

4-1-2016

GlimmerGlass Volume 75 Number 11 (2016)

Grace King (Executive Editor)
Olivet Nazarene University

Jay Martinson (Advisor)
Olivet Nazarene University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.olivet.edu/gg>

Recommended Citation

King, Grace (Executive Editor) and Martinson, Jay (Advisor), "GlimmerGlass Volume 75 Number 11 (2016)" (2016). GlimmerGlass. 1008.
<https://digitalcommons.olivet.edu/gg/1008>

This News Article is brought to you for free and open access by the University Archives at Digital Commons @ Olivet. It has been accepted for inclusion in GlimmerGlass by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Olivet. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@olivet.edu.

Catholics reclaim Olivet

Decision reached by administration to rename Olivet St. Viator, its former name

Lauren Stancle

Assistant Editor

The board of directors has decided that in Fall 2016, Olivet Nazarene University will return to being a Catholic campus.

Helping this transition to move along smoothly is the priest of Maternity of the Blessed Virgin Mary Catholic Church, Father Richard Panini. "Olivet has such a rich history in Catholicism and I was glad to hear Olivet is going back to their roots," Panini said.

According to Chaplain Matt Holycomb, starting in the fall, chapel will be held in Maternity BVM and referred to as Mass.

"We encourage students to worship in whatever way they feel led by the Spirit," Holycomb said. "But we're making the effort to educate students to worship and live their lives according to Catholicism."

Holycomb predicts that the school will remain predominantly Nazarene when it comes to the denominational choice of students, but overtime most of the population will profess to be Catholic.

PHOTO BY ANGEL GAIKWAD

Maternity B.V.M. parish, located near Burke Administration, will be the new location of chapel services, although students still may not utilize MBVM parking lot.

Arrangements are currently being made to change the name of the school from Olivet back to St. Viator's, its former name.

It has also been confirmed that Pope Francis has agreed to be the first chapel speaker of the year. "I can't think of anyone who would be a better fit to speak to the students," first chapel speaker of the year. "I can't think of anyone who would be a better fit to speak to the students,"

We're making the effort to educate students to worship and live their lives according to Catholicism. - Chaplain Matt Holycomb

Panini said. "He's already expressed that he's proud to hear of this change in the university and he would love to teach students the ways of Catholicism."

Both Panini and Holycomb also mentioned that this change to the university and the Pope's visit will bring in many potential students and put St. Viator's on the map.

"We know this is a big change for the University, but change is good," Holycomb said. "We've been considering making this change for a while, and we feel it's what's best for the community of Olivet. We think the founders would be very proud of our decision."

Local hero takes over GlimmerGlass

Formerly-irrelevant Jack White kindly alleviates King of editorial duties

PHOTO BY ANGEL GAIKWAD

Sophomore Jack White is now Executive Editor of The GlimmerGlass.

Jack White

Executive Editor

What can be said of Jack White that hasn't already been said of former president of the U.S. Franklin D. Roosevelt, former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, or former vice president of the U.S. Al Gore?

After the long and winding road of corruption that ended junior Grace King's stint as executive editor of The GlimmerGlass, now sophomore Jack White has taken over that mantle and the future looks straight lit.

White worked as The GlimmerGlass film critic for two semesters before his hostile takeover of the newspaper. His writing accomplishments leave little to be desired: in fifth grade, he won best achievement in poetry; in middle school, he took second place in a short fiction competition; he briefly wrote speeches for the George W. Bush Administration; and more recently, took third place in the Critical Review Open at the Illinois College Press Association (ICPA). The GlimmerGlass competed in February.

"I just have a lot of thoughts and want people to hear them," White said about his reign as editor. "I'm a big conspiracy theorist. I just want Olivet to stop believing the government lies. In addition, I'd like to scrap the sports section and have a section on the art of puppetry; there is a lot of news there. So no huge changes."

White also serves as a resident assistant (RA) in Hills Hall. "I knew from the start [White] would be a great RA, but never did I think he would become not only my best friend, but a father figure to me," Resident Director (RD) of Hills Aaron Crane said. "Jack is always willing to give you a swish. For Free."

Crane wasn't the only RD who had nice things to say about White. Nesbitt RD and Centennial Chapel worship director Joey Ramirez said, "Alguien me dijo una vez el mundo se me va a rodar," before breaking down in tears - he felt he owed White so much.

Not everyone is so gracious, however, when it comes to White's takeover. "You know how in The Incredibles that one nerdy loser villain is salty that he didn't get to be Mr. Incredible's sidekick, so he tries to kill him?" King said, between gulping sobs and hysterical laughter.

"That's basically what happened with [White], and I'm Mr. Incredible."

White's inspiration comes from a variety of sources. "I loved Cookie Monster growing up," White said. "He is the one who taught me about letters in the first place, so it really started with him."

White said there was one event that contributed to his success. "At age 11, I was bitten by a radioactive writer, and from then on I assumed a secret identity so rival writers wouldn't try to harm my family," White said. "I have been writing under the penname J.K. Rowling for a number of years."

White continued, "From there, I was very inspired by Marx, both Karl Marx and the Marx Brother. Lynch's 'Erashead' altered every facet of my life, writing included."

Just sitting in the same room as White, I was showered in confidence. This reporter has never been more confident in The GlimmerGlass, soon to be called "Big Jack's Dirty News."

Be sure to keep reading during this exciting transition. As our new executive editor takes the reins of the paper, be sure to follow his adventure on Snapchat. His handle is @jackwhite227!

