Beyerlein was burned by exploding igniting fluid Nov. 12, 1958, while lighting hickory wood in an indoor barbecue pit in the basement of the Azzarelli home. ## Talks, Visits Postpone Doomsday

It is now 20 years since the August of 1939 when the Nazi-Soviet pact prepared the last groundwork for World War II. It was in August of 1914 that World War I started.

This month, this year the dark clouds of menacing war do not hang low over us. Some can be seen lingering on the horizon, but they seem almost stationary.

This time we suffer international tensions which are as acute as those which led to the two great conflicts. Yet we also have upon us restraints against precipitate action which did not exist then.

Chief among these are the horrifying nuclear weapons, possessed by both sides, which appear to promise a war with no winners. Even the wildest aggressor wants to preserve something more than radioactive rubble.

Preparations there are, again, in this August of 1959. But now they are for a unique exchange of visits between the President of the United States and the premier of the Soviet Union, the great adversary.

No one dares be brightly hopeful that these personal meetings will in fact ease this century's third big cycle of tension. Too often before, hopes have been lifted, only to be plunged into blackness.

Nevertheless, the simple fact that these approaches are to take place indicates, among other things, that both sides understand the gravity of the peril that dangles over mankind this time.

Talk, even at the highest level, may prove futile. Futility, however, needs careful defining in this tense world. Negotiation which produces no solution is surely fruitless. But is talk wholly futile when it postpones the dread action of a nuclear war?

Better to talk around the clock 365 days of the year than to unleash the obliterating, contaminating force now at the fingertips of the contenders in the present struggle for world power.

Citizens Groups Help The Schools

The schools of this nation will only be as good as the citizens of the nation want them to be.

With the schools in the Kankakee area about to open, it is timely to note that the interest of the American people in the schools has grown significantly. Today citizens throughout the country have joined together to work out local solutions to problems facing the schools.

Typical of this sort of activity has been the study conducted by the Citizens Advisory Council in the Bradley Elementary School District. This group has surveyed the needs of the district, considered methods of solution and weighed the possibilities of financing issues to correct any problems.

Actually this year marks the 10th anniversary of the National Citizens Commission for Public Schools which was founded to arouse interest in the schools and help convert that interest into action.

There were 17 citizens' committees in the country back 10 years ago; today there are between 15,000 and 18,000, with 41 of them working at the state level to improve the education our young are getting.

These local committees, made up of all of the people-next-door, have helped pass bond issues, get and keep good teachers, study the curriculum, keep the community informed of what goes on in their schools. Without this volunteer effort on the part of millions of ordinary citizens, our schools would be in serious trouble.

Nobody thought up a good name for this century yet. But, in the light of some of these school activities, it might well be called the Century of the Citizen.

Youth Can Save Family Farm

A Department of Agriculture survey dispelled the idea that America's farm lands are being concentrated in the hands of big farmers and corporations. It found instead that the husband and wife farm still dominates American agriculture in the ten Great Plains states, where 47 per cent of the farm and ranch land in the country is located.

Husband and wife own either jointly or separately 49 per cent of the farm and ranch land in the ten states, partnerships other than husband and wife 20 per cent and corporations 8 per cent, with the rest held by individuals who were retired or worked the land in addition to other occupations.

Thus the family farm was upheld as the basis of American agriculture. But there was one warning note. Half the owners are between 45 and 64 and nearly 30 per cent are 65 or older. Youth must discover the joys of farming if the family farm is to persist in America.

Voice Of The People

ST. ANNE—I would like to voice that I ever got such a quick reply for my appreciation to the Kankakee Journal. I received both the River Patrol, through your column, several copies by return mail. For me, it was a great help and I am thankful and have passed them on to relatives that do quite a bit of boating and now it will give them a chance to make and not enough to really form an opinion. I heard enough that I was interested in getting a copy of the regulation that could be had by anybody contacting the police department. So I wrote to them and carelessly by a young fellow who asked them if it would be possible for them to mail me the regulation. So after such things as that, one slip on boating and you have a fine on the river. To be frank, I don't like the patrol on the river.

