in this mid-summer. The formality was a gesture to the greatest of symphonies. The audience understood and rose and cheered.

In the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra is a group of musicians who play in veterans hospitals near cities which the opera visits when it is on tour. For the musicians, this is a business holiday. Among these players is a group of 20 called the Junior Symphonists, which Walter Hagen will conduct in its concert at Hasbrouck Heights in New Jersey. One day, he will conduct a full opera at the Metropolitan which already has one American Tanglewood alumnus, Conductor Thomas Schipper.

Swimming Precautions

A glance at the calendar tells me to be on. "If you're got a good swimmer, I don't expect you to try to save anyone's life. You may only lose your own in the attempt."

But you can and should know a little about helping to take care of a person who has been rescued from drowning.

The methods of artificial respiration are too difficult to attempt to explain here. Have someone show you how to perform them.

But you can learn four simple points of after care.

Once a nearly-drowned person has been revived, he should be: 1. Kept warm and dry. Cover him with a blanket, towels or clothing to keep him from becoming chilled.

2. Given a stiff whiff of spirits of ammonia. This will temporarily help him breathe deeper.

3. Placed on his side, if his condition permits it. This will ease his breathing movements and prevent regurgitation.

4. Removed to a hospital as soon as possible. He must be handled with great care to prevent development of secondary shocks.

QUESTION AND ANSWER
Q: "What causes a child to have extreme weakness in his arms in spite of the fact that the muscles are extremely well formed?"

A: Answer: It may be that the child is suffering from a form of muscular dystrophy in which there is some wasting of the muscles even though they may appear to be well formed. This can only be determined by a careful examination of the muscles and nerves.

Conservative Balm Goes For Sack Line

PARIS (AP)—When conservative Pierre Balmat goes in for loose waistlines and short skirts, the sack line he really arrived.

It happened today when Balmat unveiled his spring collection of tube dresses and cylinder skirts. Balmat's sack is far from a bag. It fits everywhere except in the middle. His top-to-the-calf skirts were radically shorter for him, but other designers are flitting with the kneecap.

It was altogether the newest-looking Balmat collection in years, but there were still vintage touches. These included sunny pleated jackets, some with the skirt pulled up and draped over one arm like a Grecian toga; long, flowing skirts with feathered or beaded trims; and some of the skirted formal with fullness at the side.

BALMAT SUITS have short, pleated skirts, and jackets, some with a wide, stiff collar and a wide, stiff collar and a wide, stiff collar.

Occasional light snow and snow flurries were forecast to continue until this evening with little change in temperature. The high today was expected to reach into the low 30s with the mercury dipping to the low 20s tonight and rising to the low 30s again Wednesday.

Light wind Monday night forced the county highway department to send out its four plows. Drilling was reported in several areas with a few drifts up to as much as a foot deep reported. No highways were reported closed to travel, however, although there were some spots of slushy, wet pavement.

The department said that drilling was restricted mostly to north-south highways.

In the city, the street department has yet to use plows this year, but has six trucks out with snow-covers all day. Monday, maintenance men in operation throughout the night, and had six trucks out again today using chills on icy intersections and hills.

The Illinois Division of Highways reported as of 5 a.m. that drifting snow had caused scattered delays on the northern end of the state.

Only about a quarter inch of new snow was measured in downtown Kansas City this morning, although at the airport an inch was reported. The current series of light snowfalls stretching back to last Friday has deposited only between 1 1/2 and 2 1/2 inches of new snow, just enough in most cases to make driving hazardous.

Arrest Suspect In Woodland Store Burglary

WATSEKA (JNS)—Iron County sheriff's officers will have a busy day today for they are expected to bring back a suspect arrested in North Carolina in regard to a burglary in Woodland.

Being held for Chief Deputy Wilbur Damsler and Deputy Howard Kane, in Cecil Holter, formerly of Watseka. Holter is to be questioned in the Lloyd Brown grocery store burglary which occurred some time ago.

He was arrested during the weekend in Lakeland, N. C., by authorities there in connection with the Watseka burglary.

Inducted were Craig Farham, Dennis Smith, Scott Lang, Steve Smith, and others. The Rev. Paul H. Smith, officiating. Burial will be in Oak Hill cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home, 1000 N. 10th St., Wednesday, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

School Board Accepts Summer Course Fellowship For Faculty

General Foods' offer of a $1,000 summer course fellowship for Kansas City High School faculty members was accepted "with thanks" Monday night by the Kansas City School Board.

Harold McGrath, manager of General Foods' operations at Kansas City, made the grant available to the board on behalf of his company.

The board asked the administrative staff to develop a plan for awarding the funds.

They indicated that some sort of selection committee probably will be established.

A similar "pilot" program has been in effect at LeRoy, N.Y., where the company's Jell-O plant is located. It has proven very successful for the past two summers, according to reports from school officials and teachers there.

The Kiwanis Club's offer to plant additional trees near West Junior High School also was accepted by the board.

The club plans to plant approximately 100 different kinds of trees near a new sidewalk at the east end of the WHS site. Most of them would be native trees. They not only will be attractive but will provide a valuable study for young students, Kiwanis president reported.

Kiwanians planted maple trees last year around other parts of the WHS site.

Anderson Elected President Iroquois Co. Farm Bureau

Walter Anderson, Sheldon, has been unanimously elected president of the Iroquois County Farm Bureau by the board of directors.

Anderson replaces Elmer Widholm, Clinton, who had served as president for the past three years.

Anderson served on the board of directors for several years. He has recently been chairman of the policy development committee.

He operates a grain farm south of Sheldon, and is a member of the Iroquois County and Methodist churches.

Ben West Sr., who farms south of Watseka, was elected vice president. Respected were Russell Meier, Ashmun, secretary, and Charles Ostrom, Clatsop Park, treasurer.

Predict Good Price On Hogs, Cattle In '68

WILMINGTON (U)—The Agricultural Marketing Service is optimistic about "future hog" prices despite indications that production is expanding.

It says that a prospective 9 percent increase in this year's spring pig crop would not provide an oversupply of hogs to the market.

The service says the 1968 level of cattle prices promises to be as high or higher than in 1957.

West Reducing Demands 58 Summit Talks A Cinch

LONDON (UP)—Highly-placed diplomats add today mounting public pressure in Europe has made a summit conference this year "inevitable."

They said there no longer is a question of whether there will be a heads-of-government meeting. The question now is how soon and on what conditions.

The western governments have, step by step, whittled down their terms for such a gathering, the diplomats said, and now are merely seeking an advance agreement on the agenda for a "summit" meeting.

THE DIPLOMATS termed it a clear case of public pressure forcing a course of action on the Western governments despite skepticism by some leaders of the usefulness of a rushed top-level get-together.

Pressure from public opinion on European governments—including Britain—was in turn considered to be forcing the pace of a reluctant United States in drawing closer to a heads-of-government parity.

This authoritative appraisal of the West's position followed a meeting of the Western European summit party leader Nikita Khrushchev's renewed call for an urgent summit session over the weekend.

He said that a foreign minister conference, followed by a summit, was the only way to achieve a breakthrough in the current stalemate.