LOOK INSIDE

THE REAL FAKE PICKERING

After an extensive investigation, the administration reveals the fake David Pickering to be none other than Mrs. Jill Bowling. 03

24 HOUR ENGAGEMENT

After listening to an inspirational chapel on marriage, students throw caution to the wind and get engaged and married in the same day. 04

NEW EDITOR IN TOWN

Sophomore Jack White expands on his takeover of The GlimmerGlass as Executive Editor, apologizing for former editor's misconduct. 06

DOUBLE DRIBBLE JESUS

The Jesus holding the world statue outside Centennial Chapel inspires a change in the rules of basketball at Olivet. 07

News: 1-3
Life & Culture: 4-5
Opinion: 6
Sports: 7-8

STAFF LIST

Grace King JACK WHITE
EXECUTIVE EDITOR

Taylor Provost
NEWS EDITOR

Nathan DiCamillo
LIFE & CULTURE EDITOR

Nicole Pilbeam
SPORTS EDITOR

Abbie Mills
PHOTO EDITOR

Melissa Luby
ONLINE EDITOR

Lauren Stancle
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Mariah Garratt
ADVERTISEMENT COORDINATOR

Jay Martinson
ADVISOR

STAFF WRITERS

Claire Schmidt
Sam Nichols
Becca Hunt
Evan Sherar
Jack White
Connor Pestka
Kelli Poole
MacKenzie Mehaffey
Sarah Ortman
Alyssa Franklin
Grace Pelley
Brandon Grossi

PHOTOGRAPHERS

Eddie Ochoa
Joy Katenkamp
Luke Baker
Grace Thomas
Kayla Young
Jonah Sunderland
Angel GaiKWAD

COPY EDITORS

Heather Halverson
Megan Mattila

Are you a writer, photographer, graphic designer, editor, or interested in selling ads?

E-mail glimmerglass
@olivet.edu for details!

ABOUT GLIMMERGLASS

The GlimmerGlass is the official newspaper of the Associated Students of Olivet Nazarene University and a member of the Illinois College Press Association. The opinions expressed are those of each writer and are not necessarily held by the Associated Students Council, faculty, administration or students of the university.

Until 1941, the university newspaper was known simply as Olivet News. Former adviser Bertha Supplee proposed the name GlimmerGlass after visiting upstate New York, where she discovered a lake with the same name. The lake was as clear as glass and "glimmered" in the breeze. The newspaper staff adopted the name in spring of 1941, with the vision that it would symbolize the paper's mission to reflect the truth and the values of Olivet Nazarene University.

LETTER SUBMISSION

The GlimmerGlass encourages readers to respond through letters to the editor. For publication, letters must be signed and sent to campus box 6024 or e-mailed to glimmerglass@olivet.edu. The editor reserves the right to edit letters for structure, style and length. Publication is not guaranteed.

The Eternal Flame, directly across the street from Olivet Admissions, is rapidly contributing to global warming, according to the Environmental Working Gathering (EWG).

Eternal flame environmental hazard, 'science' says

Taylor Provost

News Editor

Contrary to popular belief, the eternal flame, located across the street from the Olivet Nazarene University's Admission's building, is anything but miraculous.

The Environmental Working Gathering (EWG) released results to a new study earlier this week, revealing that Olivet's eternal flame has been a significant contributor to global warming.

The flame burns eternally, not thanks to divine intervention, but thanks to the underground gas line hooked up to the location. The constant burning of natural gas, according to the EWG report, has led to an immense emission of the deadly gas carbon dioxide, which has been shown to deplete the ozone.

Olivet geography professor Max Reams suggested the eternal flame be removed and replaced with a more sustainable alternative, in light of the EWG's recent discovery. "I like chocolate fondue fountains," Reams said. "Have you ever tried those? It would be nice if we could replace the flame with a chocolate fountain; chocolate isn't melting the polar ice caps now, is it?"

Not only is the eternal flame damaging the atmosphere, but according to Bourbonnais Fire Chief Marshall Bruce Mathers III, the flame also poses a serious fire hazard. "Did Olivet learn nothing from the last time the entire campus here burned down?" Mathers said. "It's like letting a candle burn overnight in your apartment; it's asking for trouble." Mathers referenced the 1906 fire that burned down Olivet's current location, formerly and soon-again St. Viator College.

Aside from concerns over environmental safety, locals have also been sighted lighting cigarettes on the flame and smoking on campus, a strict Olivet policy violation. After smoking, locals have used the flame's plate as an ashtray, as well. The burning of the cigarette remains in the flame's plate is a direct violation of Bourbonnais' ordinance against open burning of garbage.

Bourbonnais Police Chief Michael Phelps expressed his frustration with the flame that never ceases. "The flame may be burning 24/7, but the eternal flame is definitely not 'lit,' as the kids like to say."

Olivet's Public Safety in conjunction with Physical Plant and Administration will be meeting on Monday, April 4, to discuss a plan of action regarding the eternal flame. Reams also plans on attending the meeting to present his idea of the eternal chocolate fountain alternative.

Of Solomon and streaming: no more Netflix and chill

Melissa Luby

Online Editor

Starting next semester, Olivet couples will have to find a new alternative to "Netflix and chill."

A high-ranking Information Technology (IT) official, who asked to remain anonymous for fear of student outrage, said that the university will ban the popular streaming service to free up Solomon's bandwidth for academic purposes.

"Campus Wi-Fi networks exist primarily as an aid to academics," he said. "As more and more apps, social media sites and streaming services become available, students are increasingly using Wi-Fi for recreation rather than academics. While social networking sites take up relatively little bandwidth, streaming sites like Netflix are a huge drain on Solomon's bandwidth."

"There's nothing wrong with Solomon as far as hardware is concerned," he added. "Netflix is what's wrong with Solomon. When you get several hundred to over a thousand students trying to stream House of Cards and Pretty Little Liars, Solomon just can't handle that kind of traffic."

IT recognizes that banning Netflix will be very unpopular with students; however, they wish to remind students why they came to Olivet.

Junior Luke Salomone promises students that he can enable Netflix in their apartment even with the IT ban.

"You're here to learn and to get the most out of your education," the IT official said. "By banning Netflix, we're ensuring that the more studious students have the ability to access our campus Wi-Fi and maximize their academic potential."

As predicted, students are outraged by the Netflix ban.

"What are [Ring] and I supposed to do together if we can't watch Netflix?" junior Will Maebee said. Maebee has been dating fellow junior Wanda Ring since their freshman year. Since then, the couple has completed over 40 different shows together on Netflix.

"If we can't watch Netflix, we'll actually have to talk to each other," Maebee said. "And every time I talk to Wanda, she starts talking about marriage. Netflix is what keeps our relationships healthy."