Jacoby On Bridge

Partner Has Four Choices

North's second bid of two trump gave South four choices. He could pass with a minimum and neutral trump and poor spades, he could bid three spades with a minimum and good spades, he could bid four spades or three trump with a good trump.

With 16 points South was one point above the Jacoby 15 point minimum and in addition he held two ten spots. He also held three trumps with two honors but decided that the best play for game would be in no-trump.

It was the correct decision. He might have had four spades if the defense allowed it but with good defense he would have to lose four tricks and go down one.

On the other hand, there was no defense at all against three no-trump. He simply won the opening bid in his own hand and went after the game suit. This gave him nine of the easiest tricks possible.

The People Spoke In Labor Bill Vote

Last Friday by a vote of 303-124 the House passed the Landrum-Griffin labor reform bill. But the key vote was the day before when the House decided, 239-201, to substitute the Landrum-Griffin bill for the committee on education and labor. That was the real test whether we were to have a mere re-statement of the status quo or a new law which would deal effectively with corruption.

The adoption of the Landrum-Griffin bill was a victory for the American people, and particularly for the individual workman. It was a victory, not easily won, for the "in" and "out" union member. It was a victory for the entire labor union movement over gangsters and racketeers who have been infiltrating into the union.

During the consideration of the legislation the halls of Congress were overrun with union officials and workers. The Landrum-Griffin bill, at the same time, members of Congress were receiving letters from the rank-and-file union members urging its adoption. It may be truly said that the end result was the voice of the many and not a selfish few.

The people spoke, the House heard, and acted in compliance to their wishes.

IT WAS THE voice of the people

No Early Crisis Seen In Construction

NEW YORK (AP)—The nation's construction industry is maintaining the pace of the recovery—rebuilding projects and new construction are being delayed by the steel strike. But the majority of builders and their suppliers say they either have all the steel they need for current projects or have supplies good for one to four months more.

Associated Press reporters, however, reveals wide variations in supplies among firms and a growing fear that some special steel products may run out of stock in the near future.

Further, if any person using a boat would take the suggestions made in the regulation slip as well as the few laws that can be enforced by the patrol, they could find them of most importance not only on the Kankakee river but any place they would use their boat. I would advise anybody that has a boat to secure a copy, and if they don't memorize the regulations to tack them up in a handy spot on their boat.

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME

BOURBONNAIS—Last night my husband and I spent two hours in the emergency waiting room. Our five-year-old son had a bad blow which left a cut below his eye. The doctor "on call" could not be reached. Another doctor who arrived in the next hour would not attend to the boy.

Finally, after two hours of waiting a doctor was contacted. What happened in the hallway for over 20 minutes, with no answer. This could have been more serious.

Our family has had similar experiences with this hospital. I myself know what a good hospital is, having lived in Kankakee only five years. These persons that are responsible for this community cannot be thanked enough.

If there is "freedom of the press" let it be shown now.

Executive Privilege

Much of the trouble that Sen. Joe McCarthy got into arose from his rejection of the concept of executive privilege—that is the right of any agency or bureau of the executive branch of government to withhold from Congress, the press and the people any information which would be injurious to the national defense or the public interest. The famous "Zwicker case" is in point. McCarthy always contended that Gen. Ralph Zwicker had given information to an investigator which he, the general, refused to give in public and which had given to the committee employees.

This question of executive privilege constantly arises when officials of the government testify before congressional committees, and is now again raised in relation to the refusal of James W. Riddleberger, director of the International Cooperation Administration to provide a congressional committee with information it required of him. Riddleberger heads the body that manages the foreign aid program. The House subcommittee on government operations desired the information in the public interest. Riddleberger apparently withheld it on the grounds of executive privilege.

PERHAPS THE LAWYERS WHOM I have queried on this subject are not as well-informed as the bureaucrats who operate the government machine in Washington but they could provide me with no law concerning executive privilege.

True, ours is a tripartite form of government and each branch is independent of the other, except as the Constitution provides checks and balances. However, the money power is vested in Congress. All appropriations bills arise in Congress and must be passed by Congress. In fact, an appropriation bill arises in the House of Representatives. Naturally, without adequate information concerning receipts and expenditures, it is impossible for Congress to pass a proper measure concerning an expenditure. The foreign aid program is an expenditure, without an iota of information of this kind from Congress. There can be no executive privilege concerning the expenditure of public money.