Single students also feel the pressure of the Netflix ban. Senior Ima Lohn, who hasn't been seen since her freshman year, uses Netflix to fulfill her minimal desire for human companionship. "The characters on my favorite shows — those are my friends," she said. "Netflix allows me to be an introvert. If I can't watch Netflix, I'll lose my 'friends,' and I'll actually have to leave my room, go to campus events and meet people."

For the Netflix-addicted, there is hope, however. Junior Luke Salomone claims he can help students avoid the Netflix ban.

"I don't know how much I want to share," said Salomone when asked about the process. "I wouldn't want people stealing my idea... and I don't want people to get blocked."

For a one-time fee of $5, Salomone could help students get unlimited, unrestricted access to Netflix. But there is another way, he said.

"People would start using their phones for Netflix," he said. "If you have unlimited data, you can watch as much Netflix as you want. People might even start renting their phones to others so that they can watch. There could be a whole underground network."

So far, IT only plans to ban Netflix, leaving other, less popular streaming sites such as Hulu and Amazon Instant Video still accessible to students. Internet-savvy students will also be able to use pirate sites based in Europe.

So the question remains: Hulu and chill, anyone?

'Fake David Pickering' revealed as Jill Bowling

Taylor Provost
News Editor

After an ongoing investigation, Jill Bowling admitted on Tuesday to being the infamous and widely-hated "Fake David Pickering."

In the early hours of the morning on Feb. 24, Olivet Nazarene University students received an e-mail from David Pickering announcing the cancellation of the school day due to weather conditions, only to receive another e-mail from Pickering shortly after to announce that school was indeed in session and that the first e-mail was from an imposter.

Later that evening, students received another e-mail from Pickering. "As you now know, today there are two David Pickering's on the ONU campus," Pickering said in his e-mail. "The 'real' David Pickering (assuming this email is actually coming from me!) and the 'fake' David Pickering." Pickering explained in the e-mail that the imposter "used a 'spoof' website to send a note to undergraduate students. They used the text from an e-mail from another school closing in the past, and sent that, giving the impression that we were going to be closed today."

It has now been confirmed that Jill Bowling, wife of Olivet Nazarene University President Dr. John Bowling, was indeed, the "fake" David Pickering. Jill admitted that Olivet was overdue for a snow day, thus leading her to forge the e-mail to spend a day off with her husband and revel in the nostalgia of a snow day.

Jill explained the sentimental value she holds in snow days.

"I have loved snow days since grade school," she said. "Growing up in Ohio, we usually had several each winter... I was a freshman at Olivet for the snow day of all snow days. Probably the first snow day in ONU's history."

"It was January of 1967. Olivet was always known for never cancelling classes. Why? Everyone lived in a residence hall on campus - no apartments. Roads might be impassible but we could all get to class and Ludwig; all [professors] lived close by. No reason to close!"

"The evening before that snow day in '67, it began pouring snow and the wind quickly picked up. This was before Doppler radar and all the weather-predicting technology now available. The entire Chicago area was caught off-guard." Jill said the students were snowed in their dorms that day.

Jill also mentioned an incident on campus last year when classes were cancelled. "Classes were cancelled for the next day on the evening before," she recalled. "It was the evening of the Super Bowl. Dr. Bowling and I were with some students watching the game. When the 'snow day tomorrow' e-mail 'hit' the cell phones there was so much excitement in the room; it was fun to experience that moment with students. The next day a bunch of guys from The Oakes built a huge snowman in our yard - it will be their snow day to talk about for years to come."

"Remembering all this fun and excitement for students is what led me to think about recreating it by sending out a fake 'classes cancelled' e-mail. A little computer hacking later and it was done," Jill said with little sign of remorse. "Unfortunately, it was found out and the real David Pickering was able to overturn my secret attempt to spread joy throughout the Olivet campus," she added.

Dr. Bowling did not expect his wife to be behind the false alarm snow day whatsoever.

"I was shocked when I first realized that there was a 'fake' David Pickering who had cancelled classes," Bowling said. "I wondered, 'What else has this person done?' I authorized a full scale investigation and couldn't believe my ears when I was told, 'The fake message came from a computer at your house.' 'Impossible,' I thought. But then I remembered Jill asking me over and over if I thought there would be a snow day. I kept telling her no, but she kept pushing the idea. I finally said, 'The decision is up to David Pickering.' 'That's all I need to know,' she replied. The rest is history," he said.

Following the discovery of the investigation, Bowling decided to disconnect Wi-Fi connection in their home for the time-being, until Jill can be trusted to not tamper with the e-mail again.

President Dr. John Bowling and Mrs. Jill Bowling spent a sabbatical in London over Christmas. Returning mid-spring semester, Mrs. Bowling wanted to give the students the gift of a snowday, but was found out as the fake David Pickering.

Food critique:

See the face of God at Coyote Canyon

Jack White
Executive Editor

Forget everything you thought you knew about eating. Bourbonnais does not need a Chipotle, nor does it need a Five Guys or any other eating establishment, because we already have everything we will ever need wrapped into one building: Coyote Canyon.

In case you are not familiar with what will soon be your favorite restaurant, Coyote Canyon is a buffet of wide variety, conveniently located right off of Route 50. Upon entrance, you can find an eclectic collection of different foods, along with an equally impressive display of taxidermy animals, mostly their namesake: coyotes.

I had the euphoric opportunity to sit down and talk with owner and weekend manager of Coyote Canyon, Coyote Bill, to get a real feel for what Coyote Canyon is all about. I met this 6'10" 400lbs stew of a man in the break room over at the Canyon. He walked in wearing what he always wears: a Molly Hatchet shirt with a tweed blazer and one of those cowboy hats with a raccoon tail hanging off the back.

"I have always wanted to work in the restaurant business, but I never could pick which kind", Coyote Bill said through his mustache. "I always like the idea of fish restaurant, but I also deeply love steak. I thought, 'How do I mix those?' The answer was starin' me down like a jackrabbit in mating season: a buffet."

Coyote Bill is all about the customer, saying "I wanted to give people an affordable option, so I figured all you could eat for $12.99. There's also the Coyote Bill Special, just tell them you know Coyote Bill and I'll come out and have a few tater logs with you and yours. It'll still be $12.99"

Local Canyon enthusiast Dan Mitchell and Sydney Hunt never miss a fun packed Friday night at the Canyon. "There's nothing that tickles me more than suckin back 4 plate fulls of the 4th best ribs I've ever had, then attacking the sundae bar," Mitchell said. Hunt proudly proclaimed, "Seafood Friday at the Canyon has never made me sick!"

It is unfortunate that this article happened to fall on April fools because this is far from a joke. If ever there has truly been heaven on Earth, its been at Coyote Canyon. $12.99 has never been able to buy this much happiness before. So please stop by, have between 2 and 10 steaks, and tell'em Coyote Bill sent you.

Olivetians reassembled

Nathan DiCamillo
Life & Culture Editor

The voices of the Olivetians have been rekindled by our Nazarene brothers and sisters in California.

In a farewell concert, the Olivetians made one final attempt to refund their program by selling an exclusive mixtape online. The mixtape includes the Olivetians singing the third verse of hundreds of beloved and timeless church hymns. Hundreds of Nazarenes in California bought the mixtape.

"Our churches here in the Midwest just don't understand what it's like to have good traditional Nazarene music," one Olivetian, who wished to remain anonymous, said.

The president of Point Loma Nazarene University has invited the Olivetians to come and serve PLNU.

"Saved and sanctified. The Olivetians' mixtape brought so many of our students into church," President Loma said.

But the music group had to decline the president's offer. Now that the music group is no longer tied to Olivet's budget, they have decided to independently sign with Chris Tomlin as backup singers.

"Tomlin pitched the idea to us a few years ago, but it fell flat," another Olivetian said. "We couldn't do anything because we were under Olivet. In a way, being dismissed was one of the best things ONU could have done for us."

The singers look forward to earning substantial profits, considering Tomlin's prevalence on Shine.FM and in

PHOTO PROVIDED BY THE OLIVETIAN FACEBOOK

The Olivetians are considered the face of Olivet; however, the decision to disband the group was made because of financial cuts to every department. Left to right: Michael Reddy, Jessa Hendrick, Paul Davison, Ryan Marcotte, Allyn Franklin, Paul Dasilva, Caitlin Hacker, Brady Bettis, Ashley Nogoda, Steven Case, Lily Arroyo the Christian community.

"Tomlin knows how to write good melodies, we can do three-part harmonies," one Olivetian said. "It's so amazing."

The Christian artist and the ministry team look forward to adding upbeat bridges to traditional Nazarene hymns.

President of Student Development Wooly Webber said that Olivet is glad to see the Olivetians succeed.

"While we would like to see the singers stay and serve their college, we understand that some people like singing for Jesus, money, and fame more than just singing for Jesus," Webber said.

The singers believe that God is blessing them with fame and fortune after a long time of slaving away for the benefit of the university.

"You cannot join Christ in his reign until you've joined him in his suffering," another Olivetian said. "We've done a lot of suffering for Jesus."

President James Q. Boiling is sad to see the Olivetians not dedicating themselves to Olivet.

"Sometimes you have to climb mountains to get where you need to be. Mountains of struggle," Boiling said. "I had hoped that the Olivetians would have recognized the higher mission of the university and chosen to stay with the university after coming back."

PHOTO BY ALYSSA MARTINEZ

Students get engaged after relationship-focused chapel services compels them to speed up the dating process. These are just two of dozens of students following the logic of getting engaged and married in a day.

Revolutionizing dating

Students inspired by chapel speakers get engaged and married in a day, administration rejoices

Mariah Garratt

Advertisement Coordinator

The beginning of March marked the arrival of Olivet's highly anticipated relationship focused chapel services, inspiring even the most notorious "skippers" to rally together in Centennial Chapel. The speakers delivered two powerful messages, revolutionizing ONU dating culture with a beautifully simple idea: get engaged and married on the same day.

The novelty of this concept swept through the crowd with equal amounts of wonder and imagination. "I came into chapel that day with hesitations," junior Tori Elaine admitted. "I saw myself as too logical and level-headed to make a commitment like that. But the speakers story really did a work in my heart."

Elaine went on to detail how she has sought help from the Center of Student Successfulness, finding peace in their holistic singles counseling programs. Signs around campus asking "Not married? Not Engaged?" have attracted flocks of students hoping to find solace and advice, leading to their own happily ever after.

David Wright and Emily Rush heard the message loud and clear. While the pair had dated for well over eight months, they both claimed to have known from Day 1 they were created to be soul mates. "I knew it from the moment I first saw her at Jumpstart," Wright said fondly. "She was so intent on making her group's newspaper-roll tower stand up straight. I was completely taken with her."

After the speakers finished unquestionable call to action, David and Emily knew what they needed to do. A tear-filled proposal before the glow of the eternal flame was quickly followed by scores of phone calls to friends and family members.

Rush admitted that it took a while to convince most relatives that they were serious about their decision. However, she took comfort in the ecstatic support of her Williams floor community. "I just hope that we can serve as a role model for others," she expressed. "Like the Bible even says, 'There is no fear in love,' and I don't get how many couples seem to take that out of context."

Within hours, the Wright wedding came together, harbored under the roof of the beloved Kelly Prayer Chapel. Swarms of students rallied to show their support of the couples' bravery. The ceremony was officiated by ministry major Konnor IceBerg, who fully expressed his approval of the union.

Demand for married housing has also experienced a monumental rise, as couples anticipating upcoming one-day-engagement/marriage enthusiasts filled out housing forms for the Fall 2016 semester. In response, the residential life team is arranging to have all Stratford apartments transformed to become a married-only division.

As for the newlyweds, Rush expressed that housing and finances have become secondary to the infinite joys of married life. She expressed with happy tears in her eyes, "I'm just glad I found my very own Mr. Wright."

Chipotle no longer coming to Bourbonnais

Alyssa Franklin

Staff Writer

Although it was confirmed last fall that Chipotle coming to the area this summer, the famous Mexican fast-food chain is stopping plans and the building will instead be turned into a Beauty Salon.