V. M. Newton Jr., Tampa, Fla., newspaper managing editor, raised this question in a letter to the aforesaid Riddleberger. This paragraph in his letter is pertinent: "I have a question on this subject. I cannot put any credence in your statement that turning this information over to the Congress 'would not be in the public interest.' I think that it is a matter for the Congress, the American people's representatives, to decide. Your argument, of course, is based on the ancient dictatorial philosophy that the people should be satisfied with whatever information their rulers deem they should have. If we American citizens ever agree to such a bureaucratic philosophy in Washington, then we dig the grave for the free American government."

There can be little question but that the bureaucrats find the doctrine of executive privilege very useful. It is the privilege of the few to cover their mistakes. But it is the business of Congress and the people to discover the mistakes of the bureaucrats and to discover them as early as possible. It is the duty of the people to throw them out of office; if they are appointed officials, a congressional committee can hold them in contempt of Congress.

THE BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION is a part of the executive branch of government. It is the business of Congress and the people to discover the mistakes of the bureaucrats and to discover them as early as possible. It is the duty of the people to throw them out of office; if they are appointed officials, a congressional committee can hold them in contempt of Congress.

As an American citizen and an editor in the free American press, I cannot put any credence in your statement that turning this information over to the Congress "would not be in the public interest." I think that it is a matter for the Congress, the American people's representatives, to decide. ## Summit Confusion

WASHINGTON (NEA)—President Eisenhower's much-discussed "off the record" dinners for selected news reporters have turned up two conflicting stories Monday night.

On Aug. 1, the story given top priority by the news media was that the always reliable New York Times—carried this headline:

Chance for Talks At Summit In 1959

On July 27—same paper and place—the earlier headline was: President Is Writing Off Chance of Summit

Puzzled newspaper readers who remember the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia to achieve this.

BY THE TIME the "off the record" dinner was held on Monday, Aug. 1, not even the pretense of revealing it "on the highest authority" was left.

The Russians hadn't backed down at Geneva one inch. But now it could be written by a few of the best reporters in the world that the President would not "mortgage his time" this fall. It was amazing the way all the stories came up with this same phrase about "mortgaging time." What a coincidence.

To anyone able to add up three, it was obvious that the President had been having another press dinner.

THE REPORTERS present had been told that the President had fed a White House lunch, along with his fish. They must have dutifully gone out and rung it up. The President's supper, as good reporters must do, they had to report. The Unnamed Spokesman—Mr. U.S. News—said that the President had not polled that he was surprised his first dinner had made such big news.

So for the second one, July 27, the President had had a dinner with a few reporters. There were to be no stories. But the correspondents could use what he told them at "background."

This turned up between commas.

O.K. An Extra $5,000 For Bradley Streets

A $5,000 supplemental appropriation of motor fuel tax money for arterial street maintenance work in Bradley was approved by the board of trustees Monday night.

Howard Schwarz, village engineer and county superintendent of highways, was present to inform the board that the lowest bid received for the work was $21,011.22 from Triangle Construction Co., Inc., of Chicago.

Schuyler avenue and Liberty and Jefferson streets.

OTHER BUSINESS handled by the board Monday night included the village does not now heat with gas, and would have to convert to a gas system.

Introducing the village attorneys to write another letter to the state to try and get the village out of the village of gas (price 9 cents) for each village resident, giving the village about $700 worth of free fuel per heating season. But the village does not now heat with gas, and would have to convert to a gas system.

A complaint was registered by Donald Gereau, superintendent of the street and alley department, that the village attorneys were not getting their checks last week. It was pointed out that Jerry Power, village president, had been checking the checks in advance before leaving on vacation, but it is due back again this week.

Trustees decided the next regular meeting of the board would be on Sept. 1, because the date it should be held, Sept. 1, is Labor Day.

Lawyers Will Buy Machine On Their Own

The firm of Bissonette and Nutting, attorneys for the village of Bradley, has eliminated one of the more spurs between the board of trustees and William Barwegen, village president.