When many found out that Lone Star Steakhouse & Saloon at 1605 Illinois Route 50, Bradley, in front of Target closed for business on Sept. 12, they figured this could be the place where Chipotle could be established, but there were other intentions in mind.

"Viewing the floor plans of Lone Star Steakhouse & Saloon, we felt it would only be right to create a Beauty Salon in place of the old restaurant. We took a good look at the blueprints and it's perfect. We are really happy with the decision," architect Bradley Stephenson said.

Vice President of Chicago's Suburban Retail Agency, Wes Mistof confirmed that rather than turning Lone Star into a Chipotle like everyone anticipates, residents may have to look elsewhere for the Mexican Grill.

"We took a good look at the blueprints and it's perfect. We are really happy with the decision," Stephenson said.

"We are keeping everyone in mind here when we created the beauty salon," Vice President of Chicago's Suburban Retail Agency Wes Mistof said. "Now instead of just another restaurant for people to eat, people are able to just focus on their appearance instead."

Founder, Co-CEO, and Chairman of Chipotle Mexican Grill Steve Ells explained that though they are hoping to expand their chain in the near future, they are unable to due to recent bad press.

"With the E-Coli outbreak earlier this year, we feel that we should put a halt on the expansion of our chain. It is for the greater good; we care about college students and their health."

Anticipating students seem to feel differently about the decision.

Fifth year senior Lynn Frank said,

"I have attended Olivet for literally five years and each year people have told me that we would get a Chipotle. Each year I got my hopes up and each year I was let down."

Frank said she refuses to graduate until she gets to eat a locally bought Chipotle burrito while hammocking in the Weber lawn.

"We have a Great Clips and Walmart, what more do we need for beauty. I think that we need to get over ourselves and what the news says about Chipotle and just give the people what they want. In my case, I want a burrito with chicken, brown beans, corn, sour cream, lettuce, cheese and guacamole," freshman David Bronco said.

Mistof responds to the disagreement uproar from Olivet students and local residents.

"Many may not agree with the decision to create a beauty salon, but in the long run, it is what we believe is best realistically. We hope they will be able to learn to love the decision," Mistof said.

Instagram

47 posts476k
followers3
following

✓ FOLLOWING

Dr. John Bowling President of Olivet Nazarene University
It's not a wig. @POONU

Hello from the other side. #BowlingsTakeBritain

I've climbed mountains higher than this.

Long live my queen. #datenight #wcw @FLOONU

Need an umbrella because greatness keeps raining on me. #singingintherain

PHOTO BY ANGEL GAIKWAD

'Big Jack's Dirty News'

Jack White
Executive Editor

Dear readers,

There is not a lot to say about former executive editor Grace King, not in a positive light at least. How someone so underqualified was able to have this position for so long is an absolute mystery to me, but today we no longer have to live on a campus where the news is executive edited by some one with such a loose grasp on what journalism is.

I, Jack White, am here for a more honest, hard hitting and impactful run here at The GlimmerGlass. I in no way want to belittle Ms. King or the work she did during her time here, but I am sure for you as readers, it will be great to have an editor who is actually passionate about the truth instead of her own self image. It just makes me sad that it took such a huge scandal to dethrone such an incompetent leader.

However, it is a new day. I want to talk about the change I'll be bringing. I by no means want to speak ill of Grace or the way she treated those below her. I don't want to talk about the dozens of times I had to console a weeping Nathan DiCamillo because Ms. King made him feel inadequate and unimportant to the paper.

I am not here to talk about the demands from her staff to get a new executive editor since her second week on the job. It is not my place to bring up all the hard hitting articles that Ms. King turned away because they "weren't exactly what she was going for" or "didn't have enough to do with her."

This huge scandal that Ms. King was involved in finally made the higher ups open their eyes to the horrible corruption that she had been orchestrating through her entire tenure. However, I have been asked not to talk on this scandal or how Ms. King let down a whole student body in ways they did not imagine possible. As a campus mourns, I will try my best to bring you the news at a much higher quality than you have come to expect.

I hope part of this article doesn't seem like I am taking personal shots at Grace, that is not my intention at all. There was a time I had a deep respect for Grace, and even considered her a friend, and let me tell you being her friend was no picnic either.

Now I will not go as far as others on her staff and call her "the most self seeking person I have ever met," but she definitely is not the least self-seeking person I've ever met, she isn't even in my top 100 least self seeking people. Humility is the furthest thing from her mind. I have never seen someone less caring. If I was a friend of Grace's, I would be horrified to see how she treats her enemies.

Please do not take a word of this as me bashing Ms. King or her time here. I just want to let you know things will be different with me, Jack White, serving as your editor.

Your friend, your source of news,
Jack L. White

'Anything goes'

New open house policy gives resident assistants a break

Evan Sherar
Staff Writer

Cries of sweet freedom could be heard from students in Chapel Wednesday morning as University President Dr. James Q. Boiling announced a monumental decision made by the Administrative Council at a meeting Tuesday night. "Out of an interest in alleviating some of the stress associated with being a [resident assistant], we've decided to revise open-house policies across the board," Boiling said.

The Administrative Council decided students will not be disciplined by the University for any activities which take place in their dorm rooms or apartments during open house. This policy takes effect if and only if the door of the students' dorm room or apartment remains three quarters of the way open.

In turn, this means that the presence of resident assistant (RA) or designated monitors will no longer be required during open house. Around campus, the new decision is being summarized affectionately as an "anything goes" policy.

Council member Donald Prairie specifically rejected this terminology. "It's not that 'anything goes.' Every rule that was in place before is still in effect. The difference is that now Olivet will no longer be enforcing them as

I can literally do whatever I want now! ...All I have to do is leave my door open and it's home free. - Larry Underhill strictly," he said.

Students have a very different take. "I can literally do whatever I want now! I finally feel like I'm being treated like an adult," freshman Larry Underhill said. "All I have to do is leave my door open and it's home free."