The bone of contention was the purchase of a photostat copying machine by the attorneys and the village, with the attorneys paying one-third the cost and the village two-thirds.

Maynard Bissonette informed the board Monday night that rather than go through the joint purchase, and run the risk of public condemnation, his firm was going to purchase the machine on its own. He said if the village wanted any photostat copies, it could charge the village the usual commercial rates.

THE MACHINE had been recommended by the law firm as a means of executing measures in village ordinances, and indexing all contracts and documents.

It was determined the cost of copying and indexing would be considerably less if the machine was purchased, rather than having the work done by a commercial copying company.

The cost of the machine was to be reduced by having the attorneys pay one-third the cost, and the village two-thirds. It was a share in the purchase, giving the village the use of the machine for its private business. It was to be kept in the office.

However, Barwegen vetoed the proposed joint purchase at the July 26 meeting of the board. Trustees overrode the veto, but Bissonette said Monday night that his firm would rather own the machine entirely by itself, thus avoiding any possible conflicts.

Barwegen listed four reasons for his veto, which can be summarized as, "contrary to good judgment of the use of village money for private business," "the village is not to use village money to be used for private business," "the village is not to use village money to be used for private business," "the village is not to use village money to be used for private business."

Barwegen said the machine was to be used for private business, and the village was not to use village money for private business. He said the machine was to be used for private business, and the village was not to use village money for private business.

C Baggageman Has No Thoughts About Retiring After 67 Years

And, he's not even thinking of retiring. "I plan to work until I'm 100," John George, 82, told a reporter last week. "That's when I'll think about retiring."

Small game, George loads and aims his mauls on a run here in Chicago and Centralia. He is in Chicago and makes the heavy days of the season. His hobby is inventing—mostly devices in the field of railroad safety devices. George's patents include a railroad brakeman's lantern with a red and orange light and a warning flare designed to keep 11.30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Police said the southeast-bound motorcycle collided with a northbound sedan driven by John D. Davis, 45, 67 N. Wildwood Ave., who was heading west onto Broadmead Blvd.

The leg guard of the motorcycle caught on the bumper of the car and threw Marsh to the pavement. Marsh said he did not appear to be seriously injured.

Foreign Visitors Like U.S.

Kankakee area hospitality is currently being extended to two sets of visitors from abroad. Guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis DuVoisin of 459 N. Vassar Ave., Bourbonnais, are two women from Switzerland, Mrs. George Charbon from the city of Lucerne and her aunt, Mrs. Rodolphe Piquet, center, her aunt, Mrs. DuVoisin, right, shows her guests a picture of a scene in Switzerland. (Journal photos)

Meanwhile, visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Fraham of Grant Park are their daughters-in-law, Mrs. Mary Ann Fraham and Mrs. Mary Ann Fraham, who will celebrate their 50th birthday, who will be honored.

The Swiss, who flow to New York City, arriving Aug. 10, are quick to praise the bus service which brought them to Chicago. They'll perhaps remember New York City longest as the place spent "looking up and up and up."

The visitors were deeply impressed by the friendly reception they have received everywhere and by the modern conveniences found in the homes.

Sept. 2 will mark the end of their stay at which they will return to London via the charter flight for families of Gt. Brits, which is sponsored by Transatlantic Airlines. The events leading up to the visit of Mrs. Charbon and Mrs. Piquet from Switzerland began nine years ago when Mrs. DuVoisin came to the United States for a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Mary Ann Fraham, and her son, Mr. Harry F. Fraham, who was stationed at Grant Park. In 1950, they returned to the states and lived in Blytheville, Ark., where Fraham was stationed. Then the past July, Fraham was transferred to Chamble Air Force Base at Rantoul for a training course. His wife and son are temporarily making their home with his parents in Grant Park.

The Swiss, who arrived one week ago today, enjoyed the July festival in Mokena and a tour of Chamble Air Force Base. Other 1959 events and stayed special events planned during their stay include weekend trips into

Half Million New Yorkers Swelter In Power Blackout

NEW YORK (AP)—Light flickering off in hospital operating rooms, elevator service knocked out in huge apartment buildings, packed subways, with a sweating human cargo, trapped in underground tunnels.