"I definitely feel like these changes give students a better sense of independence," Williams RA junior Sharon Johnson said. "Definitely there is a little bit of a concern about Olivet's Christian community being at risk, but over all I'm not too worried. I have a lot of faith in our residents to continue to behave themselves like Jesus would want them too."

Despite Johnson's optimism, reports about Thursday evening's open house in the Stratford apartments have been alarming to many on campus. "They had a freaking keg. That is just not good," a concerned senior Jenna Pruett said. "And this was just the first night of this new 'anything goes' garbage. What's next? Heroine? Wild sex orgies?"

However the rest of the student body remains very content with the changes. "My boyfriend and I can make out in his apartment while watching Netflix and we never have to feel ashamed for it," senior Olivia Goodrich said, claiming that this party was an isolated incident.

"Yeah, you have those few people who do stuff they shouldn't, but the vast majority of people do the right thing," Goodrich continued. "Personally, there was never any reason Olivet should have been so worried about us students. We're Christians. We don't sin."

Goodrich's observations have thus far held true. So far, the party that was held Wednesday night in only two neighboring apartments has not become a campus-wide norm. Many students seem to link this phenomena to the fact that Olivet students just don't care to break the rules.

"By and large, our students are just outstanding citizens who love Jesus way too much to mess with that other stuff," Stratford RD Daniel Borris said. "Really, this new rule is for the RA's more than anything. In the past we've just put way too much pressure on them, and Olivet wants to change that so they're not so miserable all the time."

"Honestly, it is so awesome to be able to just chill without having to worry about filling out accountability reports," Chapman RA junior Ron Stanley said. "My guys are really top notch guys. I have complete trust that they're not going to do stuff they shouldn't with girls over."

Hills Hall RA sophomore Jack Stewart said, "It's funny. My guys have started calling Dr. Boiling 'Dr. Bro-ling' because they feel like he's such a bro coming in clutch with these new policies."

"We want our RA's to be able to climb mountains of success, not be crushed under mountains of stress," Dr. Boiling said Wednesday in Chapel. He also used this opportunity to give a shameless plug for his book "Shaking the Climb," which records his reflections on his journey to the top of Mt. Kilimanjaro. Copies can be found in the Olivet Bookstore for just $38.50.

Playing like Jesus

Double-dribble Jesus inspires new policy

Kelli Poole
Staff Writer

Game play is going to change big-time for the Olivet basketball teams' next seasons. According to the Olivet Athletic Department, effective at the start of the 2016-2017 season, a double-dribble policy will be implemented.

The double-dribble policy states that "all Olivet players must only dribble with both hands" and that "any single-handed dribbling will result in the player being pulled from the game."

The idea for the policy came from Jesus himself.

"I don't want to say it was divine revelation," Men's Basketball Head Coach B. E. Aggressive said, "but it was definitely God-inspired." Aggressive was walking to chapel and he happened to pass by the Double-Dribble statue. "I saw his arms holding the world like that and I suddenly realized that we've been doing it wrong this whole time. We have to follow Jesus' example."

Women's Head Basketball Coach Jumissa Freethrow is excited about the change, "Dribbling with two hands will actually give the players more control over the ball," she said. "It will make our Lady Tigers even better than they already are." She paused before adding, "Which I didn't think was possible."

Not everyone is excited about the change. However, junior postman Lay Upshot said, "Dribbling with two hands is the dumbest idea ever. We will be forced to dribble in front of us instead of at our side and we'll do nothing but trip over the ball and lose control of it all the time."

Upshot expressed his concerns about the policy messing up his chances at going professional. "They are implementing this during my senior year. How am I ever going to impress any national teams if I am out there fumbling around and making a fool out of myself, all because my school decided that one-handed dribbling was no longer glorifying to God?"

Sophomore guard Jada Rimshot is so upset about the new policy that she said that she is going to transfer to another school. "MidAmerica Nazarene University just won the NAIA national championship. Maybe I'll go there," she said.

Upshot said that he is going to start a strike against the policy and encourages any students who want to help him to join in. "We have to fight this thing," he said. "It will ruin Olivet's basketball program."

The Athletic Department is not concerned about player protests, though. The department released a statement saying, "We tore our clothes when we first heard that we had been playing basketball in a way that did not honor God. We believe that this change is for the betterment of both our players and our Christ-like image." The statement went on to say that any player wishing to take up a grievance can take it up with God.

"The motto here at Olivet is 'Education with a Christian Purpose,'" Aggressive said. "Christlikeness comes with being a Christian. So we—the other coaches and I—figured that if we have a statue of Jesus that looks like he's double-dribbling, then we, as a Christian campus, need to reflect that image. If Jesus double-dribbles, so should we."

Athletic Department introduces Boxing

MacKenzie Mahaffey
Staff Writer

The Athletic Department is very excited to announce the beginning of a new sport at Olivet. After years of consideration, Athletic Director Nary Gewsome decided it was time to bring what has been missing from the athletic department. America's favorite sport, boxing, will begin in the fall of 2016.

"I've always wanted boxing to be a part of Olivet. I'm a huge fan of the Rocky movies, and after watching the newest movie, 'Creed,' I knew it was a sign," Gewsome said.

The hesitation for adding boxing came from the nature of the Olivet community. However, after the school officially allowed dancing on campus, Gewsome took the opportunity to raise the idea of boxing.

"At first I was not sure if I wanted fighting to be an element to this university. Violence is not accepted, but after researching the sport of boxing, mostly by watching the Rocky movies, I have realized that it will add a lot of character to our athletic department," University President Dr. Dowling said.

While the decision was hard to make, Gewsome knew exactly who to contact to request for them to join the boxing team. After seeing the spectacular fighting technique performed in West Side Story, Gewsome immediately emailed the cast.

His first preference was to recruit the Jet boys, but he soon discovered that majority of them would be graduating before the fall, so he moved on to his last resort, the Sharks.

One of the Shark boys said, "I am beyond excited to have been asked to join the new boxing team at Olivet. It will be great to be on the first team, and make history for the university. I am most excited about the outfits though."

The money that was originally going toward making a new freshmen girls dorm will fund the boxing team. The administration of the university feels as though the boxing team will be a better investment, and is much more of a priority at the current time.