That was the picture as a sudden power failure struck the heart of Manhattan.

The power failure hit thousands of buildings in a 500-block section of upper Manhattan, leaving a half million people without electricity.

Adamowski Calls On Judges To Step Down

CHICAGO (AP)—State's Atty. Benjamin Adamowski has called for the resignation of two Criminal Court judges in connection with what he termed preferential treatment of certain trial lawyers.

He asked the Chicago Bar Association to investigate the court and the "remarkable" success he said five criminal lawyers enjoyed before a small circle of judges.

Adamowski for several weeks has been feuding with some Criminal Court judges. He was censured Aug. 5 by the Chicago Bar Association for his attacks on the judges.

In a news conference Monday, Adamowski said Chief Justice Abraham L. Mervin should resign because he assigned the cases in question to the judges. Judge Joseph A. Pope should step down, he said, because he pronounced so many "preferential verdicts."

Adamowski sent the bar association a 17-page letter giving his analysis of 54 cases handled by attorneys Charles A. Bellows, Harry J. Bush, Herbert Harary, George Heber and Michael Brodick. He charged they had received favored treatment.

JUDGE MERVIN had no comment, but added, "I have no intention of resigning." Judge Pope declined comment. Bellows, Blawie and Bush denied receiving any favors.

Adamowski declined to say whether he had any evidence of criminal activities by any of the judges of lawyers. Nor would he say whether he would take the matter before the grand jury.

In his letter, Adamowski said that of the 54 cases he checked, 74 of them were heard by four judges—Pope, Harold L. O'Connor, Henry L. Burman and Charles S. Dougherty.

Through delays and requests for changes of venue, said Adamowski, the lawyers managed to get their clients before these judges, usually for a bench trial.

Of the 74 cases, Adamowski said, the state won 18 times. There were 23 acquittals, 19 probation, two granted motions to quash the charges and 12 other technical decisions.

"WHAT IS EVEN more shocking is the fact that of the 74 cases, 32 of them—or almost half—were tried before Judge Pope," Adamowski wrote.

Adamowski also informed the bar association he planned to petition the Illinois Supreme Court for an order that would erase the association's recent censure of him.

The association's board of managers accused Adamowski of conduct unbecoming an attorney following his criticism of Criminal Court judges for what he said was too infrequent use of probation. He also questioned the fitness of some Criminal Court judges to hear the trial of persons indicted following a grand jury investigation of ball bond practices in Municipal Court.

Los Angeles Keeps Demo Convention

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The

power was completely restored to the area at 2:42 a.m. today, almost 13 hours after it went off.

The mercury was near 90 when power went off and the humidity was suffocating. Suddenly every intersection became a traffic jam.

Then the recovery began. In hospitals, emergency lights came on. Extra police poured into the area, straightening out the traffic.

Police sent emergency generators to Mount Sinai Hospital, where nine police patients in room from lungs depended on auxiliary power.

Subways, which have independent power but were stopped when signal lights went out, crawled as voyagers with red lanterns signaled the way was clear ahead.

Apartment dwellers began to find out how it feels to climb stairs.

Then darkness came, and New Yorkers in the stricken area saw the eerie spectacle of a city without lights.

In hospitals, they faced the problem of getting expectant mothers to delivery rooms without elevators. At least one child was delivered in the beam of a flashlight.

But New York night life went on. Bartenders bought candles by the dozen, and complained because the beer was warm.

Children, when they found the television and radio sets wouldn't work, enjoyed the novelty of seeing candle flames flickering along Broadway.

BANK VAULTS wouldn't close, and extra guards were assigned. At a radio station disc jockeys had a field day. The turntables were knocked out, so no records could be played, and the listeners were treated to one, long, continuous line of chatter.

Meanwhile 10,000 employees of the Consolidated Edison Co. labored to repair the damage to a record demand made by refrigerating and other cooling devices.

Extra police were assigned to Central Park, which stretches through the middle of the darkened area. More patrolmen walked the shadowed streets, lit only by the headlights of passing cars.