A new boxing ring will be placed in the Perry Center over the summer, to supply the boxing team with substantial practice facilities. The athletic department will also provide gloves, uniforms, and other necessary supplies.

Champion professional boxer, Manny Pacquiao once said, "Boxing is a sport. We allow each other to hit each other, but I'm not treating my opponent like my enemy. We're doing a job to entertain people."

This quote reassured Gewsome's decision to involve young men from the theatre department into the new boxing program.

To find out how to become involved in the new boxing program, contact Gewsome or watch all the Rocky movies.

Wrestling team goes to national championship

Sam Nichols
Staff Writer

On May 2, 2016, Olivet's wrestling team received their ticket to the InterCollegiate Athletic Association of America (ICAAA) National Championships, the first in school history to do so.

It had been a long, hard season for Olivet's wrestling team, losing six of their nine meets in Athletic Association of Chicagoland Colleges (AACC) regular season meets. Several wrestlers were injured to start the season, including seniors Chance Hardwood and Jesus Waterwalker and juniors Chad Tastle and Jackson Ripper. Hardwood and Waterwalker were injured in an altercation with an equipment manager in the weight room, both broke their hands in the incident.

"I was extremely disappointed in our players regarding their dispute," Head Coach Gel Mibson said. "Olivet Nazarene University has much higher standards than that. We should be ashamed of ourselves regarding that incident. One of the biggest consequences of not having them available for matches was that it affected our record. Without those four upperclassmen, we did not win a lot of matches that we should have. But I think it was a good learning experience for our younger wrestlers, in more ways than one."

Tastle and Ripper were suspended from team play following a steroid bust involving human growth hormone. However, they were not expelled from the school because of their cooperation with university and local authorities.

"We knew what we were doing was wrong," Tastle said. "Jack and I came forward to Coach Mibson with the truth. He was pretty disappointed in us, but our honesty impressed him. And since this was our first break in school policy, we were only suspended for nine regular season meets. I'm very thankful our punishment wasn't worse."

They played like possessed men. Nothing was going to stand in their way. Their intensity and technique was ridiculous. - Shaun Doling

Going into the AACC conference tournament, Olivet was the seventh seed in the eight-team pool; and they would have to face University of Canada at Blastville (UCB) in the first round. However, with the Olivet upperclassmen recovered from their injuries they were available to compete again. With their upperclassmen back in the lineup, the Tigers made quick work of UCB winning five out of five matches without surrendering a single point.

"I was amazed to see our seniors play like that," sophomore wrestler Shaun Doling said. "They played like possessed men. Nothing was going to stand in their way. Their intensity and technique was ridiculous. I was absolutely blown away."

The AACC semi-finals was against one of the few teams that the Tigers had actually beaten during the regular season, Tott Sceeters College (TSC). It was actually a more difficult match than expected for the Tigers as Ripper was unable to defeat his opponent. However, a surprisingly strong performance by Doling pushed the Tigers past TSC.

In the conference championship, ONU played four-time defending national champion, Green Mountain State University (GMSU). During the one regular season meet they had against GMSU, Olivet had been demolished in all five of the individual matches. However, the Tigers were not about to go down without a fight this time.

The first two matches were dominated by GMSU, who defeated Ripper and Waterwalker in their respective matchups; however, Doling had a fantastic victory over last year's ICAAA National Player of the Year, Wruce Bayne. He put the ICAAA legend in a rare two-griped backside chokehold, submitting the senior who had not lost a match since his freshman year.

Tastle quickly submitted his opponent, tying the score at two points apiece. In the final round, Hardwood finished off the match by pinning his opponent in a double-rounded frontal leg hold. When the ref declared the point for ONU, the crowd went wild as they realized that their Cinderella Tigers was going to the national championship.

"It's an amazing accomplishment for our program," Mibson said. "I was so proud of our guys considering the way the season has gone. It is truly a testament to their character and how anyone can fight back no matter what your disadvantage is. It'll give our program more exposure."

If you see any of the wrestlers on campus make sure to congratulate them and wish them luck on their trip to the National Championship on May 16.

The GlimmerGlass is now taking applications for Editors!

Are you a photographer or graphic designer looking to build your portfolio? Work for the GlimmerGlass!

Email: glimmerglass@olivet.edu

ILLUSTRATION BY JONAH SUNDERLAND

New boxing and wrestling facility opening

Brandon Grossi
Staff Writer

After years of requests from the residents of Chapman Hall, a new boxing and wrestling facility has opened on the campus of Olivet Nazarene University. The Pickering Fight House, named after esteemed Vice President David Pickering, is located in Brandenburg Gallery in the basement of Larsen and attracts large crowds every week.

To start the festivities every Friday night, attendees lay down copies of The GlimmerGlass all over the walls and floor to soak up blood. "That's all it's really good for, after all," freshman Emily Henderson said.

Next, the students gather around and take nearly half an hour to decide which one of them is the "real David Pickering." Once one person is chosen to be David Pickering for the night, he or she gets to sit atop a make shift throne on the far side of the room made of the priceless paintings that the students find in classrooms nearby.

After this, the students and faculty attending split into two groups on either side of the room while "David Pickering" turns on some slow jazz to get everybody in the mood. Much like a middle school dance, there is some awkward staring and giggling until that magic moment when a representative of each side nervously meets in the center of the room. The couple smiles at each other, extend hands, proceeding, in Christian love, to punch each other with everything they've got.

Contrary to popular belief, there really are no rules at the Pickering Fight House. Boxing, Wrestling, Judo, Chess, Cosplaying, Karate, and Merengue are all incorporated once the two sides rush at each other.

"I just love how freeing the environment is," freshman Kaitlin Anderson said. "I get to be true to myself. If I want to punch someone in the face, I do it. If I want to crush someone's self-confidence by dominating them in a staring contest, I can do that too."

Junior Rachel Tobey agreed. "It's a wonderful way to get out aggression. One time I snuck in a pony and rode it into battle while whacking people with my overpriced Spanish textbooks. It just felt good to get it all out, y'know?" Tobey said.

Although the Pickering Fight House is a smashing hit, no one really knows who started it. "I've never heard anything about a 'Fight house' named after me," said Pickering, who was horrified to learn of the proceedings. "We need to shut this thing down before someone's seriously injured."

So perhaps the Pickering Fight House won't survive much longer at Olivet, but freshman Curtis Dayton looks at the situation with optimism.

"Yeah, it's probably going to be shut down, but I'm always going to cherish the memories I've made here," said Dayton with tears in his eyes. "Like a flower blooming in the desert, the Pickering Fight House was a beautiful phenomenon, a paradox of love and joy and bloodlust, the likes of which the campus shall never be blessed with again."

Budget cuts dissolve sports teams

Sarah Ortman
Staff Writer

Budget cuts have hit Olivet Nazarene University hard this year. The money supply to every department has decreased dramatically. The athletic department has felt these cuts in the biggest way possible. With the budget cuts being made, there will be few sports teams left at Olivet.

The sports teams still being funded will be: wrestling, boxing, corn hole, slacklining and women's golf.

Athletic Director Barry Bell said, "I am sad about these financial decisions made by Olivet, but I think it will be good for these five sports. Their hard work will finally be seen, and they will receive the credit they deserve for being the best sports, and now only sports on campus."

Athletes in other sports are now worried about how they will continue their education here at Olivet. Their scholarships have been taken away and they will now have to find another way to pay for their education.

"Now, all athletes need to find jobs and that is not fair. We all had our sport and to us those were are jobs. I just do not understand why Olivet would completely cut funding to their sports teams," women's basketball team captain Beth Clark said.

Job hunting has begun by many former athletes on campus and it is a tight race. Many jobs are already taken by non-athlete students, so the minimal jobs left are being snatched up quickly.

The athletes in the five sports that are staying on campus are excited that they get to continue their athletic careers. The wrestling team has many big tournaments coming up, and they were worried they would not be able to bring the big titles home to Olivet if their team were to get cut.

Wrestling team captain Derek Fields said, "I am beyond excited to continue my wrestling career here at Olivet. I am so happy the financial department finally saw how great of a wrestling program we have and are going to continue to fund our team."

The boxing team is in the same boat. They have many big matches headed their way and they need to maintain focus going into those events.

"The team is very important to me, but also important to the boys. They have truly become a family and I am happy that the financial department sees that. We were worried about our team being cut, but we still need to keep our eyes on the prize no matter what happened," head coach Frank Gates said.

The men and women's corn hole teams are surprisingly one of the best sports here on campus. The team competes in singles and doubles play. In doubles play the teams can be both males, both females, or one male and one female. This is the only team that has this diversity on campus. They are happy it is recognized.

"I am sad to see the other sports go, but I am more than excited to continue doing the sport I love," junior Frank Taylor said. "I feel, the corn hole team is very underappreciated even though we have brought big titles back to Olivet. With few sports teams left, I hope to have more of a crowd at our next corn hole competition."

The slacklining team is a new addition to the Olivet athletic family, but it is one many students come to watch.

Head athletic financial advisor John Smith said, "I really enjoy watching the slacklining team, so I decided it would be in my best interest to keep the team and the entertainment. They have created a lot of revenue for the university, so I felt this team was a need to keep here on campus."

The slacklining team has competed in many competitions already against some of the best universities in the nation. They have done well and held their own for only being a team on campus for five months. They hope to grow as a team and entertain even more Olivet students.

The women's golf team is the last team to not receive any cuts, and the coach could not be more thrilled.

Head coach of the women's golf team Robert Mills said, "These girls have worked hard for so many years and I am so happy they are finally getting the recognition they deserve. We have the best 13 women on campus on this team."

The Tigers have been working hard to bring the Olivet students the best season yet. They will stop at nothing to show the financial department that they have made the right decision.

The financial cuts have been hard for everyone, but if we keep moving forward and support our five sports teams, they will be unstoppable.

Commentary: Family Destroying American Baseball

Connor Pestka

Staff Writer

Springtime arrives, and with the birds in the trees comes the sweet, sweet sound of balls being beaten with large metal rods. Yes, baseball's spring training has begun, but bringing with it the beginning of a swirling controversy that is raging throughout the country.

Adam LaRoche, a veteran designated hitter for the Chicago White Sox, has announced his retirement from the game of baseball. His reason: Being told to his son cannot be in the clubhouse every day. Now this is just the kind of ridiculous behavior that comes to rule the sports realm. It's not enough that professional athletes are constantly using steroids, abusing drugs, impregnating multiple women at the same time (Landon Collins), or throwing games for money (Paul Crewe), now these antics have lead to this: trying to get extra family time on the field. Where will it end?

The trouble arose after last season, when Drake LaRoche, Adam's 14-year-old son, was a constant presence in the Sox' Locker Room. After a less than stellar performance, the organization has decided that a refocus is needed for this season. One of those issues was to restrict time when Drake would be in the locker room. LaRoche Sr, in one of the hissy fits that makes sports more and more like reality television, filed his paperwork for resignation.

This scandal is rocking the sports world, with huge implications. Now termed by the media as "Locker-Gate" resignations and clearing of the front office is expected to come down in the following months. Even presidential candidates have seen fit to make remarks from the campaign trail.

"When I was in the White House, I never took my child to work. I made the tough call, and forced her to spend her days in the pool and at the bowling alley down the hall. I often enjoyed emailing her though," President Donald Trump said. "We just need to build a wall around the locker room, and kick 'em all out."

What is the world coming to when people who are looked to as role models and examples become distracted from devoting every second of every minute of every hour of every day manically pursuing larger digits on the stat sheet, by trying to spend time with their young and impressionable children in the clubhouse? Seriously, the level of nonsense that player's try to get away these days are just flabbergasting. I expect higher standards from athletes in the future.

If you feel the same way, be sure to show your support on social media. LaRoche has created the trending hashtag #familyfirst. Opponents of his attitudes and actions have trended the hashtag: #keepthekidsofthelockerroombecauseyou're supposed to be a freakin' good baseball player playing professional good lord try to get your life together more and stop being ridiculous no kids needed in the locker room.