In all, 3,000 extra police were sent into the blackout area. Hours later, as power began to come back on, police reported only one burglary and one assault case.

The blacked-out section stretched across the island of Manhattan, from the Hudson River to the East River. On the West Side it ran the length of Central Park, from 96th to 110th sts., and on the East Side from 74th to 100th.

Moore served for nine years as stretched across the island of Manhattan, from the Hudson River to the East River. On the West Side it ran the length of Central Park, from 96th to 110th sts., and on the East Side from 74th to 100th.

The Moores came through to Chicago to see their new grandson, on the East Side from 74th to 100th.

Committee OKs Chicago Water Diversion Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chicago won another congressional battle in the city's efforts to divert more water from Lake Michigan into the Illinois Waterway.

The Senate Public Works Committee Monday sent to the full Senate a bill authorizing diversion of 1,000 more cubic feet per second for one year.

The current diversion rate is 1,300 c.f.s. The committee vote reportedly was 84, with one member not voting.

Canada and six Great Lakes states have opposed an increase on grounds it would harm lakes shipping and power projects.

The House already has passed the bill.

After Monday's committee action, Reps. Thomas J. O'Brien and Sidney R. Yates, two Illinois Democrats, declared that they now have strong hopes the Senate will approve the measure. They added:

"THE GOVERNMENT of Canada, with which Chicago has had such a fine relationship in the past, will reconsider and withdraw its objections in view of the amendments accepted by the committee."

One amendment would enlarge the federal study set forth in the House bill to include the amount of water in the Illinois Waterway and its tributaries, operations of the Chicago Sanitary District and currents in the northern 175 miles of Lake Michigan.

Another amendment, added by the Senate committee, specified that the bill does not indicate approval of any permanent increase in the diversion rate without prior consultation with Canada.

Last year, Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) stopped a similar bill by threatening a filibuster during the closing hours of the Congressional session.

CLAIMS RIDER TRY TO SAVE DUNES AGAIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Indiana congressman has introduced a bill to "Save the Indiana Dunes" forces of trying to annex their proposal through a back door by tacking it on to another bill.

A bill to make the dunes a national monument was killed in committee earlier this session.

Rep. Joseph W. Barr (D-Ind.) said Monday he has written the chairman of the Senate Interior Committee to urge that the Indiana Dunes area be eliminated from another bill which would authorize federal acquisition of several areas, including the dunes, as national shoreline recreational areas.

BARR SAID the shoreline proposal is "a magnificent bill," but he said the Indiana dunes should not be included in the proposal.

The Indiana Democratic House of Representatives has passed a bill that a Senate Interior subcommittee already has refused to approve a bill by Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.) which would have acquired 5,000 acres of Indiana dunes as a national monument.

The dunes lie along Lake Michigan and Indiana wants the land for development of a deep water harbor.

Retirements were served by the hostess, Mrs. George Peterson. The next meeting will be held in the parish hall on Sept. 18 with Mrs. Kenneth Rasmussen, hostess.

FUNERAL SERVICES for David Gagnon, 78, of Clifton, who died Aug. 11 were held at 9:30 a.m. Friday at St. John the Baptist Church in Clifton.

The Rev. William Brambrink of St. Peter's Catholic Church, Clifton, officiated. Burial was in Clifton American Legion Post.

Palibearers were Henry Cudde, Byron Wallace, Oscar LaMoine, Jack Jones, Sherman Caise and Larry Savoir.

DEAR DAN: I sure it is nice to have someone like you to answer our questions and problems for us. Dan, is there any state within the United States where a boy and girl can be married without having to have a birth certificate, and without parents' permission? I have a friend who plans to elope next month but I told her there was no state where she could be married at 16. Please answer as soon as possible. — D. M.

DEAR D. M.: Yes, there are states where a girl of 16 may get married and that's about all I can say on the subject. I think girls of 16 running away to get married are committing the biggest mistake of their lives. I don't know the background concerning this proposed elopement but I do think you have a moral obligation to tell the girl's parents or guardian. I don't mean to place you in the role of a tattletale but to protect your girl friend's future. If her boy friend is worthy of her love, then the two of them should wait until time and events make it right for them to be married in a church with their families present.

DEAR DAN: A couple of girl friends and I have a same problem. We've been going steady with these boys for quite some time. (The boys hang around together.) We like them very much to go steady to listen to them.

DEAR DAN: For the past several months this nice young man has lived next door to me. He is very shy. He would speak to me from a distance if he was in a crowd but otherwise, he didn't. I'm using the past tense because right now he is in the service and I would like to know how to go about meeting him. I haven't met any of his family and I don't think I could just go up to them and tell them I've been wanting to meet them since they moved to our neighborhood. I can't do that because I'm rather shy myself, especially when it comes to talking to people. By the way, the young man is about 19 and I'm 17. I will appreciate your friendly advice. Thank you. — Jackie

DEAR JACKIE: You and others in your neighborhood missed the boat when the new family moved town. What can we do so they'll ask us out more often? — Puzzled Girl

DEAR PUZZLED GIRL: There's unity in strength, you know, and with three of you in the same situation, perhaps you can work out a unified plan to make the boys spend a little money. Then again, the lack of one could have something to do with finances. To believe, however, that a plan dating steady should have at least one planned date a week, is in their next letter. The null itary service will help this boy?

DEAR DAN: About two months ago I went out with this boy and when he brought me home, he tried to kiss me. I wouldn't let him because I don't believe in kissing on the first date. I asked him if he was angry and he said he wasn't but that was at least two months ago and he hasn't spoken to me since. He does say hello once in a while when he can't avoid me but that's all. I really like him a lot and I don't know what to do to regain his friendship. He's very popular with the other girls and I'm very shy and not too popular. I always smile at him when he looks my way but he avoids me as much as he can. I really don't think I did the wrong thing in not letting him kiss me. I have a good friend who says I did. She says a good friend says makes a boy feel better. I'm not sure where she could be married at 16. Please answer as soon as possible. — D. M.

DEAR DAN: About two months ago I went out with this boy and when he brought me home, he tried to kiss me. I wouldn't let him because I don't believe in kissing on the first date. I asked him if he was angry and he said he wasn't but that was at least two months ago and he hasn't spoken to me since. He does say hello once in a while when he can't avoid me but that's all. I really like him a lot and I don't know what to do to regain his friendship. He's very popular with the other girls and I'm very shy and not too popular. I always smile at him when he looks my way but he avoids me as much as he can. I really don't think I did the wrong thing in not letting him kiss me. I have a good friend who says I did. She says a good friend says makes a boy feel better. I'm not sure where she could be married at 16. Please answer as soon as possible. — D. M.

DEAR D. M.: Yes, there are states where a girl of 16 may get married and that's about all I can say on the subject. I think girls of 16 running away to get married are committing the biggest mistake of their lives. I don't know the background concerning this proposed elopement but I do think you have a moral obligation to tell the girl's parents or guardian. I don't mean to place you in the role of a tattletale but to protect your girl friend's future. If her boy friend is worthy of her love, then the two of them should wait until time and events make it right for them to be married in a church with their families present.

DEAR DAN: A couple of girl friends and I have a same problem. We've been going steady with these boys for quite some time. (The boys hang around together.) We like them very much to go steady to listen to them.

DEAR DAN: For the past several months this nice young man has lived next door to me. He is very shy. He would speak to me from a distance if he was in a crowd but otherwise, he didn't. I'm using the past tense because right now he is in the service and I would like to know how to go about meeting him. I haven't met any of his family and I don't think I could just go up to them and tell them I've been wanting to meet them since they moved to our neighborhood. I can't do that because I'm rather shy myself, especially when it comes to talking to people. By the way, the young man is about 19 and I'm 17. I will appreciate your friendly advice. Thank you. — Jackie

DEAR JACKIE: You and others in your neighborhood missed the boat when the new family moved town. What can we do so they'll ask us out more often? — Puzzled Girl

DEAR PUZZLED GIRL: There's unity in strength, you know, and with three of you in the same situation, perhaps you can work out a unified plan to make the boys spend a little money. Then again, the lack of one could have something to do with finances. To believe, however, that a plan dating steady should have at least one planned date a week, is in their next letter. The null itary service will help this boy?
